30 NEW MILES OF TRAIL CALL FOREST HIKER

Preserves Offer Low Cost Outings.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Thirty miles of new trails will be opened in the forest preserve this morning for the benefit of those who are seeking not only health and scenic beauty but also the thrift route back to prosperity.

"Now hit the new trails back to rational living and rational expenditure," says Gen. Abel Davis, chairman of the forest preserve advisory committee, in announcing the completion of the new trails.

"In these troublous times," he continues, "the people's 33,000 acres of woodland and meadow, golf links and swimming pools are grandly proving their worth as an economic resource. Families that formerly spent a good many dollars for a week-end in the Wisconsin and Michigan summer resorts are now passing happy Sundays in the forest preserve, there getting far more exercise and spending far less money."

Large Increase in Hikers.

The astonishing increase in the number of visitors during the last three weeks of good hiking weather indicates that there will be two and a half million more visitors to the preserve this summer than last. During the months of good hiking weather last year there were more than twelve million visitors. For the same period of this year there will be nearly fifteen million.

That estimate is based on specific increases since the opening of this season and it is conservative.

At Camp Bemis, a rather isolated section of the preserve on Salt creek, on Wolf road south of 31st street, parking space was provided at the opening of this season for 350 cars. Three weeks ago today 650 cars were parked there.

The new spirit of thrift, prompting the impulse to enjoy blessings and beauties near at hand, is causing similar increases throughout the preserve from Lake county on the north to its southern extremity near the Indiana state line.

Jobless Work in Forests.

This summer Chicago's great outdoor show is bigger and brighter than ever before. Four hundred unemployed men sent to the preserve by emergency relief bodies, and paid by them, have in the last six weeks cleared the streams of driftwood, have planted 125,000 seedlings, 20,000 trees from four to ten feet high, and thousands of shrubs from one inch to two inches in diameter, and have laid out the 30 miles of new trails.

The result is that the preserve was never more beautiful and its choicest spots never before so accessible.

With today's opening of the new trails a total of 111 miles of trails awaits hikers. All trails are now marked with orange colored lozenges attached above arm's reach to trees, so that vandals cannot remove them.

Nature Does Her Part.

Nature has helped in the exhilarating work of making ready for the thrifty their all summer party. Nature's own festival decorations are hung and are warranted to last until winter. Continuous concerts are being given by the 114 species of birds native to Cook county. Robins and orioles are whistling in the groves. Bluejays are screaming—always they seem to be in a truculent state of mind about something—catbirds are mewing and mocking, and bobolinks are calling "Bob-o-link—bob-o-link—spink—spank—spink."

Little signboards have been placed along the trails. They bear the preserve's new thrift slogan. It reads:

WALKING IS THE BEST AND CHEAPEST FORM OF RECREATION.

Capt. Charles G. Sauers, general superintendent of the preserve, loves its beauties. He also loves figures—loves to be specific.

So to this summer's preserve visitors who may come from crowded areas of the city he says:

"The only equipment required for a Sunday in the preserve is legs, stout shoes, luncheon, and some car fare. The chief problem of the city pent hiker is to get to the place where the hike begins. The expenditure of money for a day with us by a family of four—husband, wife, and two children—I figure thus:

"Car fares, round trip, 80 cents. Two pounds of hamburger steak to be cooked at one of our 750 open air fireplaces, 20 cents. Coffee, also to be made in the open, 10 cents. Two

REBELS VICTORS IN CHILE; SET UP SOCIALIST STATE

Revolt Ends in Day; Army Backs Junta.

BY JOHN LIVINGSTONE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, June 4.—The government of President Juan Esteban Montero was overthrown tonight by a revolutionary junta headed by Carlos Davila, former ambassador to Washington, D. C. The revolution lasted less than a day and was without bloodshed, except for the killing of four persons and the wounding of sixty others in a riot at the presidential palace.

Señor Davila, who is expected to be proclaimed president, tonight prepared to establish a socialistic state. However, he declared it would not be a soviet government, such as Russia now has.

The junta, composed of Señor Davila, Col. Marmaduke Grove, Eugenio Matte, grand master of the Free Masons, and Gen. Puga, at 10 o'clock began to form a cabinet in the palace, which President Montero had surrendered to them a few hours earlier.

President Quits Palace.

"My régime is in complete power of the nation," Señor Davila said. "I have the backing of all armed forces. The entire country is peaceful."

President Montero left La Moneda palace for his private residence. It was authoritatively said that he had not resigned and would refuse to do so. All of Chile's old officials followed the president out of office and new officials, bearing the junta's stamp of approval, were ushered in.

The junta held a secret conference at 9 o'clock in a small room off the reception rooms in the palace. Numerous armed aids stood about, preventing a swarm of people from entering to secure a glance at the members of the new government.

Outside of the palace troops, carabineers, and officials of the Chilean air force stood guard as crowds milled about them. Thousands had congregated in the downtown streets to view the overthrow of the government, but most of them went home at 9 o'clock, the traditional dinner hour in Chile.

Oust President with Ease.

The coup d'état was accomplished with dramatic ease.

While Santiago was in an uproar after learning that the air corps, several regiments of infantry, and some sailors had rebelled and were marching on the capital from El Bosque, the army's aviation school, and San Felipe, ten miles away, a group of rebel leaders entered the city and marched unopposed to the palace. There they delivered their ultimatum to Montero and his cabinet.

The president was visibly excited. Montero sat in the palace surrounded by his cabinet.

Returns Enemy's Salute.

He silently acknowledged the salute of Col. Grove, whom he had ousted as commander of the aviation force several days ago.

"Mr. President, we have come to speak with you," Col. Grove said.

"I am listening," Montero replied.

"With the support of the civil and military elements," Col. Grove said, "we have come to establish a Republican-Socialist government. I wish to inform you that you and your family will be treated with the utmost respect by the new government, which offers you full guarantees."

Cheer Fallen Leader.

"I am already informed that the garrison of Santiago is not disposed to support my administration and consequently I cannot oppose your taking over the government," Montero exclaimed.

The president then retired to his private office. He emerged within a few moments, accompanied by a number of officials and left the palace by automobile.

As his car sped through the streets crowds cheered the fallen leader.

The capital was undefended as the rebels followed their leaders into the city. A "neutral" army stood aside as the revolutionaries swarmed into the palace. The 18,000 carabineers, who had been summoned by Montero to defend the city against an attack, offered no resistance.

Come Afoot and in Buses.

The rebel army, which stormed the palace at 6:30 o'clock, came into the city from the El Bosque airport afoot and in motor buses. It was estimated that it was about 5,000 strong.

The suddenness of the coup took the public by surprise. Crowds of citizens stood on the streets with

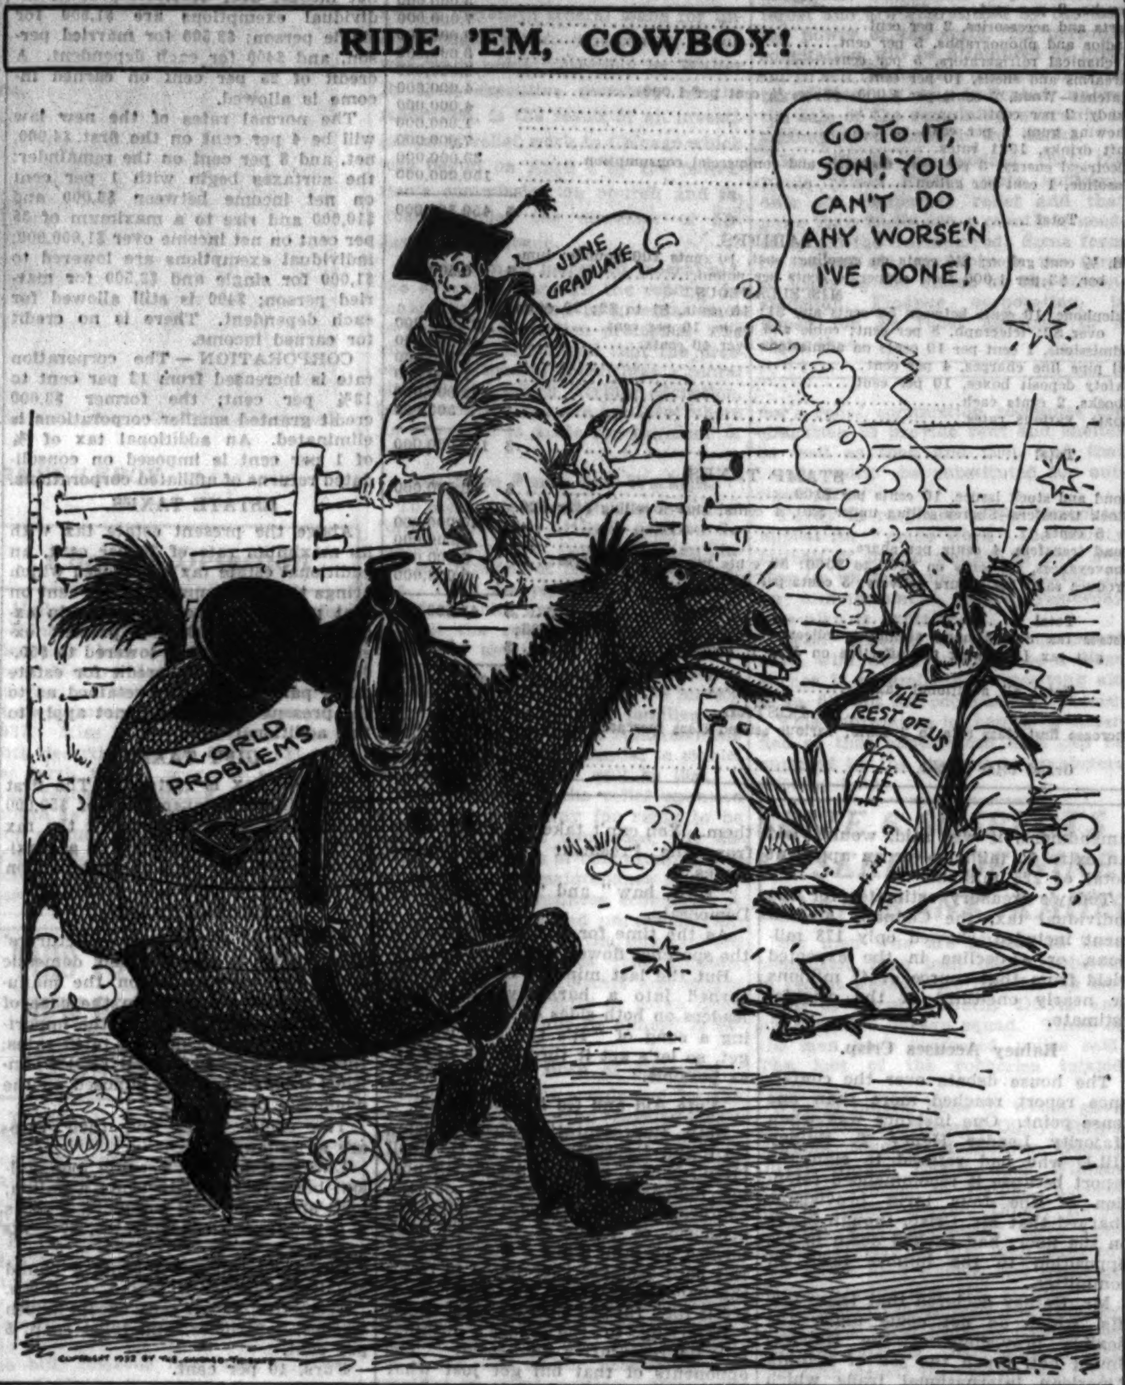
RIDE 'EM, COWBOY!



Hausner Hours Overdue on His Poland Flight

LONDON, Sunday, June 5.—[U. P.]—Stanislaus Hausner, Polish trans-Atlantic flyer, had been gone from New York 36 hours at 2:46 a. m. today [8:46 p. m. Chicago daylight saving time] without a word of his fate since he was supposed to have left the North American coast.

Although he allowed 44 hours for his attempt to fly from New York to Poland, he should have been heard from or sighted if he reached the coast of Ireland, England or France, where he was due hours ago.

Grave concern was expressed by flyers at Croydon airdrome, outside London, where an all night watch was kept with the lights turned on. The weather was rainy and it was feared Hausner might have been forced off his course and down on the Atlantic, grave of so many flyers.

WIFE PRAYS FOR HIM.

New York, June 4.—[Special.]—While his wife and parents prayed for him fear was expressed here tonight for the safety of Stanislau Hausner, long overdue on his flight to Poland.

Hausner left Floyd Bennett field at 9:46 a. m. yesterday and was last sighted heading to sea from McCallum's settlement, near Harbor Grace, 1,210 miles from New York, at 8:31 o'clock last night.

Up to the time he was sighted over Sydney, N. S., the young flyer had made but 830 miles of his total of 4,241 to Warsaw and had been out 7 hours and 45 minutes, giving him an average speed of 107.1 miles an hour.

SILENT HOLDUPS SOLVED; BANDIT DEAF AND DUMB

Herman Skedsmo, 23 years old, 1338 Cornelia avenue, who can neither speak nor hear, sat in the Oak Park police station last night and wrote out a confession of four robberies and a burglary in the last two weeks. In this document Skedsmo said his greatest handicap as a bandit was his inability to command his victims to raise their hands.

The victims included Raymond Leavitt, 213 South East avenue, Oak Park, whose loss was $10; R. E. Van Vlack, 132 South Austin avenue, $10; Clayton Sherman, 1001 Sheridan road, Evanston, who surrendered a gold watch; Miss Margaret McGuinas, 824 North Grove avenue, Oak Park, from whom a $300 diamond ring was taken, and her escort, B. Van Dusen, 814 North Grove avenue, $15.

On May 28, Skedsmo admitted, he broke into the home of J. R. Jones, 1102 North Grove avenue, Oak Park, and took $40 and clothing worth $200. He also stole Jones' car.

BIG U. S. CIGAR CONCERN SHUTS CUBAN FACTORIES

HAVANA, Cuba, June 4.—L. S. Houston, president of Henry Clay Bock & Co., Ltd., formerly notified the government today of the irrevocable decision of the company's executive board in New York to close all its cigar factories in Cuba in spite of last minute pleas by the government for reconsideration.

Factories will be immediately removed to Key West and Tampa. Houston stated the decision was taken because the company lost $30,000,000 last year. He bitterly complained of the company's inability to persuade 24,000 Cuban workers to accept a 10 per cent wage cut.

This, coupled with the law placing a $10,000 tax on cigar manufacturing machinery imported and a $10,000 annual tax on the company's machines plus alarming reductions in exports due to the high United States tariff and the low exchange rate for Spanish pesetas and the British pound, made the company's decision necessary, Houston said.

"Cuba's second source of wealth is totally ruined," Octavio Zubizarreta, secretary of interior, said.

Boy Saves His Drowning Brother in Fifth Attempt

Council Bluffs, Ia., June 4.—(AP)—Jack Rhodes, 16, today saved his brother Clayton, 8, from drowning in a deep roadside pool. When Clayton slipped in beyond his depth one of his playmates found Jack several blocks away. He sped to the pool, dived four times without success, but on the fifth attempt grasped his brother's body and pulled him to shore.

Ship Strikes Lake Michigan Island Rocks

Charlevoix, Mich., June 4.—(AP)—The freighter Morris S. Tremaine of Buffalo, with a crew of 23 and a cargo of coal, was on the rocks of South Fox island, 30 miles off this port, in Lake Michigan tonight.

Coast guard boats from three stations and two other craft were dispatched to aid the freighter, which sent out an S O S message stating that the forepeak and No. 1 hold on the starboard side were full of water. None of the rescue boats could reach the Tremaine before late tonight and none was expected back before early tomorrow morning.

Reports a Heavy Fog.

Coast guardsmen expressed the opinion that, since the water was comparatively calm, the crew was in no immediate danger. There was a heavy fog, the freighter's distress call reported.

Lifeboats went to the rescue from the station here and from North and South Manitou islands. The tug Favorite was dispatched from Sault Ste. Marie and a vessel was sent from that port to remove the cargo.

Bound for Milwaukee.

The freighter is commanded by Capt. J. J. Shemman. She left Toledo in the middle of the week with a cargo of 6,500 tons of coal for Milwaukee.

South Fox island is one of two rocky isles about midway on a direct line between the Manitous and Beaver island. Ordinarily it is occupied by a few woodchoppers, but it is believed to be deserted now. There is only a blinker light on the island and no lighthouse keeper is regularly stationed there.

BRITON PREDICTS WAGNERIAN END OF WALL STREET

MINE HEAD, Somerset, England, June 4.—(AP)—Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton, in a speech bristling with epigrams and metaphors, predicted today a Wagnerian end of Wall street.

"In Wagner's 'Götterdämmerung,' which I saw last night," said he, "Siegfried refuses to give back the gold ring stolen from the Rhine maidens. Then Valhalla is burned and the reign of the gods is at an end. Today Wall street refuses to give back to those who fought for the Rhine the enormous, flashing, world encircling golden ring they made out of the journey to the Rhine. So Wall street, in due course, will be burned."

At another point in the speech he said:

"Have you read about the march of our American comrades on Washington to get a bonus? If I were to ask you to march on Westminster for a bonus you'd all laugh, except the old Dardanellers and the South African veterans, who would weep to see me making such an ass of myself."

Borah, a Dry, Puts New Hope in G.O.P. Wets

SENATOR BORAH.

Hopes of the proponents of prohibition repeal that the Republican platform will declare flatly for resubmission of the 18th amendment to the people were strengthened yesterday by reports from Washington that Senator William E. Borah [radical Rep., Idaho] considers the danger to the plans of the dry element so serious that he may come to the Chicago convention next week to take part in the battle.

Congress will be in session during the convention according to all present indications and the Idaho senator had planned to stick on the job in Washington. The suggestion that he may change his plans and appear in Chicago as a dry battler came following a secret conference in his office with James R. Garfield who has been delegated by the Republican National committee to whip the first draft of the platform into shape.

Disagreement Is Hinted.

Senator Borah's expression, coming at that time, was construed as meaning that he and Garfield had disagreed and this was interpreted as proof that the draftsman had, at least, hinted his intention to draw up a resubmission plank.

Senator Borah is regarded as the spokesman of the prohibition faction of Washingtonian Republicans. He was the author of the strict enforcement plank included in the 1928 platform. He has repeatedly expressed hostility to any and all compromises such as resubmission and has taken the position that the proper channel for the expression of the will of the people lies in the election of members of congress.

Following his talk with Garfield, the senator was asked what sort of plank the resolutions committee would offer on the liquor question.

"I'd hate to say," he replied.

He Has Plans, You Bet!

"Have you any plans in the event you are not satisfied with the resolutions plank?" he was asked.

"You bet I have," he said so emphatically that his hearers were convinced he will jump to Chicago from the capital the moment he hears the tide of battle has turned definitely against the bone drys.

The impression in Washington that Draftsman Garfield in inclined to favor a resubmission proposal was said to have been borne out in conversations with him following conferences with a number of wet congressmen.

Mr. Garfield is going ahead with conferences of this sort, a large one being slated for the Congressional Country club today. About a dozen senators, most of them regarded as moist, will be in the party to talk with him.

Wet Senators in Party.

Among them are Senators James E. Watson [Ind.], George H. Moses [N. H.], David E. Reed [Pa.], and Hiram Bingham [Conn.], all of whom are regarded as certain to vote for a resubmission plank.

Washington dispatches say that Garfield expects to complete his poll of wet and dry strength within a few days and he then will confer with President Hoover on this and other questions involved in the preparation of the platform draft to be brought to Chicago. At that time, it is said, President Hoover will face the necessity of making clear his own position on the wet and dry question.

TWO BOYS DROWN ON FIRST WARM SCHOOL HOLIDAY

Two small boys lost their lives by drowning yesterday in the Chicago area.

Charles Morrello, 11 years old, 411 Lathrop avenue, River Forest, sank while swimming in a deep sandpit near North avenue and the River road. Robert Jones, 711 Belleforte avenue, Oak Park, who was swimming in the pool, recovered the body.

The second victim was Theodore Bresel, 8 years old, 1133 Wilcox street, Hammond, son of a policeman. He drowned in the Maywood park lagoon in Hammond. John Fikora, 8 years old, who saw him sink, summoned help and the body was recovered soon afterward.

Fair and warm weather, with a maximum temperature about like yesterday's, will prevail in Chicago today and tomorrow, according to the official forecast last night. Forecaster W. P. Day said a continuance of the warm weather until the middle of the week is likely.

The highest thermometer reading yesterday was 84 at 5 p. m. and the lowest 66 at 7 a. m.

SLASH IS 10%; SALARIES UNDER $1,000 EXEMPT

Expected to Save 117 Millions.

Tax Wins in House

House of representatives gives final approval to income tax bill by acceptance of conferees' committee's agreement. Senate to act on measure tomorrow. Story on page 2.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 4.—[Special.]—After its leisurely loafing over the economy bill the senate today took eight votes on amendements to the 10 per cent slash of government salaries and finally, by a vote of 38 to 27, snipped off ten per cent from the wages of all federal employés excepting the enlisted men and civilians who get less than a thousand dollars a year. The saving to the government by this salary cut is $117,000,000.

This exemption for the little fellow with an income of under a thousand was proposed as an amendment to the committee amendment by Senator Tydings [Dem., Md.] just before the final vote on the salary scissors and was passed by a vote of 34 to 29.

Will Save 117 Millions.

The savings contemplated under the committee's 10 per cent flat cut proposal was 121 million dollars. In submitting his amendment providing for a $1,000 exemption, Senator Tydings asserted that it would reduce this total by not more than 4 millions, which if he proves accurate, brings the savings to be realized from the pay cut plan finally adopted to something like 117 millions.

Seven other amendments, directed either at easing the burden of the government's small wage earner or increasing the burden of the government's large salaried employé, were voted down.

Defeat Greater Exemptions.

Senator Johnson [Rep., Cal.] wanted to exempt from any cut yearly salaries of $2,500 and under. His proposal was defeated by a vote of 25 to 51.

Senator Norris [radical Rep., Neb.] sponsored an amendment allowing a flat $1,500 exemption on all salaries, and providing for a graduated scale of reductions beginning at five per cent for that part of a salary above $1,500 to $2,500, and rising to a 25 per cent slash on salaries above $7,500. This was beaten by a vote of 20 to 54.

Senator Walsh [Dem., Mass.] offered an amendment placing the exemption at $1,000, and graduating the cuts from 5 per cent on salaries from $1,000 to $1,500, and going up to 15 per cent for salaries above $10,000. Such a schedule, he declared, would effect a saving of 90 millions as against the 121 millions calculated to result from the committee proposition. A vote of 28 to 39 sent this to defeat.

25 Per Cent Cuts Beaten.

A vote of 22 to 40 defeated the amendment of Senator Thomas [Dem., Okla.], which would place the exemption at $1,200, and bring the cut on salaries above $10,000 to up to 25 per cent.

Another plan to cut more deeply into the pay of the higher salaried government employé, that of Senator Connally [Dem., Tex.] wielded a ten per cent knife on all salaries up to $5,000 and slashed a 25 per cent knife into salaries above $10,000, with proportionate cuts in between the two levels. It went down to defeat, 14 to 52.

Once again Senator Norris introduced an amendment, this time to cut incomes under $2,000 five per cent, others 10 per cent. It failed, 23 to 41.

Senator Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.] offered an amendment guaranteeing that no compensation would be reduced below $1,200; but this was defeated viva voce.

Senators Doubtful of Meaning.

Then came Senator Tydings' amendment, which was passed. As soon as it was passed there was considerable confusion among the senators as to whether it meant that no salary now under a thousand dollars a year should be cut or whether no cut should be made which would reduce a salary to less than a thousand.

The reading clerk announced that the senate had passed the first proposition. This results in the following bit of irony: The man now getting a thousand a year is cut 10 per cent, to $900; which the man now receiving $999 a year would keep intact.

As soon as the committee had passed the general 10 per cent proviso with the Tydings amendment, Senator Moses [Rep., N. H.] gave notice that he intends to offer an entire substitute, wiping out salary cuts and putting in their places the furlough without pay system of economy. This will be taken up Monday following senate action on the conference report on the tax bill.

SENATE GETS HOOVER BILL

Washington, D. C., June 4.—[Special.]—Lines were clearly drawn today in the fight between the Democrats and President Hoover over relief legislation when Senator W. W. Barbour [Rep., N. J.] introduced the administration's unemployment relief bill. This measure differs from the Garner-Wagner relief bills in that it carries no funds for federal public works construction and leaves the question of direct federal relief through loans to states and cities to a separate bill.

The Barbour-administration bill would add one billion 500 million dollars to the borrowing power of the Reconstruction Finance corporation. These funds would be loaned to states, municipalities, public agencies, or private corporations for financing the construction of "sound profit making projects" which would provide employment.

Would Finance Marketing.

The corporation also would be authorized to make loans for carrying and marketing of staple commodities. In addition the administration bill would allocate 50 million dollars to the federal farm board so that organization be enabled to loan more of the taxpayers' money to coöperative associations and stablization corporations.

The finance corporation also would be asked to allow the agriculture department to utilize as much as 50 million dollars in financing the exportation of agricultural commodities produced in the United States.

Would Pay for Coast Aqueduct.

Although the administration bill, which is sponsored by Secretary of the Treasury Mills, does not carry funds for "pork barrel" public works projects, it does provide for loans to organizations like the Los Angeles metropolitan water district, which is trying to persuade Uncle Sam to follow up his Boulder dam gift by paying the expense of piping the water to the consumers.

"This bill would require," Senator Barbour said today, "that all loans be fully and adequately secured and the project must be one which would yield sufficient revenues to be self-sustaining."

10% PAY CUT PLAN TO BE PUT UP TO STREET CAR MEN

Contracts, which are understood to include a 10 per cent wage reduction, will be submitted to 12,000 trainmen and other employés of the Surface Lines, it was indicated yesterday following an announcement of company and union officials that there would be no further conferences pending a meeting of the men. The present contract expired on May 31.

Although both sides have persisted in a policy of utmost secrecy regarding the negotiations, it was indicated that a 10 per cent reduction would be acceptable to both. On a basis of decreased earnings, the company originally sought a 15 per cent reduction, it was reported. No change is anticipated in the working conditions.

Contracts between the Rapid Transit company and its 3,000 employés also expired on May 31. Preliminary negotiations have been held, but no settlement is to be made pending the outcome of negotiations by the surface lines group.

BOMB EXPLODED AT SOUTH BEND BENDIX PLANT

South Bend, Ind., June 4.—[Special.]—A bomb of crude manufacture was exploded tonight at the north side of the Bendix-Stromberg plant, where the majority of the carburetors used in American airplanes are manufactured. The blast, which shattered a number of windows, is believed to have been set off by two men who were seen fleeing in an automobile.

Executives of the company, which is headed by Vincent Bendix, Chicago millionaire, are said to have received threats recently. John Mahoney, plant manager, according to the police, was told his children were to be kidnaped and two other executives have taken out permits to carry pistols. Guards as the Mahoney home were mistaken by the police several weeks ago for kidnapers and were fired on. They returned the fire, but no one was hurt.

It was said there had been no labor troubles at the Bendix plant.

HOUSE PASSES BILLION DOLLAR REVENUE BILL

Senate Agrees to Vote on It Monday.

Washington, D. C., June 4.—[Special.]—The new tax bill received the final approval of the house of representatives today.

Only the approval of the senate and the signature of the President are now required to turn the bill into a law expected to take from the taxpayers 1 billion 118 millions of additional revenue and to balance the budget at the end of the fiscal year 1933.

The senate is scheduled to take action next Monday. Consideration was deferred today in order to give the economy bill right of way and because of the absence of Senator Reed Smoot [Rep., Utah], finance committee chairman, who was reported as being worn out from the long job of pushing the tax bill through.

Vote Without Roll Call.

Today's house action on the tax bill consisted of an agreement to the report of the conference committee which reconciled the differences between the bill as passed by the house and by the senate.

That agreement was given without the formality of a roll call. And because of the agreement no separate votes were possible under the rules on proposals to restore the sales tax which the house radical revolt previously had stricken out and to eliminate the tariffs on oil, coal, lumber and copper which the house and senate joined in putting in.

For many, perhaps a majority, of the house members from veteran leaders down to first termers the vote was an approval of a bill which no one thoroughly approved, which all admitted was a makeshift.

Passed Under Necessity.

It was passed as "the best bill we can get," under protest, and only because of the necessity of balancing the budget.

The many advocates of the sales tax protested to the last.

Representative Charles R. Crisp [Dem., Ga.], who acted as chairman of the ways and means committee during the bill's preparation and who presented the conference report to the house, declared that he had always thought that the sales tax was "the best tax."

"I still think so," he declared, "and when the country feels the pinch of these burdensome selected sales taxes which had to be put in when the sales tax went out, the country will think so, too."

Member after member denounced the long list of special excise taxes which are now counted on to raise the revenue the general manufacturers' sales tax would have yielded.

"Awful" to "Frightful."

Representative Harold McGugin [Rep., Kas.] said that the excise taxes "would rob the people and bleed industry."

Representative Grant E. Mouser Jr. [Rep., O.] said that the tax bill when it left the house was "awful"; and now, coming back to the house, it was "frightful."

The only one who appeared more than half pleased was Representative F. H. La Guardia [radical Rep., N. Y.], who led the original revolt against the sales tax. In his "fondest dreams" Mr. La Guardia had never dared hope for such high surtaxes, estate, and gift taxes.

"This bill," he said, cheerfully, "balances the budget with a vengeance."

Representative Fred A. Britten [Rep., Ill.] stormed to his feet.

"That is the first time," he declared, "that I ever heard of levying taxes for the purposes of vengeance, just as it is the first time I have ever heard house leaders apologize for a bill at the same time that they urged its passage."

Ball Game Hurries Vote.

There would have been no debate at all had the house members had their way. The session opened to yells of "Vote, vote," for the legislators wished to get away to the ball game between teams from the Republican and Democratic sides. At one time it took the services of the sergeant-at-arms to quell the unofficial debaters in the rear of the chamber.

Opening the discussion, Mr. Crisp told how the continued downward trend had made it necessary for the treasury to revise its estimate of the expected deficit at the end of 1933. Instead of 1,241 millions, the deficit is now expected to be 1,476 millions. He told how, in the same way, it had been necessary to revise the estimates of the yield from the new tax bill and in its final senate stage to write into the measure 275 millions in new taxes to make up the loss.

Income Tax Shrinks 247 Millions.

How the continued decline had affected income tax expectations was shown in the latest treasury estimates for the revenue measure. Prior to the senate's eleventh hour adoption of the Connally amendment, providing for approximately the 1922 rates, it was estimated that the bill would raise an additional 155 millions of individual income taxes. The Connally amendment, it was said, would yield an extra 70 millions—or an apparent total of 225 millions.

Today's treasury estimates for the individual tax, the Connally amendment included, showed only 178 millions, or a decline in the expected yield from that source of 47 millions or nearly one-third of the original estimate.

Rainey Accuses Crisp.

The house debate over the conference report reached more than one tense point. One instance was when Majority Leader Henry T. Rainey [Ill.], who had refused to sign the report because it recommended retention of the four tariff provisions, charged that Mr. Crisp, though brave on the floor, had backed down in his opposition to the lumber tariff in committee.

Mr. Rainey declared that these tariffs, which do not come under the flexible provisions of the Hawley-Smoot act, finish the job of ruining American international trade which the Hawley-Smoot act had all but accomplished. Foreign countries were already preparing retaliatory measures, he said; Canada was talking of refusing to sign the St. Lawrence waterway agreement as retaliation for the lumber tariff.

"I may be the last Democrat," Mr. Rainey concluded, "but I'm going to be a Democrat to the last."

Try to Give Hoover Credit.

To add to the general disorder that continued to prevail, it took only the proclamation of Representative Allen T. Treadway [Rep., Mass.] that to President Hoover should go the credit for insisting on a balanced budget. Loud "haw, haws" burst from the Democratic side.

"That is a fine laugh," shouted Mr. Treadway, "coming from men anxious to raid the public treasury on behalf of a possible presidential candidate."

He referred, of course, to the vote of the house Democrats' caucus last night to support the Garner "pork barrel" relief bill.

"The trouble is there aren't enough on the Republican side who'll tell you Democrats where to get off," Mr. Treadway boomed on. "But I'm willing to at all times and this is one of them. You can't take the credit away from the President of the United States."

"Haw, haw" and "boo" went the Democrats.

As the time for voting drew nearer the speeches flowed thicker and faster.

But the last minutes of the debate turned into a harmony duet, with leaders on both sides of the aisle singing a song of "It's the best we can get, so let's get it through as quickly as possible."

Vote Aid and Go to Ball Game.

Both Representative Crisp [Dem., Ga.] and Representative B. H. Snell [Rep., N. Y.], minority leader, in urging nonpartisan indorsement of the conference report, used the identical criticism of parts of it when they termed certain items "indefensible." But both declared they hated to think the harm they might do to the country if they further delayed their okay.

Referring to the house's original bill, Representative Snell said: "The opponents of that bill got just what we told them they'd get, that is, a manufacturers' excise tax, but I tremble to think what would happen if the news went abroad that we had failed to do our duty. Let's pass this right now."

Representative Crisp, making the closing speech briefly, urged the immediate adoption of the report.

There was a call for a vote. The ayes boomed forth mightily. The noes made quite a noise. "The ayes seem to have it," declared Representative John J. O'Connor [Dem., N. Y.], who was presiding. A moment, then he added, "The ayes have it; the conference report is agreed to," and amid a great clatter of satisfaction at the completion of the job the house adjourned to go to the ball game.

We take pleasure in announcing the sale of one of the most perfect Antonius Stradivarius violins extant to the distinguished concert artist,

ISADOR BERGER

The violin is the famous "Dancla" Stradivarius of the year 1710, which was acquired by Wurlitzers through the purchase of the Wanamaker Collection. The history of the instrument is very colorful, it having been used by many of the world's greatest artists of the past generation. It takes its name from the master, Charles Dancla (1818-1907), head of the violin department of the Paris Conservatoire, who used the instrument throughout his career. Experts will find no other place in Chicago where instruments of such importance are to be found.

Digest of New Federal Revenue Bill to Add Millions to Income of Nation

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 4.—[Special.]—The following is a digest of the most important provisions of the new tax bill which is expected to become law early next week and which is looked to for 1,115 millions of additional revenue:

INCOME TAXES.

INDIVIDUAL—The present law imposes a normal rate of 1½ per cent on the first $4,000 of net income; 3 per cent on the next $4,000, and 5 per cent on the remainder; the present surtaxes begin with 1 per cent on net income between $10,000 and $14,000 and rise to a maximum of 20 per cent on net income over $100,000; present individual exemptions are $1,500 for single person; $3,500 for married person, and $400 for each dependent. A credit of 25 per cent on earned income is allowed.

The normal rates of the new law will be 4 per cent on the first $4,000, net, and 8 per cent on the remainder; the surtaxes begin with 1 per cent on net income between $6,000 and $10,000 and rise to a maximum of 55 per cent on net income over $1,000,000; individual exemptions are lowered to $1,000 for single and $2,500 for married person; $400 is still allowed for each dependent. There is no credit for earned income.

GIFT TAXES.

The gift tax is restored. The first $10,000 above an exemption of $50,000 is taxed at ¾ of 1 per cent; the tax is then graduated upward to a maximum of 33½ per cent on that portion of net gifts in excess of $10,000,000.

JUDGES TO VOTE TUESDAY ON PAY CUT OF 48 DAYS

An opinion that the Democratic judges of the Municipal court will vote in the judges' meeting on Tuesday to ratify the pay reduction of 48 days contained in the budget submitted to the city council last Friday was expressed yesterday by court attachés. Other city employés are taking a 78 day pay cut.

Mayor Cermak has urged the Democratic judges to concur in his economy program. If the 18 Democratic judges vote solidly for the cut all the 19 Republican judges will have to dissent to keep their salaries intact.

2 FLYERS DIE WHEN PLANE CRASHES, BURNS

Minneapolis, Minn., June 4.—[Special.]—Two Twin City aviators plunged to death today near Robinsdale airport. Their plane, an Eagle Rock open cockpit biplane with a Wright whirlwind J-5 motor climbed 150 feet and then plunged into a plowed field and burst into flames.

The victims were Oscar Knudson of Minneapolis, believed to have been the pilot, and Edward B. Stearn of St. Paul, owner of the biplane. Stearn recently had been employed as pilot for L. J. Shields, owner of the National Battery company. He has been married a year.

Knudson, also married, had been an aviator mechanic since 1925.

Witnesses of the crash were unable to asign any reason for the crash. The ship, after rising steeply to about 150 feet, slipped into a "wingover" and plunged nose down in a power dive.

REPUBLICANS WAR ON "BLUE BLOOD" RULE IN GERMANY

Fate of Nation Now Before the People.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, June 4.—The Socialists, backbone of the German republican system, tonight launched a "battle to the finish" with "the people" massed on one side and the "monocled aristocracy of barons and haughty squires" on the other.

The challenge was issued after the new "feudal government" of Franz von Papen, the former kaiser's war agent in the United States, proclaimed its policies. The proclamation scathingly attacked parliamentary democracy and accused the republican government of weakening the moral forces of the nation.

The proclamation was issued after President von Hindenburg's decree dissolving the reichstag was published.

Take Up Challenge.

The Socialists at once went into action. Through their organ, Vorwaerts, the "blue stockinged" challenge was answered as follows:

"This proclamation is a declaration of war. The battle between the barons and the people must be fought to the end. Only after the haughty squires are definitely beaten will real unity of the people be obtainable."

Political observers agree that "anything may happen." It is conceded that the political future of the German republic is at stake. "Germany is returning to the era of blackest reaction," the republicans insist. Some see in the not far distant future the return of the Hohenzollerns—perhaps not the exiled kaiser, but possibly a regency under Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm.

Many predict a Fascist Germany with Adolf Hitler, the small but fiery Nazi leader, wielding the scepter of power.

Hindenburg Rumor Denied.

It was even rumored today that President von Hindenburg will step aside on his 85th birthday in October to make room for the former crown prince—a rumor which official circles were quick to deny.

The Von Papen government did not set the date for the reichstag elections, which must be held within sixty days. Meanwhile the feudal régime will rule by decree as a dictatorship.

The omission of a definite date for new elections in the decree dissolving the reichstag, or any reference to elections, has given fresh impetus to the rumor that the new government may attempt to evade the constitutional requirements for balloting within sixty days.

According to the rumor, the government will forcibly carry on under the presidential rule until fall, and then convoke a so-called national assembly whose function will be to change the Weimar constitution to permit the president to be superseded by a regent.

Today's proclamation was aimed with terrific force at all liberal forces which have been chiefly in power since "Fritz" Ebert, the saddle maker, took over the republic after the downfall of the monarchy.

Make No Promises.

"The new government makes no promises," it began. "It will act and wishes to be judged on the strength of its actions."

The proclamation next declared that the government was taking office in the "gravest hour of the nation's history, for which the Versailles treaty, the world economic crisis and mismanagement by parliamentary democracy are responsible."

The proclamation then goes on as follows:

"On assuming responsibility we find the financial foundations of the reich, Prussia and a majorit yof the states and communes badly shaken. Reforms are necessary to assure Germany's recovery—administrative and financial reforms. Adjustment of state's expenditures to the poverty of the nation have had only embryonic starts. Social insurance funds are on the verge of bankruptcy. The steadily increasing unemployment has corroded the best strength of the German people.

"The German cabinets in power since the war have believed that state socialism could shoulder the responsibility for employer and worker. They turned the state into a welfare institution and thus weakened the moral strength of the nation.

Must Stop "Bolshevism."

"They made the state asume duties for which it was not meant and thereby increased unemployment. This moral undermining of the German people, coupled with the bolshevism which is poisoning the moral fiber of the nation, must be stopped.

"Christian forces of the state were lax and made compromises too easily with the atheistic Marxist element invading the cultural centers of the country. Now we must unite our forces which are willing to reconstruct Germany on the basis of immutable Christian philosophy.

"The government is aware of its great responsibility to God and the nation and realizes where its duty lies. It will not hesitate to carry on a fight for the vital foundations of the nation, especially for the working population of the land and city.

"To enable the reich to continue its financial operations next week, the government is compelled to decree some measures prepared by the previous government.

"In foreign affairs we will have to deal with the big problems of disarmament, reparations and the general economic crisis. Germany's vital interests are at stake. Our aim is to achieve equal rights and political freedom with the possibility of economic recovery for the fatherland in peaceful coöperation with other countries.

"Only an unfettered and economically sound Germany, endowed with equal rights with other nations can contribute to the restoration of the world.

"The recovery of the world can be achieved only if the exchange of moneys, capital, and goods is freed from the economic fetters which are upsetting the world at present. The government is ready to coöperate with all efforts in this direction.

A New Germany Urged.

"A foreign policy useful to the national interest of Germany can be built up only if the internal situation is absolutely clear. That is why the president has agreed with the government's request to dissolve the reichstag.

"The German nation is confronted with the necessity of deciding which leaders it will follow in the future. The government will fight for moral and economic recovery for the rebirth of a new Germany."

All political parties have called their members together to prepare for a realignment of forces for the reichstag election, taking into consideration the return into prominence of the junker and militaristic elements.

Meanwhile, Von Hindenburg, in his conversations today with all political leaders, citizens and diplomats, said: "I will not allow a single action which could be interpreted as a violation of the constitution of the republic."

A Turning Point.

BERLIN, June 4.—[U.P.]—Today's proclamation by the new Franz von Papen government was regarded by political experts as a turning point for Germany. For the first time in the history of the republic a government has declared in principle that it is opposed to parliamentary democracy, outlining a program which, if carried out literally, would mean the abolition in spirit, if not to the letter, of the Weimar constitution creating the republic.

Regardless of whether the new régime maintains an outward form of a parliamentary republic or adopts a dictatorship or a monarchy, it means the people will be asked to decide in the election whether they desire a régime departing from the Weimar constitution and emulating the Fascist model.

In view of the mood of the electorate, reflected in Adolf Hitler's recent series of triumphs, a majority might be expected to declare themselves in favor of Hitler.

The public appeared unruffled by today's declaration. The streets were normal and the railway stations crowded with the usual number of week enders. Police headquarters in Berlin and Hamburg said everything was quiet, although disturbances may be expected when the election campaigns open immediately after the date of the voting is set, probably on Monday.

The government officially warned the press to cease attacks on Von Papen because of his wartime activities in the United States, from which he was expelled for plotting. The government said it was "determined to proceed ruthlessly against such political poisoning."

Communist headquarters at Flensburg were closed today and nine members arrested. Communist branches in Bremen were searched and documents seized "on suspicion of high treason."

FIND MAN DEAD IN HOME.

Michael Ryczko, 43 years old, 1458 Blackhawk street, was found dead yesterday in the basement of his home. Police said he had been dead for several days, apparently of heart disease.

EDNA MURPHY. MERVYN LEROY.

Charges Desertion

Hollywood, Cal., June 4.—[Special.]—Edna Murphy, blond screen actress, filed suit here today for a divorce from Mervyn Leroy, motion picture director. The couple were married at an elaborate ceremony in December, 1927. Miss Murphy charges Leroy with deserting her in May, 1931. She set forth that a property settlement was reached, granting her $1,000 a month as long as Leroy's present motion picture salary of $1,750 a month continues, and if his salary is reduced, the wife is to accept a proportionate reduction.

BRITAIN, ITALY SIGN PLEDGE TO PAY WAR DEBTS

Agree to Ten Annual Installments.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 4.—[Special.]—Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British ambassador, called at the treasury today and in the presence of Secretary of the Treasury Mills signed the moratorium extension agreement whereby the British government agrees to pay the 159 million dollar war debt payment postponed this year over a ten year period beginning July 1, 1933.

SIR RONALD LINDSAY.

Ambassador Lindsay was followed almost immediately by Nobile Fiacoma de Martino, the Italian ambassador, and he, too, affixed his signature to an agreement whereby Italy repays her postponed payment over a ten year period. Secretary of the Treasury Mills signed for the United States in both instances. Previously Germany, Finland, Greece, and Hungary had signed similar agreements. France is expected to fall into line next week.

The British postponed payment plus interest at 4 per cent amounts to $159,520,000. It will be paid in ten annual installments of $19,441,530. Italy's postponed payment plus interest is $14,706,125, and her annual installment will be $1,792,311. These annual payments will be made in addition to the regular war debt payments due during those years.

At the time the German war debts and reparations moratorium was signed each of the powers verbally promised to repay the postponed payment for 1931 over a term of years but no agreement was signed. Several weeks ago the state department asked the powers to sign agreements binding them to repay the postponed installments on their war debts.

THIS TOWN HAS NO NEW POSTOFFICE AND IT DOESN'T WANT ONE

Tuxedo, N. Y., June 4.—[Special.]—Tuxedo needs no new postoffice, does not want a new postoffice, but is about to have one thrust upon it unless the terms of the Garner relief bill can be altered before passage.

In the Garner bill there is an item of $70,000 for a federal building for Tuxedo. The town is in Orange county, part of the district represented by Hamilton Fish of Garrison. When the appropriation for it was placed in the bill, however, Mr. Fish had not consulted the Tuxedoans.

They learned about it from the newspapers. An employé of the Tuxedo Park association read it and hurried to see S. Sloan Colt, president of the Bankers Trust company and of the Tuxedo Park association. He told Mr. Colt what he had read and Mr. Colt said he would wire Mr. Fish to withdraw the item. The congressman has been informed, in effect, that a joke may be carried too far.

The idea of removing the present structure of native stone and building in its place something concocted by an architect in the postoffice department at Washington is painful to the residents of Tuxedo, who take a good deal of pride in the appearance of the community and spend a considerable amount of money keeping it the way they want it.

CITY'S CHURCHES URGE U. S. FUNDS FOR POOR RELIEF

Survey Report Points to Evils of Unpaid Rent.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

The Chicago Church federation, representing 850 churches in 19 denominations, has officially adopted a report asking increased federal loans for unemployment relief. The report, which was made public yesterday by Walter R. Mee, executive secretary of the federation, is the result of an investigation of relief work in Chicago which was begun on April 4 by the federation's commission on church and industry under the direction of Dr. James Mullenbach.

In addition to increased federal aid, the churches, through the report, demand that attention be given at once to rental and eviction problems. The church leaders contend that the present rent situation constitutes a moral situation in which "lying, deception, fraud, and stealing are manifest where no provision is made for payment of rent."

Ask More Funds and Workers.

To meet this situation, the churches' formal statement of their position demands increased funds and an increased number of trained case workers. They assert, however, that the relief agencies are "doing a splendid job on the relatively small amount of money available." Unless federal loans soon bring greatly augmented income, the report declares, the morale of both communities and families will break down and "those fundamentals that are absolutely essential to stable, well-ordered society" will be lost.

"The failure of the relief agencies to provide some way for rents to be paid," the report continues, "is destroying the sense of obligation that is essential to the maintenance of a society based on business economy. A sense of injustice and unfair discrimination is created in the mind of the landlord who realizes that grocers, milk men, coal merchants and others are being paid directly or given credit by the fund, while he himself is exploited."

Reveals Fraud Born of Necessity.

The investigation conducted by the federation's commission revealed many means of obtaining gas and electric service without payment by families who have been cut off for nonpayment. It pointed to ways of tapping gas mains and told of "by passes" which are set up to direct electric current around meters.

Coal is stolen from yards or coal cars, the report says. In one instance, it declares, an organized arrangement was set up to rob coal cars and sell the stolen coal to buy necessities not provided by relief stations. Not until one of the men had been fired on 15 times by railroad police did he desist.

Joseph L. Moss, director of the public welfare department of Cook county, in commenting on the church commission's findings, admitted that it is difficult to get enough trained workers to administer relief even if adequate relief were possible.

"Something must be done about rent," said Mr. Moss. "On the present basis, rent would add 50 per cent to our relief fund disbursements, which now reach $3,500,000 each month."

Five Recommendations Made.

Five specific recommendations are made in the churches' report for meeting relief problems. The first is insistence on the need for increased funds, the second is that the source of new income should be federal funds; and the third is that the number of case workers be increased. The other recommendations are that "the governor's relief commission recognize the obligation to provide rent and shelter as well as food and fuel, and that 'made work' be substituted for outright gifts."

Partly in response to the churches' appeal for "made work" the county bureau of public welfare is now setting up unemployment exchanges. In an announcement issued yesterday this plan is explained.

Each person, the announcement says, who would normally be a wage earner in a family now receiving aid is to fill out an occupational record. This information is then to be classified so that experienced men can be supplied by the stations to employers needing help.

SELL $100,000 MORE OF STATE WARRANTS FOR RELIEF OF POOR

Further sales of state tax anticipation warrants to the amount of $100,000, added to the $4,077,500 pledged by Chicago banks and business leaders on Friday, yesterday gave added assurance that emergency poor relief stations in Cook county will continue open at least to Aug. 1.

Philip R. Clarke, president of the Central Bank and Trust company, chairman of the Friday meeting, announced that the remainder of the state warrants, $2,072,500, are to be sold by loop banks or the offices of the emergency relief commission, 10 South La Salle street.

The public is asked to take these securities, which bear 6 per cent interest and are guaranteed by the taxing power of the state. No personal solicitation will be attempted at present to sell them. This measure may be taken later, it was indicated, unless the sale of the remaining warrants is accomplished through the banks.

Mr. Clarke emphasized that the funds raised Friday were sufficient only for temporary relief and that more than $3,000,000 a month is needed to aid the unemployed. Some form of federal aid, probably in the form of loans to the states by the Reconstruction Finance corporation, is hoped for by relief agencies in a short time.

SEIZE 6 SUSPECTS IN SERIES OF NINE LOAN BANK RAIDS

Six men who are alleged to have committed nine loan bank robberies in recent weeks were rounded up last night by Sergt. Timothy Dwyer and his detective bureau squad. Three of the men have confessed, police said. The loot of the robberies totaled $10,000.

The prisoners, none of whom gave an address, are George Dilley, Ralph Trimble, Sinclair McInerney, George Oliver, Daniel Castle, and William Trimble, brother of Ralph. According to Sergt. Dwyer, Dilley, Ralph Trimble and McInerney have confessed. Oliver, the first man arrested, was seized at 8 o'clock last night at Racine avenue and 51st street.

The places robbed were the Citizens' Loan bank, 6240 Cottage Grove avenue; the Citizens' Loan bank at 1625 East 79th street; the Community Loan bank at 721 East 63d street; the Household Finance corporation, 9130 Commercial avenue; the Citizens' Loan bank at 6306 South Halsted street, and the W. R. Ernst bank at 718 East 63d street. Three of the banks were robbed twice. The total loot in the nine robberies amounted to $10,000.

Evanston Salesman Found Dying in His Automobile

Charles E. Reeder, 47 years old, a salesman, was found unconscious last evening in a private garage in the rear of 929 Sherman avenue, Evanston. The motor of his car was not running, but the ignition was on. Reeder died shortly afterward at St. Francis' hospital. Dr. David Hedberg, Evanston police physician, said that Reeder probably died of a heart attack. Reeder lived at the Elmgate hotel, 823 Main street, Evanston, with his wife, Nellie.

E. B. SHAW DIED PENNILESS, HIS LAWYER REVEALS

E. Bogardus Shaw, retired broker who accidentally fell to his death from the fire escape landing of his thirteenth floor apartment at 1120 Lake Shore drive on May 29, died penniless, it was revealed yesterday by Mr. Shaw's attorney, Edward N. D'Ancona.

"Mr. Shaw left no estate whatever," the attorney said. "My information comes from a member of the family. There will be no necessity for Mrs. Shaw to go into the Probate court."

Mr. Shaw was 66 years old. For many years he had been active on the Chicago Stock exchange, but two years ago he gave up his office, although he retained his exchange membership. At the time of his death his widow, Mrs. Charlotte Shaw, told police that her husband had been in financial difficulties. His brother, Walden W. Shaw of Pasadena, Cal., one of the founders of the Yellow Cab company, had assisted him with loans, Mrs. Shaw stated.

SEEK MOTIVE FOR SUICIDE.

Charles Rome, 50 years old, 2241 North Rockwell street, hanged himself yesterday in the garage behind his home. Police could find no reason for the suicide.

RICH AMERICAN CLUBMAN ENDS HIS LIFE IN PARIS

PARIS, June 4.—George H. Howard Jr., 41, prominent San Francisco club man, committed suicide at a small hotel in a fashionable quarter of Paris early today.

Returning to his room after midnight Friday, Howard scribbled several notes to his family and friends and fired a pistol shot into his brain. One of the notes indicated unrequited love was the motive for his act. Another requested that his body be cremated and his ashes scattered over San Francisco. Howard's parents are prominent in Parisian society. They are now at Aix-les-Bains. The note to his mother said:

"Life is a very funny thing. Enjoy is to the full and forget any unpleasantness. All love to all who care."

The body was found by Howard's valet stretched out on the floor with a new automatic, apparently purchased recently, lying by his side.

WOMEN AT BIG CONVENTIONS TO ASK REAL WORK

Weary of Flowers; Want Good Jobs.

By GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

Washington, D. C., June 4.—[Special.]—Not posies but power, is the demand of the women who will attend the national political conventions soon to be held in Chicago.

MRS. ELLIS A. YOST.

Whether they go as party delegates to their Republican or Democratic conventions or whether as bi-partisan lobbyists they march on both parleys, the ladies are united on one thing: They are weary of flowers. The lobbyists crave an opportunity to wield the pencil that writes some of the platform planks.

Just how successful will be this feminine fight for masculine recognition is still a matter of great uncertainty. But already both groups, the party and the bi-partisan, are mobilizing here in Washington.

Mrs. Ellis A. Yost, director of the women's division of the Republicans, and former Gov. Nellie Tayloe Ross, who holds a similar position at the Democratic headquarters are busy vieing each other in promising the women of their party a square deal at Chicago.

Point to Present Honors.

No sooner does Mrs. Yost praise Republican recognition of women by recalling that at the convention four years ago, Mabel Willebrandt was a member of the important credentials committee, than Mrs. Ross pays tribute to Democratic fairness by announcing that Mrs. Jean Whittemore, a delegate from Porto Rico, will be a member of the important resolutions committee this year.

When the Democrats rejoice that one of their delegates is to be Sarah Schuyler Butler, daughter of President Nicholas Murray Butler, the Republicans shout back that their most important visitor in Chicago is to be Mrs. Dolly Gann, sister of Vice President Curtis. New York's G. O. P. says —"look, one of our delegates is Ruth Baker Pratt, a United States representative." Arkansas' Democracy answer back, "Look, we're sending Hattie Caraway a United States senator."

The Republicans mention Mrs. William Tudor Gardiner, wife of the governor of Maine; the Democrats talk of Chicago's Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, prominent writer. Mrs. J. Borden [Daisy] Harriman, Washington hostess, famous for her Sunday night supper parties to diplomats and Democrats, is balanced against Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, Washington hostess known for her dinner parties to ambassadors and Republicans.

"Seconds" Not Enough.

And so the pendulum swings neatly back and forth. On both swings one thing is equally emphasized. That is that at both the Republican and Democratic conventions women have ample opportunity to make speeches seconding the nomination of all candidates.

But many of the women lament that this is no great distinction to the sex, since every nomination has from four to six maschuline seconds. So, in addition to this opportunity to make a little speech the women want a chance to sit around the committee table and help shape the destinies of their party. Some women, it is assured, will be at some committee tables just how large a number there will be will not be decided until the gavel taps each convention to order in Chicago.

Women outside the party delegate group are also laying plans for representation at the Stadium.

Opponents on Issues.

This large bipartisan lobby group is not characterized by any "woman's single" factor. For many of the groups are bitterly opposed to each other. The women "wets" under the leadership of Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, head of the women's organization for national prohibition reform, will fight for an out and out wet repeal plank. The women "drys," under the direction of Mrs. Ella Boole of the W. C. T. U., will battle for a bone dry plank.

The national woman's party wants consideration of an "equal rights" amendment which will take away from women protective legislation, which they declare is discriminating against them in seeking and holding jobs. And the National League of Women Voters, which has formerly favored protective legislation, may or may not stress that point. But they will concentrate on a world court plank.

Woman Pawns Mother's Ring, Then Takes Poison

Mrs. Adele Harris, 26 years old, of 4617 Drexel boulevard, a cabaret entertainer, was taken to the Chicago hospital yesterday suffering from poisoning. She will recover. Her attempted suicide, police learned, was partly prompted by the fact that she had been planning to visit her parents in Baltimore, but feared to face her mother without a ring which had been given to her as a keepsake and which she had pawned.

AMELIA PUTNAM WINS CROSS OF FRENCH LEGION

PARIS, June 4.—(AP)—The French government today recognized Amelia Earhart Putnam's solo flight across the Atlantic by awarding her the chevalier's cross of the Legion of Honor.

The decoration, plus a speech by Paul Painleve, minister for air, reduced Miss Earhart to blushes and stammers.

"Five years ago I had the great pleasure of decorating Col. Lindbergh after his flight," Painleve said. "Now I have the honor to bestow this cross upon the colonel's charming image."

When Miss Earhart recovered her composure she said:

"Mr. Painleve, I can find no words to express my appreciation."

Mrs. Putnam's husband, George Palmer Putnam, New York publisher, accompanied her to the home of Mme. Nungesser, mother of the French flyer who disappeared on a trans-Atlantic flight. Mme. Nungesser was unable to receive them because of illness.

Two Missing Fishermen, Feared Lost, Are Saved

Sam Eickler and Abe Hack, Michigan City, Ind., fishermen who were believed lost when they failed to return from their nets Thursday night, reached home yesterday after having drifted ashore at Tremont, ten miles to the southwest. Eickler's 30 foot fishing launch Challenger, had been disabled in a squall Thursday night.

HORNER PRAISED AS ARBITER OF LABOR DISPUTES

Satisfies Both Sides in Many Decisions.

The fifteen year record of Probate Judge Henry Horner as an arbitrator in scores of labor disputes was cited yesterday as an evidence of the intimate knowledge with the aims and problems of the laboring class which the Democratic candidate for governor possesses.

Judge Horner always served without compensation when called as an arbitrator in such disputes. Regarding his refusal to accept any payments for his services in such a position, he said:

"I never could accept pay for doing what I regard as the plain civic duty of any man who has the interest of the plain working man at heart. I am a working man myself. My moral working day extends over 16 hours. I could not take compensation for placing what talents I possess at the service of a fellow working man."

Judge Horner's judicial cast of mind and his sense of fairness made him an ideal arbitrator in labor negotiations, according to the testimony of both employers and employés in the many disputes he ironed out. Both sides were usually satisfied and a strike or lockout was averted.

Urges Support for Horner.

The judge's record in railway wage negotiations brought him the recent indorsement of the American Train Dispatchers' association. In a letter to every train dispatcher in Illinois, J. G. Luhrson, president of the association, reminded them of the satisfactory decision given by the judge regarding the train dispatchers' problems.

"We were given a fair and just decision in all the cases arbitrated by Judge Horner," the letter read. His ruling reflected the fairness with which he has dealt with the laboring man for many years.

"We should support such men who have the problems of organized labor at heart. We shall thus be assured of a square deal from the governor's chair."

Judge Horner has also arbitrated in many other trades. He settled many of the disputes in Chicago in which the garment trades were involved and was for many years trustee of the unemployment fund of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union.

Some time ago he served at Washington, D. C., as arbitrator in a series of national disputes over wages and working conditions in a number of trades. His decisions were accepted as satisfactory to both sides.

Views on Helping Jobless.

"It is my firm belief," Judge Horner said yesterday, "that the governor of Illinois, particularly if supported by a favorable administration in Washington, could get together with the governors of the other states and arrive at some solution of the crushing problem of unemployment that will swing the national pendulum back towards real and lasting prosperity.

"Such relief as the state is capable of giving to suffering municipalities, to harassed farmers and to unemployed industrial workers will be provided by me promptly and to the fullest measure if I am given the honor of filling the governor's chair."

DESCRIBES GIRL'S FIGHT TO ESCAPE 'CRAZY LOVE' SHOTS

The shooting at the exhibition of the American Academy of Art, 306 South Wabash avenue, Friday night, in which Gordon T. Caldwell, 26 years old, a bank clerk, wounded Miss Dorothy B. Smith, 21, of 6139 Champlain avenue, an art student, and then killed himself, was described to a coroner's jury by an eye witness yesterday.

CORNELIUS V. SMITH.

She is Mrs. Iva M. de Forest of Evergreen Park, registrar of the art school, who said she tried to hold Caldwell's arm, but that he brushed her aside and fired three shots at Miss Smith. Just before the shooting, she said, Miss Smith called to her to "get somebody quick."

The inquest was continued to June 24 to hear the story of Miss Smith, who is now in St. Luke's hospital, after her father, Cornelius V. Smith, a school board employé, testified the shooting probably was the result of jealousy. Miss Smith told police the shooting was the result of a "crazy love affair."

Caldwell was a native of Scranton, Miss., and lived in Florida for years. He was active in church circles at Tampa and was an aviator. He came to Chicago recently and worked as a bank clerk. His father killed a son-in-law at Miami two years ago, friends said, and then committed suicide. In Chicago, Caldwell lived at 1318 Hyde Park boulevard.

MOVES TO KEEP FAIR GROUNDS FREE OF SMOKE

A campaign to rid the lake front, especially in the vicinity of Grant park, of the smoke nuisance has been started by Frank A. Chambers, chief city smoke inspector, for the benefit of visitors to the World's Fair buildings.

In letters to the railroads operating along the fair grounds and to the managements of buildings along the park and railroad area, Mr. Chambers has warned that violations of the smoke ordinance will be prosecuted. He urged coöperation with the city to free the fair site from any smoke, soot or cinders.

Mr. Chambers said he has noticed frequent smoke emissions from the two chimneys at the power plant at the 27th street roundhouse. He said there was no excuse for it, since the equipment could be kept free of smoke with reasonable care. In the period from May 18 to June 2, 79 violations were reported against the Illinois Central, 14 against the Michigan Central, and one against the New York Central, he said.

SALE OF TICKETS FOR CONVENTIONS AGAIN DELAYED

Edward N. Hurley, chairman of the citizens' committee in charge of local arrangements for the two big national political conventions, found a new problem on his hands yesterday.

His committee had expected to start the public sale of balcony seats for one or both conventions at once, but the final word from the national committees of both parties was discouraging. The Republicans notified him that he would not receive the committee's share of tickets until next Saturday, only three days before their convention, and the Democrats said their tickets would not be ready for distribution until June 23, four days before their meeting.

Therefore, Chairman Hurley is spending the week-end trying to evolve some system of accepting payment for tickets in advance and arranging for last minute deliveries. The balcony ticket prices range from $17 to $22.

Blind Young Men, Women to Present Two Playlets

The Braille Theater guild, composed of blind young men and women, will present two playlets Tuesday evening at the Chicago City Woman's club, 72 East 11th street. About twenty will have parts in the casts. Mrs. Jacob Baur and Mrs. Newton Wagener are among the patronesses.

'OSCAR NELSON' WILL BE DELEGATE, BUT NOT STATE AUDITOR

Auditor Oscar Nelson of Geneva and Ald. Oscar F. Nelson of Chicago are trying to straighten out a confusion of their names.

The Republican state convention on May 27 elected "Oscar Nelson" as one of the state's delegates at large to the national convention. A member of the committee which made up the list is said to have assured State Auditor Nelson that he had been taken care of, and for some time the Geneva man received congratulations.

But the completion of the official list including addresses now discloses that the man honored was Ald. Nelson—"Oscar F., if you please"—and that the state auditor was ignored by the Small forces which controlled the convention.

Wyoming Coal Miners Vote to Accept Pay Cut

Cheyenne, Wyo., June 4.—(AP)—By a majority of only one vote, the eleven members of a union coal miners' committee today approved a new wage contract for the Wyoming district, which authorized a 20 per cent reduction in the present basic pay of $6.72 a day.

Notice how nice my Teeth look?

..my Gums are firm, too!

thanks to Ipana!

1. She knew "pink tooth brush."

Alice teaches physical training in a big high school. One day last summer we were out in the car and I saw her look at my teeth two or three times. "Know why your teeth aren't as bright as they used to be, Sue?" she said. "You have 'pink tooth brush', haven't you? Better harden up your gums. And I'll tell you why. It's like this:

2. Alice told about Ipana.

"Gums," she said, "don't get any exercise nowadays—foods are too soft. And tender, bleeding gums simply invite gum diseases. Serious ones, too!" She told me to get some Ipana Tooth Paste and rub some extra Ipana into my flabby gums every time I cleaned my teeth. "The ziratol in Ipana—with the massage—does wonders."

GET IPANA TOOTH PASTE

3. White teeth—firm gums!

I certainly took Alice's advice! Got some Ipana the same day. I clean my teeth with it and massage a little into my gums. My teeth lost that dull, dirty look. And I could feel the difference in my gums. Today my teeth sparkle. And my gums are so firm and healthy! Remember: A good tooth paste, like a good dentist, is never a luxury!

BONUS BRIGADE FINDS CHICAGO A CHILL HOST

Vets Reach Hammond After a Weary Day.

Grumbling derisively at Chicago's "hospitality," 306 "Washington or bust" bonus marchers left the city by street car late last night and camped for an outdoor sleep in the Roby speedway in Hammond early this morning. For several hours they halted at 106th street and Ewing avenue, near the Pennsylvania line, which is their hope for transportation to the capital.

At 2 o'clock this morning the leaders of the army were told bluntly by Pennsylvania officials that they would not be permitted to ride on the company's trains and that any trains boarded by the bonus seekers would be stopped until cleared of fareless riders. Following this ultimatum the army went into bivouac for the remainder of the morning in the speedway bowl.

The veterans, 215 of whom are from the west coast and the others from this region, went to sleep still grumbling over Chicago's treatment of them. Part of the dissatisfaction was occasioned by the fact the army had to pay its own street car fare to the far south side. Some of this money was raised by an impromptu concert in Grant park led by the "Texas Drifter," a tenor.

Spend a Wearisome Day.

The ex-soldiers are going to Washington to join thousands of others in a demonstration for the immediate payment of a full cash bonus. From their arrival in the Proviso yards of the North Western railroad before daybreak until they reached Grant park the veterans had a wearisome day, with marching and street car riding from the west side, and frantic efforts to get transportation to the far south side.

Dr. E. G. Brust, president of the village of Melrose Park, and American Legion sympathizers of the suburb provided some food and arranged transportation for the bonus boosters to Madison and Canal streets. The Chicago Surface Lines donated three cars for transportation to the Pennsylvania yards on the south side, but through a misunderstanding the veterans were deposited near the Union station, where the Pennsylvania trains come in.

Try in Vain to Get Trucks.

The hitch hikers trekked to the abandoned postoffice site at Harrison and Canal streets, where they spent most of the day in futile attempts to get trucks to move them. They complained that most of their commissary funds were exhausted in telephone calls. Dr. Brust said that Henry Sonneschein, secretary to Mayor Cermak, had promised to provide city trucks, but James Oxley, commander of the veterans, could not reach Mr. Sonnenschein.

Bus lines and trucking companies were appealed to, but they said Saturday was too busy a day. Commander Oxley called the Chicago headquarters of the American Legion and said he was told nothing could be done.

"The Legionnaires have coöperated with us all along the way, but not here," said Oxley. "We've been treated with more discourtesy in Chicago than we received anywhere. All we want to do is get out of Chicago."

Postal Employés Donate $11.

Chicago postal employés raised $11 for the marchers during the day and some frankfurters were collected from packing houses. A dairy company donated 50 bottles of milk and cream and a bread concern sent over some loaves. Camp fires were started and the hitch hikers dined frugally on hot dogs and coffee. Late in the day they formed in their five companies, four abreast, and marched to Grant park.

A dozen or more Chicago veterans joined the contingent with the approval of Commander Oxley. One man left a wife and child. His wife gave him $10 and said she'd be glad to be rid of him for three weeks. Several communists tried to harangue the marchers, but they were driven away. Oxley said no Reds would be tolerated.

Woman Is Making Trip.

One woman, Mrs. William Perata, 23 years old, is making the journey with her husband, who drives ahead in the family automobile as an advance representative of the bonus marchers. She said she left two children at home with neighbors.

The bonus brigade started a week ago Friday from San Francisco, picking up recruits at Oakland, Cal., and several Oregon points. They came by box car on the Northern Pacific, Union Pacific, and North Western roads. They are sunburned and travel worn, with grimy working clothes and knapsacks. There is a scattering of Negroes among them.

BONUS MARCHERS RETIRE

Cleveland, O., June 4.—(AP)—Several hundred bedraggled war veterans of the "bonus expeditionary force" startof marching toward the city limits late tonight in response to a plea from Mayor Ray T. Miller.

Two hundred policemen followed the veterans closely as they left their camp near the Pennsylvania railroad yards. Police officials said if the men turn back or refuse to go on, the leaders will be arrested.

Ranks Are Depleted.

The "army" had dwindled from more than 1,000 to approximately 400 when the exodus began, veterans leaving by twos and threes in the early twilight, presumably to find food. Most of them had not eaten since yesterday.

The destination of the men was uncertain as police were anxious only to get the men on the move and out of the city. They were still headed, however, in the general direction of Washington, to demand payment of the compensation certificates.

Offers Rides Toward Home.

Columbus, O., June 4.—(AP)—An offer to provide transportation for war veteran bonus marchers desiring to return home was made by Gov. George White tonight.

The governor's offer was made in a statement issued after a conference with Adjt. Gen. Frank D. Henderson and other state officials.

The governor said he would supply state highway department trucks to take the men who are scattered about Ohio to their homes if they live in Ohio or to the state line nearest their home if they are residents of other states.

New Yorkers on Way.

New York, June 4.—[Special.]—Some 700 New York City war veterans departed this afternoon for Washington to join in the demand for full payment of bonus certificates.

The bonus seekers—most of them members of the Workers' Ex-Service Men's league, a communist affiliate—left Union square led by Patsy Donato, marshal, and marched four abreast to the Baltimore and Ohio's ferry at Twenty-third street.

Their advance onto the ferry caused excited reports they had "seized" the vessel. Actually, all of the men paid their 4 cents.

Marchers Ask Relief.

Charleston, W. Va., June 4.—(AP)—While state police stood guard over the statehouse doors some 250 to 300 "hunger marchers" placed a plea for relief before Gov. Conley's secretary today and then made plans to camp on the banks of the Kanawha river in front of the capitol. They were informed that there were no state funds available for relief.

HELD ON WOMAN'S CHARGES.

Matthew Meyer, 20 years old, 1832 Oakdale avenue, was held to the grand jury yesterday in bonds of $35,000 by Judge J. William Brooks. Mrs. Florence Haske, 2847 Clybourn avenue, charged that Meyer robbed hero f $1 and tried to attack her.

ISSUE OF BONUS REVIVED BY LAST MINUTE SIGNER

Texan Helps to Bring Question to Vote.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 4.—[Special.]—In an 11th hour climax the veterans' bonus issue was lifted today from the obscurity of a committee table and thrust into a position of importance among the legislation pending before the house of representatives.

With but two minutes remaining of the last session at which it would have been effective, the necessary 145th signature was affixed to a petition to discharge the rules committee from consideration of a resolution under which the Patman bonus bill might be brought before the house.

The bill, introduced by Representative Wright Patman [Dem., Tex.], calls for inflation of the currency to the amount of two billion 400 million dollars through a federal bond issue. The so-called "fiat money" thus obtained would be used to pay the veterans' adjusted service certificates in full.

Called Inflationary Bill.

Branded as inflationary, the measure was adversely reported by the ways and means committee of the house, to which it had been referred.

Its proponents, despite the committee's unfavorable action, succeeded in placing it on the calender and sought a special rule to bring it to the floor of the house. The resolution seeking the rule has been pigeonholed in committee for nearly a month, and house leaders had intended that no action would be taken on it this session.

The vote on the motion to discharge the rules committee will be had on Monday, June 13, which is the last "discharge day" remaining before adjournment.

Garrett Last Minute Signer.

It was Representative Daniel E. Garrett [Dem., Tex.] who affixed the final necessary signature scarcely a minute before the petition would have become impotent.

Faced by an early adjournment of the house, proponents of the bonus had sought frantically all day to obtain the needed signers. As the last four minutes of the session passed 144 names were on the list, with only one more required, and just sixty seconds before adjournment Representative Garrett stepped up and wrote his name.

Meanwhile, the army of veterans gathering in the capital to demand passage of the bonus legislation was given notice that it will be expected to leave the city next Thursday. The commissioners of the district announced that trucks belonging to the city will be available on that day to carry the marchers 50 miles in the direction of their homes, and asked that the ex-service men take advantage of the invitation.

Chicago Veterans Arrive.

Two thousand of the so-called "bonus expeditionary force" were in the city today, according to police, with dispatches from other cities indicating that about 8,000 more are on the way. A delegation of 400 was understood to have arrived from Chicago this evening.

Municipal authorities have become increasingly alarmed over the situation being created by the arrival of the veterans, most of whom are destitute. The capital has not arranged a fund with which to feed and clothe the men, and considerable anxiety as to the possibility of a disorderly demonstration has been evinced by the police.

A plea to the ex-service men to abandon the march on Washington was issued today by Representative John E. Rankin [Dem., Miss.], chairman of the house committee on veterans. Similar appeals were voiced by Representative Patman and John J. Connery [Dem., Mass.], both leaders in the bonus fight in congress.

Unemployed Gather at Alderman's Home; 3 Jailed

Fred Abek, Fred Juravach and Mrs. Anna Smith were arrested yesterday as leaders of an unemployment demonstration in front of the home of Ald. John P. Wilson at 2920 Lowe avenue in the 11th ward. Fifty persons had gathered to urge Ald. Wilson to introduce an unemployment relief insurance measure in the council. The three leaders were held at the Deering street police station and the others dispersed.

ROBBER SLAIN, PAL SEIZED IN 7 MILE CHASE

Merchant Trails Bandits Through West Side.

Policeman John Conway yesterday killed one robber and wounded and captured a second one after they had taken $45 from a Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company store at 5509 West North avenue. The shooting occurred at 26th street and Ridgeway avenue after Conway went to the aid of Frank Schopper, supervisor for the store, who in his car had pursued the bandits for seven miles through streets of the west side.

The robber killed was Albert Sanders, 25 years old, 4341 South Kedvale avenue, who was shot as he fled on foot after his automobile had been forced to the curb by the speedier Schopper car. Sanders' companion, Bert O'Donnell, 21 years old, also of 4341 South Kedvale avenue, was shot in the arm by Policeman Conway and surrendered at 26th street and Central Park avenue.

Get $45 from Store.

Sanders and O'Donnell entered the store and compelled the manager, Charles Martens, to give them the $45 in the cash register. Schopper, who was in the store, waited until they left and then ran to his own car, parked at the curb, and gave chase.

The bandits led a zig-zag race through North avenue and other streets as Schopper trailed their speeding car.

The bandit car turned south with Schopper in pursuit. At 22d street and Crawford avenue Schopper sighted Conway, who was directing traffic at the intersection. He called to the policeman who leaped to the running board and fired at the bandit car. Sanders and O'Donnell answered with a volley of revolver shots.

Bandits Forced to Curb.

Schopper's speedier automobile gradually overcame the lead of the bandits and came abreast of them at 26th and Ridgeway. To avoid a collision Sanders' car was halted and the bandits leaped to the street and fled east in 26th street, exchanging shots with Conway.

Sanders raced to an alley between Ridgeway and Lawndale avenues where he fell dead with four bullets from the policeman's gun in his head and body. Conway continued in pursuit of O'Donnell, who surrendered at Central Park avenue.

Vincent Fromanek, owner of a shoe store at 3735 West 26th street, saw Conway in pursuit of the bandits and seized a rifle and joined the chase. He fired several shots at the bandits and aided in the capture of O'Donnell.

O'Donnell was questioned at the Bridewell hospital and confessed to seven robberies of Atlantic and Pacific and Consumer stores, in which he said Sanders had participated. The car in which they were riding had been stolen a week ago, O'Donnell said. Both men were carrying .38 caliber revolvers. The police said that Sanders' gun had 12 notches in the handle.

Rob Fair Store Garage.

Three gunmen yesterday raided the office of the Fair store delivery garage, 4542 West Madison street, and escaped with $5,500. They asked for "Harold" when they entered the garage and were taken to the office of Manager Harold Borchardt. While two men guarded Borchardt and two other employés, the third went to the open safe and took the money, which was ready for transfer to the loop office.

Warning their prisoners not to give the alarm for five minutes, they walked to a car parked at the front door and drove east in Madison street. Twelve truck drivers in the garage were not aware of the robbery.

EX-CONVICT GIVEN 99 YEARS FOR GAS STATION MURDER

Frank Schanda, 29 years old, of Maywood, an ex-convict, was found guilty yesterday of the murder of William Schmook, gasoline station attendant, and his sentence fixed at 99 years by a jury in the Circuit court of Judge Frederick A. Hill of Joliet.

Schmook was shot to death on Jan. 10 in the robbery of a roadside gasoline station and refreshment stand near Frankfort, 12 miles east of Joliet. Schanda appeared at the stand two months later and was recognized as the slayer by Miss Elizabeth McMullen, an employé. She summoned a highway policeman and Schanda was arrested. Testimony at the trial showed that he offered the arresting policeman $2,000 for his freedom.

HERRIN CARPENTERS TAKE PAY CUT.

Herrin, Ill., June 4.—[Special.]—Carpenters here have accepted a $2 a day cut in wages. The former wage scale was $8.

CHINESE GIRL STUDENT WINS IN HONOR TESTS

It was announced yesterday that Miss Soo Tsing Yu of Hangchow, China, a senior at Rockford college, had passed an examination in her honors course conducted by Dr. Koliang Yih, Chinese consul general in Chicago, and Dr. William A. Maddox, president of the college.

Miss Yu was recently awarded a fellowship for graduate study in her chosen field at Smith college. In the honors course a student may devote herself to a special study in some field of human knowledge in addition to routine work, thus indicating capacity for independent thinking. Miss Yu made a study of modern tendencies in education with particular reference to education as an instrument in the national reorganization of China.

ARREST OF GANG SOLVES HOLDUP OF BEVERLY BANK

Four men, arrested yesterday by policemen from the detective bureau, confessed that they were members of a band of six who held up the Beverly State Savings bank at 103d and Loomis street last Tuseday and escaped with $6,000.

They are Paul Leonardi, 22 years old, 2402 Lexington street; Anthony Fornato, 21 years old, 2836 Lexington street; Patsy Zeffrio, 20 years old, 1347 Taylor street, and Samuel Clement, 26 years old, 1246 South Ashland avenue.

Also under arrest is Wolford Corrivean, 45 years old, 9127 South Irving avenue, a roofing contractor, in whose home the bandits hid after the robbery and divided the loot.

From underworld sources Sergts. William Balswick, Walter Parodowski and William Hennessey learned of the connection of Corrivean with the band. They went to his place and found two automobiles which he said were not his. While he was being questioned Fornato and Zeffrio appeared to drive the cars away. They were taken into custody and confessed, naming their companions, who were picked up soon afterward.

According to their statements, they gathered at Corrivean's at 8:30 a. m. Tuesday and remained there until 9:30. Then Leonardi and Clement drove the cars to the bank and waited while Fornato, Zeffrio and the other two went in and took the money after terrorizing six employés and four customers.

The six returned to the roofer's home and took something more than $900 each as their respective shares. Corrivean, it was said, was given $300 for furnishing a convenient rendezvous. Before leaving they hid two shotguns and four pistols in the basement. The weapons were found there by the police.

COPPER PROFITS OF J. D. RYAN AND PARTNERS BARED

Deals in Merger Stocks Netted Millions.

Washington, D. C., June 4.—[Special.]—A vivid picture of the maze of financial operations through which Anaconda Copper gained control of three of its big rivals in 1928 and 1929 was placed before the senate banking and currency committee today by John D. Ryan, chairman of the Anaconda board, and William A. Gray, committee counsel, during the stock exchange inquiry.

Financial records introduced during today's session disclosed that Ryan, with a number of other copper officials interested in the companies he was absorbing, and the National City company, a National City bank affiliate, had made a handsome profit during the negotiations by speculating in the copper stocks which were being absorbed into the huge Anaconda corporation at that time.

Millions in Profits.

On once occasion, the records disclosed that Ryan, the National City company and H. F. Guggenheim, a heavy stockholder in Chile Copper, had made a paper profit of $1,120,000 by forming a joint account and purchasing a large block of Chile stock prior to the public announcement that an arrangement had been made whereby Anaconda stock was to be exchanged for stock in the Chile Copper company. The Chile stock was converted into Anaconda. On another occasion Ryan and the National City company made a book profit of $2,209,000 while dealing in another copper stock.

All told, Anaconda took over control of three companies, Chile, Andes and Greene-Cananea. In each case Anaconda stock was traded on a fixed ratio for the rival stock.

Pegged Stock Prices.

While these stocks were being accumulated, Ryan testified that his organization and its subsidiary, the United Metals Selling company, had engaged in extensive selling and purchasing operations in these stocks and in Anaconda on the stock exchange for the purpose of maintaining the equilibrium existing between the prices for the stocks until they had been absorbed. He added also that 211 millions of the funded debt of Anaconda had been retired through the flotation of new Anaconda stock during that period.

Several stock selling and purchasing transactions in copper stocks were outlined and traced by Mr. Gray to support his contention that the Anaconda operations furnished a striking illustration of how officials of big corporations often used inside knowledge to speculate in their own stocks and make big profits. He asserted that the Chile operation disclosed how Ryan and Guggenheim had taken advantage of advance knowledge of arrangements to take over the Chile stocks to speculate and make money in their own stocks.

Three Joint Stock Accounts.

A résumé of the day's testimony together with an examination of data supplied by Gray showed that Ryan, the one time copper king, and the National City company had participated in three copper stock joint buying and selling ventures on the stock exchange. In the first one, that in Chile stock, Guggenheim was in with them and they made $404,000 each. Ryan, however, according to Gray, split his profits with C. E. Kelley, president of the Anaconda company, and W. E. Thornton, president of Greene-Cananea.

In the second pool only the National City company and Ryan were named as participants on their joint account with Hornblower & Weeks, the brokers through which Ryan normally dealt. Guggenheim was not in this pool. In this case Greene-Cananea stock was speculated in with paper profits of $2,909,978. Ryan's half interest, Gray said after the hearing, was divided with Kelley and Thornton.

"Wash Sale" a Blunder.

It was during this latter transaction that Attorney Gray charged a "wash sale" had been put through by Ryan in order to stir up activity in Greene-Cananea. He showed through a witness that Ryan operating through two accounts with Hornblower & Weeks had sold 35,000 shares from one account to the other. The same day the stock went up and the Ryan-National City company joint account cleaned up. Ryan—and his brokers bore him out—said the sale was not a wash sale but a blunder on the part of a broker.

James F. Fayne, member of the Hornblower & Weeks brokerage house, testified that on March 19 he gave an order to buy an unlimited amount of Greene-Cananea stock for the Ryan account known as Greene 55. Three minutes later, supposing the sale had gone through, he gave an order to sell an unlimited amount of Greene-Cananea stock at a figure one-half point higher for another account maintained by Ryan.

Market Goes Higher

It so happened, however, he testified, that the broker to whom he gave the purchase order had not carried out the order when the second broker, commissioned to sell, reached the post on the exchange where copper stocks were being sold. The brokers, meeting, not knowing they were working for the same principal, quickly reached a deal. One sold, the other bought.

Realizing his "mistake," Fayne said he had immediately given orders to sell an unlimited amount to keep the market from going "through the loop." The market did go up, however, and before the day was over all of Ryan's Greene-Cananea stocks had been unloaded with the exception of what they intended to keep and a small balance sold the next day.

Third Deal in Andes.

Fayne explained that both accounts were known to him as Ryan accounts, that he did not know who was in with Ryan in them. He said that when he realized a mistake had been made he offered to bear the $17,000 commissions involved himself, but that Ryan was too big a man to let him do it.

In the third operation, Ryan and the National City company bought Andes stock, making a profit of $335,000. Ryan said he held on to most of the stock he purchased after it was converted into Anaconda, accepting eventually a huge loss, as Anaconda is now $4. He denied that he had participated in any of the large Anaconda pools of 1929 whose activities had been recounted at previous sessions.

Committee Ready to Quit.

Several members of the committee intimated today that the hearings may be closed after another session or two. Gray said he had sixty or seventy other other big operations to work up and could keep the committee busy all fall. The money has about run out, however, and the senators are growing weary.

Most of today's testimony, as was that of yesterday, was designed not only to show how directors of corporations dealt in their own securities but to throw further light on the National City company's activities in Anaconda stocks. It was shown that Ryan, chairman of the Anaconda board, was also a director of the National City company and that this company, through its financing of Anaconda, was in close touch with its activities.

On Jan. 14, 1929, Ryan with the National City company and Guggenheim began their joint account in Chile stock by making purchases in a big way.

U. S. SCHOOL LOAN MEANS DISASTER, ASSERTS GLENN

Lewis Also Fights Plea of Chicago Teachers.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 4.—[Special.]—A direct federal loan to Chicago's board of education would bring immediate relief to the teachers' pockets, but it would bring disaster to their academic independence later on, Senator Glenn [Rep., Ill.] today argued before a senate manufacturers' subcommittee considering the salary crisis in the Chicago schools.

OTIS F. GLENN.

The subcommittee had been called into special session in order to hear the petitions for such a loan from a score of Chicago teachers, headed by Charles R. Stillman, principal of the Burr school. The delegation was escorted to the hearing by Donald R. Richberg, attorney for organized labor groups.

Federal funds are paid for by federal paternalism, Senator Glenn argued and pointed out that the proposal to loan to Chicago's school board on its real estate securities would eventually bring politics into the school system, would lead to supervision of local curricula, would eventually bring the teachers into the government pay roll, and would be "a disaster to our nation."

Banks Should Loan Money.

A proper source for the much needed loan to the teachers is the Reconstruction Finance corporation, Senator Glenn suggested.

"When the corporation was started," he said, "it was my belief that credit would be given the banks to ease up their own situation and in turn benefit the people. But the money got to the banks and it stayed there.

"These banks have kept themselves sound and have let the school teacher, the clerk and the mechanic look out for themselves. But I say they've been short sighted. Sooner or later Chicago's going to pay its bills. And if its securities aren't good, then nothing is good in this country."

Hoover Weighs State Loans.

Senator Lewis [Dem., Ill.] told the committee that President Hoover this week-end is conferring with the finance corporation members over the Lewis resolution authorizing loans to states. His resolution, he explained, provides that the corporation, in making the loans, directly specify for what purpose the money is to be spent. A loan to Illinois, for instance, might have a specific designation for the payment of the $45,000,000 estimated as necessary to pay Chicago teachers their back salaries and the money due them before the tax tangle is adjusted.

Senator Lewis, likewise told the committee of petitioning teachers that any direct federal loan to Chicago would be a "disastrous act" and one calculated to destroy their independence, to put their curricula, salary schedules, and personnel under federal control, and to strike a blow at the democracy of the public school.

SENATOR J. H. LEWIS IS GIVEN COMMISSION IN OFFICERS' RESERVE

Washington, D. C., June 4.—[Special.]—Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois was today commissioned a lieutenant colonel in the officers' reserve corps by Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, in recognition of his "long military record, as well as his record of service in the government."

During the Spanish-American war, according to the department, Senator Lewis, although a member of congress from the state of Washington, obtained permission from President McKinley and Secretary of War Alger to leave his legislative duties and join the army. He served in the Porto Rican campaign. During the world war he was a member of the senate from Illinois.

Back to Farm Program of Federal Aid Proposed

Washington, D. C., June 4.—(AP)—Federal aid for a back to the farm movement to assist in unemployment relief was proposed today in a bill by Senator Bankhead [Dem., Ala.]. Under the measure the Reconstruction corporation would be empowered to lend to farm loan agencies to help finance the unemployed on farms on a subsistence basis.

30 MILES OF NEW TRAILS BECKON FOREST HIKERS

County Woods Offer City Folk Thrifty Outings.

loaves of bread, 10 cents. Half pound of butter, 15 cents. One quart of milk, 11 cents. One dozen doughnuts, 15 cents. The total, $1.61."

"Woods an Economic Refuge."

The superintendent calls the preserve "a social safety valve."

"Time was," he said, "when the Gradgrinds complained that the county's forests were an extravagance. Now they are accepted as being as much a part of a righteous social scheme as schools and churches. They are an economic refuge. The child of the crowded tenements gets as fine a thrill out of them as the rich traveler does out of the beauties of Lake Banff in far away Alberta. It's all relative."

Now for solution of what Mr. Sauers called "the hiker's chief problem"—the problem of getting to the place where the hikes begin.

Where the New Trails Are.

The 30 miles of new hikes are all in the Des Plaines river and Salt creek areas of the preserve. The following notes prepared by Gen. Davis and the superintendent will show you how to reach the starting points:

Hike No. 1 [length, 3½ miles]—This hike traverses the beautiful Thatcher woods area to North avenue and then follows the approximate course of the old Indian trail to Grand avenue.

Transportation—Take Lake street "L" trains to Wisconsin street "L" station. Walk west on platform to Harlem avenue, thence north one block to Lake street, then West Towns street car to Thatcher avenue. Hike north to Grand avenue and return on West Towns bus to Wisconsin street station.

Or take Chicago surface lines [Madison-Austin] to Austin boulevard, then West Towns street car to Des Plaines river and start of hike. Return on West Towns bus to Chicago surface connection at Grand avenue and Harlem.

Hike No. 2 [length, 4½ miles]—This hike passes through the historic La Framboise and Robinson's Indian reservations northwest to Devon avenue. It is an extension of hike No. 1, and the energetic hikers may enjoy combining the two.

Transportation—Take rapid transit Lake street "L" trains to Wisconsin street station, then West Towns bus northbound on Harlem avenue to Grand and Cumberland avenues. Walk west on Grand avenue to beginning of hike at Des Plaines river bridge. Return from end of hike at Devon avenue on United Motor Coach bus to Jefferson Park and Milwaukee avenue surface car to Logan Square "L" station.

Or take Chicago surface lines [Grand avenue] to Grand avenue and Harlem avenue, then West Towns bus-Leyden bus to Des Plaines river and start of hike. Return from end of hike at Devon avenue on United Motor Coach as above.

NOTE—This hike may also be reached by passengers on the Belmont avenue and Irving Park boulevard surface lines by going to the end of the line at Pacific street and walking 1¼ miles west to Des Plaines river and start of hike. Passengers on Chicago Motor Coach [Addison street bus] may reach trail by going on bus to Cumberland avenue and walking north to Irving Park boulevard and west to trail.

Hike No. 3 [Length, 2½ or 3½ miles]—A hike which passes from heavy woodland shade to skirt the edges of woodland meadows in delightful alternation. As this hike is not long the average hiker should continue with hike No. 4 as far as dam No. 2.

Transportation—To start hike at Devon avenue take Logan Square "L" trains to end of line, then Milwaukee avenue surface avenue] to Jefferson Park and United Motor Coach bus to start of hike.

Or take Chicago surface line [Milwaukee avenue] to Jefferson Park and United Motor Coach to start of hike. Return from Dempster street to Jefferson Park and Milwaukee avenue street car.

Hike No. 4 [length, 4 or 6½ miles]—Hike north through Portage Grove and Allison Woods, one of the largest wooded areas in the Des Plaines valley. Here the Redmen portaged across the continental divide between the Des Plaines river and the waters of the Mississippi to the north branch of the Chicago river and the waters of the Atlantic.

Transportation—Take Logan Square "L" trains to end of line, then Milwaukee avenue surface car to Jefferson Park and United Motor Coach bus to start of hike. Return from dam No 2 on United Motor Coach bus to Jefferson Park.

NOTE—These buses run on a twenty minute schedule, but on Sundays only.

Hike No. 5 [length, 10 miles]—A ten mile hike through a relatively undisturbed portion of the upper Des Plaines valley, northward from Dam No. 2 to the Lake county line and return.

Transportation—Take Logan Square "L" trains to end of line, then Milwaukee avenue surface car to Jefferson Park, and United Motor Coach bus to start of hike. Return from Dam No. 2 on United Motor Coach bus to Jefferson Park.

Note—These buses run on Sundays only.

Salt creek hike—A three mile hike along the winding course of the Salt Creek valley.

Transportation—Take Rapid Transit lines Westchester "L" trains to the end of the line. Walk south to beginning of trail. Return at end of hike on Chicago and West Towns surface cars to Douglas park "L" at Oak Park avenue.

Or take Chicago Surface lines [22d street] to Kenton avenue, then West Towns street car [La Grange] to Prairie avenue, Brookfield. Walk north and west on Salt Creek trail to Mannheim road. Return to Chicago on Westchester elevated from station at 22d street and Mannheim road.

The new trails are from 4 to 20 feet wide and so carefully drained that they offer good footing.

The preserve's landscape artist, John Barstow Morrill [Harvard school of landscape architecture, 1926] designed the new trails with a special view to the creation of fine vistas. They make 30 sylvan, silent miles.

RESISTS ROBBER; WOUNDED.

Max Schulman, 51 years old, 1230 South Sawyer avenue, reported to the Marquette police yesterday that he had been shot in the leg by a robber in front of 1225 South Troy street. He was taken to the Mount Sinai hospital.

PANAMA ELECTS NEW CHIEF TODAY; RIOTING FEARED

Republic Closes Bitter Presidential Fight.

BY GERALD MARTIN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PANAMA CITY, June 4.—With cavalrymen, armed with rifles, patrolling the city, the national police standing by at their barracks, and firemen doing police duty on the streets, Panamanians prepared to go to the polls tomorrow to elect a president and 32 deputies for four year terms, beginning next September.

President Ricardo J. Alfaro today issued an appeal to the voters to avoid violence and fraud and "avoid the disgrace of foreign intervention." American troops on the borders of the Canal oZne will be held in readiness for an emergency.

Alfaro Makes Veiled Threat.

President Alfaro's appeal also packed a veiled threat that if frauds are perpetrated in the election he will use his authority to annul the results and call for another vote.

The National Reservists, a patriotic society, placarded the streets today with signs supporting the president's plea for order to avoid "hateful intervention."

The candidates for the presidency are Francisco Arias Parades, reform Liberal, and Dr. Harmodio Arias, doctrinal Liberal. Both are in their 47th year and were members of the Liberty party which overthrew the administration of President F. H. Arosemena in the revolution of Jan. 2, 1931.

Result Is Uncertain.

The contest promises to be one of the keenest in the history of the republic and for the first time in many years the result is in the balance. In the past the retiring president has usually arranged that his nominee shall be his successor, and frequently the opposition has refused to go to the polls, knowing the chance was hopeless.

The situation today is tense and observers fear that whichever side wins there will be trouble. Arias Parades claims to have the support of the bulk of the masses, while his opponent is backed by the business and professional elements.

During the revolution of Jan. 2, 1931, the first step the opposition took was to take over Panama's central telephone station, cutting off all communications, and observers think it significant that the presidential palace has this week been connected up with the Panama canal system of telephones, which means that the government can always get in touch with the American legation, the general commanding the American forces in the zone and the other authorities across the border line.

Take All Precautions.

President Alfaro has taken every possible measure to insure a peaceful election and the American minister, Roy Tasco Davis, who so successfully handled the last revolution without bringing in any troops, has done everything in his power towards the same end.

That the army is and will be prepared for any emergency goes without saying, but there will be no display of force on the border lines and no unnecessary passing of troops through the terminal cities or towns in the interior. Mr. Davis' plan seems to be to let Panama run its own election and, providing the operation of the canal is not interfered with, he will not sanction troops coming into the republic.

Since Tuesday all bars, restaurants and public places have been ordered clased at midnight and at noon today every bar was closed and sealed and will remain so until Monday noon. Heavy penalties will be imposed for any attempt to break this order.

Deny U. S. Pressure.

Rumors that the American legation had notified the Panama government that a candidate elected by fraud would not be recognized by Washington have been in circulation and reported in the press, but the American minister today said there was no truth in such a statement.

During the past few days there has been a roundup for arms and extraordinary precautions are to be taken at the polling booths. The voters are to be lined up, one party on each side of the entrance, and when one line has voted and sent home the other will start. No man must cross from his district to another during election hours.

The mayor of Panama City closed down the night police court Wednesday and the judge was minus a job. It was claimed that he had been partisan in his decisions over political brawlers brough before him.

Americans will remain in the Canal Zone tomorrow.

Officials express hope that there will be no disorders, but even the most conservative fear that anything may happen, even before the result of the voting is announced. This may not be until Monday or Tuesday, as there are 300 ballot boxes scattered throughout the towns and hamlets of the interior, the Indian territory of the San Blas, among the rugged hills of Darien and little islands scattered along the coasts and watered by two oceans.

MEXICAN QUAKE DEAD MOUNT; 400 KILLED AND HURT

Thousands Homeless; Rush Relief.

MEXICO CITY, June 4.—(AP)—More than 400 persons were reported dead or injured today as a result of severe earthquakes that shook Mexico yesterday.

Reports trickling into Mexico City over damaged communication systems said that at least 300 were killed or hurt in the area about Guadalajara, with the death toll still mounting.

Thousands were found to be homeless in remote sections of the back country. Organization of local relief commissions to speed aid to the victims was ordered by authorities. Fearing a recurrence of the shocks, officials forbade indoor meetings. Schools, saloons, churches, and theaters were closed.

17 Bodies Found in Colima.

A dispatch from Colima said the bodies of seventeen victims had been recovered. Twenty or so towns were destroyed or seriously damaged.

The towns of Atenguillo and San Gabriel, in the Guadalajara district, were wiped out.

Ciudad Guzman was almost demolished and the town of Esperanza was badly damaged. It was impossible to establish communication with the city of Manzanillo.

Other towns which were badly damaged and from which an indefinite number of casualties were reported are Ameca, Autlan, Ixtlann, Sayula, Tlajomulco, Tecoma, Coquimatan, Comala, and Cuhtemoc.

At Zamora, Michoacan, four soldiers were killed in the collapse of a barracks. Municipal buildings at Juchitlan were wrecked and several persons were killed and injured. At Mascota about a hundred houses were destroyed and there were some deaths.

Churches Are Damaged.

Churches built by the Spaniards, some of them 400 years old, suffered heavy damage. In some cases it was necessary to dynamite ruins in order to prevent further loss of life from tottering walls. The historic old churches of San José, San Francisco, and La Merced in Colima were badly damaged, as was the beautiful cathedral in Tepic, farther north.

Colima reported that subterranean noises and flashes from the nearby Colima volcano accompanied the shocks. Soldiers are patrolling the streets to prevent disorder. The city was without light or water, due to the shocks having put the plants out of commission.

Seismographical experts here today expressed the belief that it was a submarine earth upheaval somewhere close off the Mexican port of Colima that caused the quakes. They said they believed other disturbances in the deep Pacific might follow, causing further shocks.

Mexico City, protected by nature with a huge shock absorber in its underlying layer of mud, suffered only slight damage. A few old buildings collapsed and some roofs fell in. One man was slightly injured.

THIS GANG OF BANDITS FINDS AN EARTHQUAKE HAS ITS ADVANTAGES

MEXICO CITY, June 4.—(AP)—Bandits posing as astronomers sacked the suburb of Ixtapalapa last night, taking advantage of the earthquake scare to get residents to abandon the town.

The gang, equipped with telescopes, measuring instruments and other impressive paraphernalia, announced that they were government astronomers sent to register the phenomena in connection with the next quake, which would destroy Ixtapalapa.

They advised the inhabitants to flee and nearly every one hastened to the hills, whereupon the bandits helped themselves to all they wanted and departed.

H. O. Stone Officials' Trial Set for Sept. 20

The trial of Henry F. Norcott, president of the defunct H. O. Stone & Co. real estate investment house, and eight of his former associates, on charges of using the mail to defraud, was set yesterday for Sept. 20 by Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward. The case, previously set for trial tomorrow before Federal Judge John P. Barnes, was transferred to Judge Woodward on Friday. The continuance was granted to defense attorneys over the objections of the government.

mouths agape as they realized they were witnessing the fall of the government.

Late tonight it was reported that the fallen Montero had sent a message to Señor Davila in which he said:

"I assumed the power against my will and will hold it until the end."

Begins Early in Day.

The uprising began early this morning.

Thirty planes flew low over the government building after Davila had delivered an ultimatum demanding the resignation of the government. The flyers did not drop bombs.

Volunteer troops, said to be 75,000 strong, were organized rapidly in the capital to resist the attack.

The march on the government house began about 11 a. m., when cadets of the aviation school joined with several army regiments and a number of sailors and started for Santiago. As the marchers advanced their numbers swelled.

The commander of the Santiago garrison, Gen. Carlos Vergera, known as the strong man of the Montero government, hurried out to meet the advance in order to repel an actual attack on the city. The rebels warned him to return or he would be taken prisoner.

The trouble started when the aviation corps refused to accept the appointment of Col. Ramon Vergera, the general's brother, as their commander. Col. Vergera was a prisoner at the aviation school, where he went last night by the order of the president at the first sign of insubordination in that branch of the service.

It was reported that the colonel shot and seriously wounded an air corps officer when an attempt was made to lock him up.

Communications with the aviation school were cut off at midnight yesterday and all roads leading to the capital were guarded by soldiers.

Tells of Revolt's Birth.

Col. Grove tonight gave this explanation of the development of the revolutionary movement:

"The preliminaries were practically completed three days ago and ended with a meeting yesterday with all aviation officers. An agreement was then sealed to overthrow President Montero.

"Carabineer forces joined us and an infantry regiment at Buin which had received an order from the Montero government to march against the aviation garrison refused. The same thing happened to a cavalry regiment at Cazadores."

Well Known in Washington.

Washington, D. C., June 4.—[U. P.]—Carlos G. Davila, who carried a hip flask and was a regular visitor to "Texas" Guinan's night club in New York during his term as ambassador from Chile, has reached the highest point in his career.

Davila, himself a newspaper correspondent, made copy for Washington reporters as soon as he arrived in October, 1927, to present credentials to President Coolidge. Somewhere en route the ambassador lost his formal clothes. The presentation ceremonies were delayed while a local tailor completed a new wardrobe.

It was while Davila was in Washington that the Tacna-Arica dispute between Chile and Peru was brought to a successful conclusion through direct negotiation.

Socialist State Decreed in Chile

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, June 4.—Chile's revolutionary junta tonight issued the following manifesto:

"The country's chaos, due to absolute economic and moral bankruptcy, moved us to overthrow the ominous government of oligarchical reaction, which has only served the greedy interests of foreign capitalism without attending to the urgent necessities of the country.

"Unemployment has resulted, producing misery and hunger among the working classes. We are not guided by small ambitions or hates. We seek only economic liberation and the triumph of social justice with a new Socialist republic which will assure all Chileans the right to live through productive work.

Hope to Restore Riches.

"The new régime will assure the organization of a national economy under state control, will discipline the productive forces and restore with energetic measures Chilean riches, not for the satisfaction of a corrupt oligarchy but for the welfare and health of the people.

"Against the endeavors of foreign capitalism we will strictly maintain our duty to strengthen the control of our producing sources, which until now have been entirely in the hands of corporations with motives contrary to the collective interest. Our aim is to work from this foundation to true economic independence.

"In building up this new state, we are far from influences of any sort of imperialism, be it foreign finance or Russian sovietism. The famine, nakedness and helplessness, which have thrown into desperation the great masses of unemployed workmen, will be immediately remedied, for which purpose we will resort to huge fortunes, prevent speculation on living commodities, end the dispossession of unemployed tenants from their homes and give shelter to the many who today have none.

Clamor for Justice.

"We have the conscience of interpreting the public sentiment. A unanimous clamor for justice rings through the nation, impoverished on account of the negligence of authorities and the egoism of the privileged class.

"The disorder of economic forces, the crisis of moral values and the mean play of political parties have put the nation face to face with a final disaster or a change of régime. The impulse of national conservation has been imposed as a second alternative.

"The action of the new régime will define its character, and what it may do in favor of Chile shall stand as its most high and lasting justification."

The manifesto was issued at the revolutionary general headquarters at the El Bosque aviation school.

HERRIOT TO BASE FRENCH POLICY ON WORLD RECOVERY

PARIS, June 4.—(AP)—Premier Edouard Herriot's new government, sworn in today, will base its policy on energetic collaboration with other nations in the solution of the world's economic problems, the premier's spokesman said today.

Raymond Patenotre, 32 year old American born member of the chamber of deputies, who is the premier's principal economic adviser, said that one all important factor in the future is the close collaboration of France and the United States in the field of business and that achievement of this coöperation will be one of his chief's objectives. The problems that the world faces now, he said, are too much for a single nation to handle. Patenotre probably will attend the Lausanne conference this month with the premier. He is known here as a bimetalist and is in close touch with the members of the United States senate who fall into the same category.

FIND 'SKYSCRAPER BURGLAR' LIVES IN $40,000 HOME

Melville Reeves, the "skyscraper burglar" of more than a decade ago, has been living in a $40,000 home at Ridge road and Park drive, Kenilworth, police of the suburb revealed yesterday. Reeves, his wife and 9 year old daughter, Donna, have occupied the home for two years.

In and out of the police spotlight for more than 15 years on charges of burglary, but convicted of none, Reeves was arrested last Tuesday when Sergt. Ernest Pieske of the homicide squad caught him as he emerged from a basement window of the London Guarantee building, 360 North Michigan avenue. He was carrying a kit of burglar tools and was identified by a building watchman as the man who broke into an advertising agency office where $53 in stamps was taken.

Reeves was indicted by the grand jury Friday on two charges, burglary and possessing burglar's tools. His bond was fixed at $15,000, the same as that set in Municipal court when he was bound over to the grand jury. He is at liberty on the first bond, according to jail clerks, having posted real estate to meet it.

DUCE REPUDIATES U. S. DEBT UNLESS GERMANY PAYS

Calls Pact with Hoover "Only Technical."

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, June 4.—Italy's recent agreement with the United States on the method for payment of the war debt annuity postponed under the Hoover moratorium is "only a technical arrangement" and the Mussolini government still holds firmly to the position that if the war debts and reparations are not canceled, Italy will pay no more of her debt to the United States than she gets from Germany in reparations.

So Antonio Mosconi, minister of finance, told Senator Rolando Ricci, former Italian ambassador to Washington, in reply to a question in the senate today.

"Our accord on moratorium payments in no way weakens the firm position and interconnection of debts and reparations as defined in the senate a year ago," Mosconi said.

Similar to British Position.

The Italian position on the moratorium agreement with the United States is thus revealed as similar to that pronounced in the British house of commons recently, and is regarded with interest here as foreshadowing developments in the conference on debts and reparations to be held at Lausanne this month.

Mosconi in his address to the senate on state finances devoted a good part of the speech replying to criticism by several senators on excessive spending. The minister repeated what he told the chamber three weeks ago, that Italy will not attempt to balance her budget now, but that this is not a permanent abandonment of policy. He said the budget will be balanced as soon as the economic slump is overcome.

criticized Italy's military expense, Mosconi declared:

"No finance minister can take the

In reply to Senator Nacona, who responsibility of cutting military expenses before the Geneva disarmament conference has attained concrete results."

Balks at Interest Rate Cut.

He also told Senator Frederico Ricco that the Fascist government does not consider reduction of the interest rate on state securities as a measure of economy.

While all possible economies have been and are being made, he said, "our budget may be designated as a waiting budget. That is, it is awaiting results of the international debates now going on regarding debts and reparations and is awaiting developments in the present economic crisis, about which no conjectures can be made at this time."

Mosconi revealed a deficit in the present year's budget of $124,000,000 as of April 30, and he estimated that the deficit envisaged for next year is $84,000,000.

Income Tax Receipts Up.

Income tax receipts have shown an increase while taxes on agriculture, industry, and commerce have fallen off $80,000,000 since 1930, he said. Thus, he pointed out, leaving the budget unbalanced is compelled by exceptional circumstances, but the government aims to balance it as soon as possible.

Senator Ancona criticized the government for floating so many short term treasury bonds which, he said, are absorbing the country's savings. Mosconi replied that the proceeds of the bond issues eventually provide for work on vital and productive enterprises.

BRITISH BUDGET FACES SHORTAGE; PLAN NEW TAXES

Social Service Economies Under Consideration.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 4.—Inspired prophecies of further trouble for British taxpayers continue to appear almost daily in the British press. It is now an accepted certainty that there will be a supplementary budget in the fall, which may mean further taxation.

At the same time there are certain to be heavy cuts in expenditures, which will affect the wages of many thousands of public employés and office holders. One estimate now is that there will be a 200 million dollar deficit by autumn on the present budget. Members of the cabinet have been warning of economies to be undertaken to meet this situation.

Hope for Arms Cut.

The most promising fields for economy are said to be armaments, pensions, state contribution to local services, and education. A sliding scale for pensions, based on the cost of living, has been suggested to take the place of the present fixed payments. With regard to armaments, the ministers still are so optimistic as to hope for something from the Geneva conference which may enable a saving.

A controversy is raging around the education policy. The tendency in recent years has been to increase the expenditure for education, which is regarded as a productive investment. The Tory majority now in power, however, has always opposed the idea of free education for workmen's children and now proposes to raise the school beginning age from 5 to 6 years and to reduce the leaving age from the recently fixed 15 to 14 years.

Plan Ration Cards.

Another suggestion is to change the method of unemployed relief from a money payment to ration cards, which would be honored at government stores which could purchase food in bulk at low prices. The advocates of this plan are being warned that they will probably add thousands of small tradesmen to the recipients of relief.

So far all of these proposals are only in the discussion stage, but it is certain that some of them, or something along similar lines, must be adopted to keep the budget balanced.

MORRISON LEADING IN SENATORIAL RACE IN NORTH CAROLINA

Charlotte, N. C., June 4.—(AP)—Senator Cameron Morrison, 63 year old former governor and militant dry, led his four opponents for the Democratic nomination as senator in early returns from today's primary.

Robert R. Reynolds of Asheville, who campaigned against the senator on a platform calling for repeal of prohibition, was second, while Thomas C. Bowie, former Superior court judge, and Frank Grist, state commissioner of labor, were virtually tied for third.

Arthur Simmons, a poultryman who filed as a candidate but made no campaign, received scant attention from the voters.

With 98 of the state's 1,823 precincts reported, the unofficial count was: Morrison, 4,698; Reynolds, 4,246; Grist, 712; Bowie, 1,224; Simmons, 58.

J. C. B. Ehringhaus of Elizabeth City, attorney and former legislator, ran far ahead of A. J. Maxwell and R. T. Fountain, the other two candidates for the Democratic nomination for governor.

NO WARRANT; GAMBLERS FREED.

Nathan Miller and Thomas McDermott, alleged keepers of a gambling house at 815 North Cicero avenue, and 19 patrons, were freed yesterday by Judge Thomas A. Green because police had no search warrant.

DR. WOOLLEY ATTACKS MOVE TO GAG THE PRESS

GENEVA, June 4.—(AP)—Dr. Mary Woolley, woman member of the United States delegation to the world disarmament conference, in her first speech today opposed the Polish proposals for restrictive measures on the press, motion pictures and other agencies of public information. Dr. Woolley said there were two chief dangers from the Polish plan. One, she said, was that concentration of moral disarmament would obstruct progress on material disarmament.

"What we need," she said, "is more leadership rather than moral disarmament. Moral disarmament might mask harmful restrictive legislation. Any change in human nature must come within and not from without."

She said she regarded the freedom to express differences of opinion as a healthy social factor and censorship of the press, the radio, the moving pictures or the theater as undesirable.

"What is needed," she said, "is to abolish selfishness. If civilization is to have a chance it must be founded on a new basis for international relationships."

Third Prisoner Held for Fire Which Killed Three

Siro Angelo, alias Frank Marcella, 17 years old, who confessed helping set fire to a building at 160 West Oak street in which two men and a 5 year old girl were burned to death on Oct. 22, was held yesterday at the Chicago avenue police station. He was arrested Friday. Angelo was indicted with Henry Thompson, 31, of 1943 Larrabee street, and Angelo Barone, 17, of 845 Milton avenue. Barone testified Thompson hired him and Angelo to fire the building. Thompson was sentenced to serve 50 years and Barone was freed.

URGE OPERATION FOR ASTRONOMER ACCUSED BY WIFE

Prosecutor Wants Him to Serve Prison Term.

George D. Carbary, Kane county state's attorney, declared yesterday that in his judgment John E. Mellish, astronomer and telescope builder of St. Charles, who was indicted nine months ago for ravishing a 15 year old girl, should be in prison.

Mr. Carbary said he was maintaining this attitude, despite the pleas of scientists who believe Mellish should be spared imprisonment in order to go on with his work, and of the Kane county judge and sheriff, who permit the astronomer to leave the jail for his laboratory at St. Charles each day.

"Should Pay Penalty."

"We have irrefutable evidence and a virtual admission of guilt from Mellish," the prosecutor said. "I think he should be made to pay the full penalty. But every time the case is called in court a continuance is ordered."

Other Kane county authorities concerned in the case are considering sterilization of Mellish as a solution of the problem which his indictment has raised. it was learned.

County Judge Olney C. Allen of Geneva, in whose court the astronomer's eight children are wards, said sterilization was suggested by psychiatrists of the Elgin state hospital. The psychiatrists, upon examining Mellish, pronounced him a genius and discovered that he was a victim of an unusual disease.

Discussed with Astronomer.

The matter has been considered by Judge Allen, Circuit Judge John K. Newhall, before whome the criminal case against Mellish is pending, and Leonard Mead, Geneva attorney, appointed by the court to defend him. The lawyer is understood to have broached the proposal to the astronomer, who is said to have expressed no aversion to such an operation.

For seven of the nine months since his arrest Mellish has been permitted by Sheriff Harry A. Crawford to go back and forth daily from the jail at Geneva to his laboratory at St. Charles to continue work on telescopes and lenses. Out of his earnings Mellish has been contributing $55 monthly to support of his children.

Like Present Arrangement.

"The arrangement seems to be satisfactory," Judge Newhall said. "Mellish has been able to go on with his work. The blow which the scientists claim astronomy would suffer by his imprisonment has been averted and the state has been relieved of the burden of caring for his children. Perhaps, if Mellish will submit to sterilization, a disposition of the case may be made. He might be sentenced and the nights he has spent in the county jail might apply on his term of imprisonment."

Scientists who have interceded for Mellish include Prof. Edwin B. Frost, director of Yerkes observatory of the University of Chicago; Dr. Storrs B. Barrett, associate professor of astrophysics, University of Chicago, and Dr. F. A. Firestone, professor of physics, University of Michigan. Scientists of Northwestern university and the University of Southern California are also reported to have pleaded on the astronomer's behalf.

7 Little Girls Raise $6 for Hungry Children

Seven little girls in the neighborhood of the 6000 block on South Racine avenue, recently organized into the Junior Crafts and Culture club. Their first charity whist benefit brought $6. They sent this to the Hungry School Children's fund through Betty Farrow, corresponding secretary, with the wish "that you will be able to continue your good work." Other gifts were $10 each from Florence Parliament and G. B. Perlstein, a frequent contributor, and $1.10 from "Fees," another friend of the fund. This brings the total to $48,111.31, received since the fund was started last October.

HAWAIIAN DISASTER FEARED AFTER SUICIDE IN GODDESS' VOLCANO

HIDO, T. H., June 4.—(AP)—The Goddess Pele is angry, old Hawaiians say, because a Portuguese youth slew his sweetheart and leaped with her body into the firepit of Kilauea volcano, which is the goddess' traditional home.

Natives construe the tidal waves which swept the mouth of the Wailoa river and lower Kuhio bay yesterday as an omen that Pele resents having two lifeless mortals at the threshold of her fiery kingdom. They expressed fear that the tragedy which ended the lives of Sylvester Nunes, 20, and Margaret Enos, 17, may lead to some dire calamity.

Nunes leaped into the crater Wednesday with the body of the girl who had spurned his love. The bodies have been located on a hillock 900 feet below the rim of the deep firepit and only 50 feet from the restless molten lava smouldering at the bottom of the crater. There has been talk of recovering the bodies, but just how to reach them remains an unsolved problem.

Summer Camp to Care for 1,000 Mothers, Children

Olivet institute expects to send 1,000 underprivileged mothers and children to its camp at Lake Geneva during the summer. In the past only 300 to 500 were accommodated each year, the Rev. Norman B. Barr, superintendent, said. A plea for funds for the camp has been launched. The institute is a social settlement located at 1441 Cleveland avenue.

BOMBER BEATS VAGRANCY 'RAP'; POLICE SCORED

Case "Poorly Prepared," Is Judge's Comment.

"The court further suggests to the commissioner of police that he should give some attention to the vagrancy bureau, so that evidence against gunmen and gangsters will be properly presented. Defendant discharged."

Before a packed courtroom in South State street court yesterday, in the presence of William H. Luthardt, attorney for the police department and head of the vagrancy bureau, Judge Thomas A. Green made his terse recommendation as he freed James Belcastro, sprucely attired "king of the bombers." The defendant, who is public enemy No. 4, was charged with vagrancy.

Belcastro had been arrested on May 7 on a warrant issued by Judge Green in a special drive against hoodlums. He was not carrying a gun at the time.

No Comment from City Hall.

City hall officials refused to comment on the arraignment of Luthardt by Judge Green, who lost patience as the state's evidence was refuted by defense counsel, E. M. Libonati. But they pointed to the items in the new city budget, waiting approval by the city council, as indicating that Luthardt's position will be abolished after the budget is adopted. No provision is made for salary for the head of the bureau in the new budget.

Failure of the prosecutors to present evidence that Belcastro was guilty of gun toting, that he had a criminal record, that he was a bomber, or, as charged in the complaint, that he was "an idle, dissolute person habitually frequenting tippling places" brought about Judge Green's criticism. Belcastro proved on the witness stand that he is a property owner and taxpayer, that he holds a partnership in a business and has an income from his real estate.

"After listening patiently, practically the whole day, to evidence introduced, and some fifteen police officers' testimony," Judge Green said, "it is peculiar to me that not one officer testified the defendant was a gunman, a public enemy, a vagrant or an idle and dissolute person. All witnesses admitted that so far as they knew, he had legal and lawful means of support.

No Preparation Made.

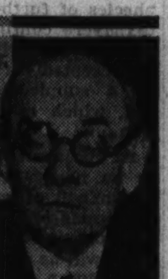
"The trouble has been that in this kind of case there has been no preparation, and twenty-five or thirty officers are sent to court without being interviewed. The assistant state's attorney has admitted he has no law to sustain a conviction and the court is compelled to find the defendant not guilty."

"All the evidence was submitted to Assistant State's Attorney Russell Root," Luthardt replied. "Mr. Root approved the evidence and a warrant was therefore obtained. Mr. Root has ably represented the police in the case."

MURDER RATE OF U. S. CAPITAL NOW TOPS CHICAGO'S

This City Drops to 45th Place in Country.

Chicago has sunk to forty-fifth in position among the cities of the United States rated according to the percentage of murders per 100,000 population. Fewer murders are now committed in Chicago in proportion to its population than in Washington, D. C., seat of the national government.



HENRY BARRETT CHAMBERLIN.

In 1930 Chicago ranked thirty-ninth in the listing. A decrease in the murder rate sent it six places lower in the list. And the year of 1932 promises to send Chicago even nearer the bottom of the list if the first five months of the year are taken as an indication, Col. Henry Barrett Chamberlin, director of the Crime commission revealed yesterday.

130 Murders So Far.

Other large cities in addition to Washington, D. C., which Chicago trails in the rate of murder, are Cincinnati, Kansas City, Miami, New Orleans, Louisville, Memphis, and Houston.

Only 130 murders have been committed in Cook county thus far in 1932, the figures compiled by the crime commission revealed. A table showing murders committed during similar periods in previous years follows:

Year.	Murders.	Year.	Murders.
1925	171	1929	147
1926	155	1930	167
1927	163	1931	146
1928	161	1932	130

In the month of May only 11 murders were committed in Cook county, an extraordinarily low total, Col. Chamberlin pointed out. The usual average in the county for many years has been at least one murder a day.

The efficacy of capital punishment as a deterrent to murders was proved by Col. Chamberlin in statistics he cited. Back in 1919, he said, murder was a frequent occurrence in Chicago. The Crime commission started a drive against murder and succeeded in having four Criminal court judges appointed to hear murder cases alone.

Hangings Stop Killings.

As a result there were eight hangings in 1920 and 10 hangings in 1921. Those 18 hangings sent the murder total to record lows for all time, slashing the number in those two years to one-third the usual total.

There was only one hanging in 1922 and one hanging in 1923, with the result that the total of murders immediately rose to the former average.

In the last four years, the number of executions for murder has been slightly above the average.

CHARGES THEFT OF GAS; IS SHOT BY MERCHANT

Frederick C. Heller, 2252 North La Crosse avenue, an inspector for Peoples Gas Light and Coke company, was shot three times in the legs yesterday when he accused Ernest Santoro of stealing gas at Santoro's confectionery store, 9644 Commercial avenue. Santoro fled after the shooting and was sought by police.

Heller told the police that he discovered Santoro had piped the gas main around the meter in order that the gas consumption would not register. When he called Santoro to the basement and accused him, the confectioner drew a revolver, Heller said. Heller ran to the sidewalk. Santoro followed and shot him twice in the left leg and once in the right leg. Heller was taken to the South Chicago hospital.

Tell, in your own words, how and why Plymouth FLOATING POWER makes riding so much smoother and more economical

CAN YOU DESCRIBE the sensation of a Plymouth Floating Power Ride? Briefly. Simply. Dramatically.

We'll pay you handsomely if you can.

Pay you at the rate of $20.00 a word—many times the prices paid some of the most famous writers—if your description wins.

Read the simple rules in the box at the left. Follow them carefully. Get your entry form today. Any DE SOTO, DODGE or CHRYSLER dealer can supply you.

You'll want to ride in the new Plymouth, of course. Look at the car. Be observing. Ask Plymouth owners you know about their cars—about Plymouth performance.

Describe the sensations of a Plymouth Floating Power Ride. Tell what Floating Power does to an automobile. Write your impressions of Plymouth's patented Floating Power. Fifty words is the limit. Brevity will count. Ten words—five words—may win the first prize of $1,000.

Remember that Plymouth alone in the lowest-priced field has patented Floating Power. That Floating Power wipes out all vibration. That any car that hasn't Floating Power is out-of-date.

Comparisons will help you.

And don't wait! Get your entry form today. At any DE SOTO, DODGE or CHRYSLER salesroom.

RIOT AS SOCIETY WOMAN FACES BRITISH COURT

Faints on Stand as She Is Accused of Murder.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 4.—Mrs. Elvira Dolores Barney, wife of a New York singer and daughter of Sir John and Lady Mullens, fainted in the dock in Westminster police court today when she was charged with the willful murder of Michael Scott Stephen, 26 year old son of a London bank manager, who was found shot dead in her London apartment last Tuesday after a cocktail party. She was carried from the court by six policemen. Mrs. Barney pleaded not guilty.

Unprecedented scenes were witnessed when the court doors were opened. A great crowd of fashionably dressed young society men and women fought for admission. Several were injured in the crush. Police reinforcements were called to clear the doorway and attend the injured.

Parents Caught in Jam.

Mrs. Barney's parents had to fight their way through the mob to obtain entrance.

When several minor cases had been disposed of the clerk called for "case number eleven." The door leading to the cells was opened. A low moan was heard from the corridor. A dead silence ensued as Mrs. Barney appeared, leaning heavily on the arms of a woman relative and a police matron.

The accused woman's eyes were closed and she did not notice the crowd or even her mother and father, sitting a few feet away from her. She was in a state of semi-collapse.

Only formal evidence was given. Detective Inspector Winter related how, after asking Mrs. Barney if she thoroughly understood what he was saying, he formally charged her with murder. He stated that Mrs. Barney replied, "I did not shot him. I am not guilty."

Faints in Courtroom.

The police said they were not prepared to give further evidence today, whereupon the judge remanded Mrs. Barney for a week.

For the first time since entering the court Mrs. Barney lifted her head. She looked around in bewilderment as she gripped the dock rail and pulled herself to her feet. She swayed and suddenly crumpled and crashed to the floor, face downward. A vivid green handbag burst open and there was the tinkle of a broken glass mirror.

The woman was carried from the court. It was nearly an hour before she recovered from her faint. Later she was taken to Hollaway prison.

FUGITIVE SHOT BY POLICEMAN AFTER WILD CHASE

One of two men riding in a stolen automobile was shot late last night by Motorcycle Policeman William E. McCullough after a thrilling chase on the south side which reached a speed of 60 miles an hour at one time.

The wounded man is Clarence Hass, 30 years old, of 544 West 63d street. He was shot over the heart, and after receiving first aid at St. Luke's hospital, was removed to the Bridewell hospital, where it was said he probably would die. His companion escaped.

Policeman McCullough sighted Hass and his companion at 24th and State streets. He chased them to 20th street and Indiana avenue, where their car overturned. One man fled on foot and as McCullough reached the overturned auto, Hass tried to get away. He struck at McCullough and the latter fired one shot. The car which McCullough recovered was owned by H. H. Wickham, 10920 Longwood drive, and was stolen Thursday at 62d and Green streets.

Tear Bombs Rout Man Who Defies Police with Pistol

Tear bombs routed Joe Skasiski, 51 years old, from his second floor flat at 1701 Milwaukee avenue this morning after he had fired several shots out of his window, and then sent two more at a police squad. Police said he was drunk. Sergt. Ed Kennedy and his squad heard the first shots, and when they approached his flat Skasiski fired at them. Reinforcements were called. The tear bombs were then used and Skasiski gave up. He was taken to the West North avenue station.

CANADA SEEKING MEANS TO PUNISH 6 U. S. KIDNAPERS

Methods of American Drys Denounced.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, June 4.—Ways and means were discussed here today of bringing about the arrest and extradition of six Americans who earlier this week kidnaped a Canadian rum runner in the latest border flareup among the liquor smuggling gangs.

Around midnight Wednesday the six Americans crossed the border from Burlington, Vt., made their way to a farmhouse near Sweetsburg, Que., and forcibly abducted Armand Lalanne, a bootlegger, who jumped a $500 bail last December in Burlington.

Bondsman Is Named.

One of the six kidnapers is alleged to be Fred Yudas of Burlington, who put up the $500 in December, trusting the word of Lalanne that he would appear in court when called. Revenge for the "dirty trick" was the apparent cause of the kidnaping, which was apparently encouraged by the local Burlington officials, who expressed gratification when Lalanne was turned over to them by the kidnapers. The officials maintained that a bondsman could use force to produce a defaulting prisoner.

The case was climaxed at Burlington yesterday when Lalanne was sentenced to sixty days in jail.

Canadian circles are incensed at the methods used to bring Lalanne before the United States courts. Judge J. O. Lacroix, extradition commissioner at Montreal, declared today that the kidnapers should be brought to Quebec for trial.

Charges Criminal Offense.

In the opinion of Judge Lacroix, the abduction was a criminal offense that the six Americans should be made to pay for. How to bring about their arrest is a debatable question. The attorney general of the province has the power to have the men extradited and produced before the Criminal courts of Quebec, although it is not known whether this procedure will be followed.

Premier Taschereau of Quebec, who is also attorney general, declined to comment on the case, although admitting he is following it through the newspapers.

W. D. Meyering Elected Officer of Veterans' Group

Baltimore, Md., June 4.—(AP)—William D. Meyering, sheriff of Cook county, Illinois, today was elected a second vice president of the Second Division association, a group of world war veterans, and Chicago was selected as the 1933 convention city.

Admiral Is Judge

The third annual model boat regatta sponsored by the Young Men's club of Lake Forest, was held yesterday afternoon in the Great Lakes Naval Training station harbor.

More than 250 persons, most of them north shore boys, entered model craft. There were seven events, with four winners to each. The winners were awarded ribbons, which were presented by Rear Admiral Walter Crosley, commandant of the naval station. He was also the judge. Roger D. Bronson handled the regatta.

The principal event, a free for all race, was won by a 50 inch model schooner designed by Lawrence Freeman of Lake Forest. The boy won a similar event last year. Second place went to Gustav Hanson, an adult, whose boat was a model of the Enterprise, famous racing yacht.

ARREST OWNER OF TOURIST CAMP.

Porter J. Chadwick, owner of a tourist camp near Kankakee, was arrested yesterday by state's attorney's detectives on complaint of William MacBean, 4012 Ellis avenue, who said he gave Chadwick a $150 diamond pin and other jewelry for some lots in Wisconsin which Chadwick did not own.

CURTIS PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO HOAX INDICTMENT

New York, June 4.—[Special.]—John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk boat builder, who conducted the imaginary negotiations for the return of the baby son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, later found murdered, pleaded not guilty today at Flemington, N. J., to an indictment charging him with obstructing justice through his hoax.

Curtis Stays in Jail.

Judge Adam O. Robbins of the Court of Quarter Sessions, before whom Curtis was arraigned, set the trial for June 27. Col. Lindbergh will testify, according to Anthony M. Hauck Jr., prosecutor of Hunterdon county.

Lloyd Fisher, retained as local counsel for Curtis by W. C. Pender, his Norfolk attorney, sought unsuccessfully to have the bail reduced from $10,000 and Curtis remained in jail.

The whole arraignment occupied only three minutes, and Curtis' only comment was to thank the judge.

Deny Lindberghs Sail.

The indictment charged that Curtis "with force and arms . . . for the purpose of preventing and hindering the apprehension of the persons who committed the said kidnaping, did knowingly and willingly give forth an untrue report to Charles A. Lindbergh, H. Norman Schwarzkopf," and others.

A report was current today that Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh were on the Ile de France, which sailed for Europe at noon. This report was denied at the home of Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, Mrs. Lindbergh's mother, at Englewood, N. J. A friend of the family said that the Lindberghs had gone to Long Island.

Surprises Burglars in His Home and Is Shot in Arm

Milton Post, 78 years old, who owns a loop photography business, was shot in the left arm and slugged early this morning when he surprised three burglars in the basement of his home at 8156 Lake Park avenue. The men fled without any further attempt to loot the place. Policeman Albert Madden of the Stanton avenue station, tok Post to the Chicago Memorial hospital.

RUPTURE

Don't submit to avoidable operations or the use of antiquated trusses, as they all set where the lump is and not where the opening is.

The opening is seldom larger than a dime, no matter the size of the rupture, and in all cases can be retained with the end of a lead pencil. The Spermatic Shield-Complex (Patent No. 747,247, No. 1,237,709, and other patents pending) is a scientific achievement in a highly specialized art. It will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, but contracts the opening in 10 days on the average case by stimulation. Infinitely superior to any instrument method of operation, and produces results in no other way obtainable. All cases are secure a lifetime as against any further trouble or expense. Large or difficult cases or incisional rupture (following operations) specifically solicited. This instrument received the only award in England and in Spain, producing results without surgery, harmful injection, medical treatment or prescriptions with distinguished personal patrons of all nations. Get booklet on "The Fallacy of Surgical Procedure."

WHO SAID HARD TIMES? 6,184 SAIL FOR EUROPE

Exodus of Vacationists Is Largest Since 1929.

BY TOM PETTEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 4.—[Special.]—The piers of the North river were busier and gayer today than they have been since the summer of 1929 when people flocked to Europe just to spend their money. Five liners sailed for England and the continent carrying 6,184 passengers, and twice that many friends came to shout bon voyage to happy faced vacationists.

The carnival air along West street and on the docks was in direct contrast to the gloom of the bread lines and municipal lodging houses only a few blocks away. Florists' boys ran up and down the gang planks of the Ile de France burdened with roses, orchids and the lesser blooms; telegraph messengers hurried by; there was an atmosphere of prosperity and happiness on all sides and the depression was the subject matter of jests despite forbidding headlines in the afternoon newspapers and scenes of unemployment along the street from which the piers jutted.

Low Rates Draw Customers.

The New York social register, the theatrical and movie world, notables of business, education, science, politics, and diplomacy lined the rails and mingling with them were a lot of less distinguished people who still have (or must have had) money in the banks. Steamship and travel representatives expressed confidence that 1932 was going to be a good "trippers" year. Among the incentives influencing the exodus were:

The rate cuts of from 20 to 50 per cent made by virtually all the lines in the spring which makes it possible to go to Europe comfortably and in style for less than $100 each way.

The favorable rate of exchange which in England, for instance, permits visitors to enjoy a holiday for about 25 per cent less than last year. One London hotel has advertised that six days may be spent in the British capital for as little as $20, the amount covering a tour of the city, hotel, meals, and traveling expenses.

Thousands Board Ships.

The fact that many in the "wealthy class" have found it as cheap or cheaper to close their expensive establishments and travel, at least during the summer months.

The crowds along the water front at noon were greatest on the French line pier. The Ile de France led the parade of liners down the bay and out through the narrows. She carried 1,471 passenger. The Swedish American liner Kungsholm carried 1,600; the California, of the Anchor line, had a passenger list numbering 1,115; the White Star line, Britannic, carried 1,000, and the Cunarder Carinthia, 998. About 1,000 additional voyagers are to be picked up at Boston by the Britannic and Carinthia.

Some of Those Sailing.

The celebrity list on the Ile de France included Beatrice Lillie, the actress; Alla Nazimova, screen and stage star; Miss Anne Morgan, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Dr. Alexis Carrel, Ellsworth Vines, the tennis star; Arthur Samuels, editor, who is looking for new artists and writers abroad; Mrs. Kenneth Collins, the advertising man's wife; and Harry H. Smith, George P. Putnam's secretary, who is going over to answer the flood of mail showered on Amelia Earhart, Mr. Putnam's ocean flying wife.

Vilma Banky, the screen star, said she was rushing to her native Hungary, "before I forget the language." Miss Juliette Nicolle, New York modiste, reversed the usual procedure and carried a design for a New York skyline hat to Paris.

The crowds on the other piers included fewer nationally known figures, but they had just as many friends down to speed the voyage. Their passenger lists were made up from tourists gathered from all sections of the country.

JUDGE PRAISED FOR LENIENCY TO FAMILY IN NEED

When Joseph Cirillo lost his job as an elevator operator recently, the Home Bank and Trust company foreclosed on a $5,000 mortgage on his cottage at 2601 North Parkside avenue.

On May 9 Cirillo, with his wife, Amelia, and their six children, appeared in the renters' court to oppose a writ of restitution sought from Municipal Judge Samuel Heller by the bank attorneys. The judge issued the writ but ordered that it be stayed until June 17, when the children will be out of school and able to aid their parents.

Soon afterward the bank lawyers filed a petition in Superior court for a writ of mandamus to force Judge Heller to expunge the stay from his order. Yesterday Superior Judge Frank H. Hayes dismissed the petition. "It is my personal inclination to praise Judge Heller for the decision," said Judge Hayes.

Attorney Robert Cantwell Jr., who represented Judge Heller before Judge Hayes, told the court a charitable organization has been informed of the family's plight and will care for the group.

DEBT, THEN AND NOW.

The old fashioned American regarded debt as a broken leg. Misfortune might give you one, but then there was no doubt that you were handicapped. You were exposed to the worst consequences of trouble. A man with two good legs might save himself, but the poor devil with only one he could use probably would go under. A mortgage was a burden which no one treated lightly. It could be the family terror. A family in debt had given hostage to fate and would worry until it was clear.

Such a theory brought a good deal of self-denial to the average family. Many desirable things were definitely out of calculation. The family did not expect to have a team of horses. Carriages were for the family which had the big house in the half block behind the high iron fence.

It is also true that there were not so many things to be desired after the house had been comfortably furnished, a sufficient table set and decent clothes provided. The temptations to overspend were not so numerous or pressing as they later became. The change came with a greater feeling of security in life and with an increase in the number of desirable things which seemed generally procurable. It is natural enough for people to believe in the permanence of conditions they like. Most human optimism arises from some such belief. There being a feeling of security, the contracting of debt to obtain things the possession of which otherwise must be deferred until saving made it possible did not seem imprudent.

It seemed rational for people to assume that they could use the future for enjoyment in the present and have at once the desired pleasures and conveniences. Debt lost most of its terrors. It became a part of a normal procedure of living. One assumed the continuance of a certain revenue and based a scheme of future liquidation upon it. No doubt most people did not feel that they had abandoned a prudent plan of life for a reckless one. When times changed the aspect of debt changed with them. It returned to its old significance. The crippled leg was in evidence again.

If the old timers had been overcautious and had narrowed their lives by their prudent conduct their successors came to perceive that they had assumed obligations entirely too lightly. Debts made readjustments difficult or impossible. Public bodies and private individuals have found that in essentials the new era was not as new as it appeared to be. Some of it was as old as Adam.

A SPENDER'S ALIBI.

A Wisconsin reader sends a letter received by him from Senator Blaine in response to a protest against high federal expenditures and taxation. The senator says he is receiving hundreds of letters on this subject, we are glad to note, and must answer by a general letter. He grants that the federal government should spend "no more money than is necessary" and asserts that he is "doing his share to balance the budget" and to impose only those taxes that are "necessary to the essential operation of government."

What Senator Blaine thinks is his share in balancing the budget and what he thinks are necessary taxes can best be discovered by an examination of the record in which we are not able at this moment to indulge ourselves. But we think remarks in the letter, without any reference to Senator Blaine's previous utterances and activities, give light. For while he bravely asserts that services and functions that are not essential to preserve what he calls "the people's investments" can well await better times, he explains this interesting term by declaring that "in the last 150 years America has built up a wonderful social organization, with enormous investments in property, education, public health, and a multitude of other investments, without which there would not be security nor progress." "Those investments," he declares, "should not be impaired or destroyed."

In other words, Brother Blaine after giving lip service to economy presents an alibi for any or every piece of pork in the congressional barrel, for supporting any duplicating service which the federal administration has developed, every bureau, every languid worker on the federal pay roll. His alibi makes nonsense of his pious talk about expenditure that is not necessary and slickly avoids the whole issue. As a piece of evasion and pretense we commend it to the study of his constituency. It is full of warning that Blaine is not for any respectable retrenchment of the federal expenditure, but proposes to "do his share" in maintaining it under the hypocritical guise of "social organization."

Another measure of his sincerity is in his remark that "in this connection we should not overlook the fact that 78 per cent of all federal expenditures is for past and future wars." "The past cannot be avoided," he says, "but why burden the people for future wars?" a gem of pacifist demagogy to cover his dodging of the retrenchment issue.

To begin with, if we take the year 1931, the so-called "expenditures on past wars" were 47.5 per cent, the alleged expenditures for national defense 17.1 per cent of the total federal expenditures for that year, making a total of 64.6 per cent, not 78 per cent. A little discrepancy of 13.4 per cent may not impress Senator Blaine, as a champion of the people's investment, but waiving such negligible matters, we revert to his query "why burden the people for future wars?" In other words, the barn has burned down several times and we are paying for it. Why make any preparation in case it burns down again?

What Blaine wants to imply is that expenditure on national defense is an unnecessary burden, but he says that the "enormous investment in property, education, public health, scientific research and a multitude of other investments" is a wonderful social organization "without which there would be neither security [sic] nor progress." Defense expenditure is a burden and Blaine wants to know why it should be carried, but the mountain of federal bureaucracy is the "people's investment," which must not be impaired.

Not while Blaine and his like can manage it, not while the tax eaters can keep their hands in the till.

NAVAL BASES AND DEBTS.

Discussing a matter to which THE TRIBUNE has repeatedly adverted, Capt. Dudley Knox, one of the most thoughtful of our naval officers, remarks that "if any further reduction of war debts is to come out of the current revival of that question it is to be hoped that the United States will not again overlook the fact that our principal debtors possess territorial assets which are not indispensable to them, but would be of great value to us." He refers especially to the British islands of Bermuda and Trinidad in the Atlantic and to the French Marquesas islands and the British Solomon islands in the Pacific.

None of these territories is of any importance economically, but their possession would be of substantial advantage to us for the protection of our shores and our commerce in case of war, whether we were engaged or not. They would give us bases for our naval ships, the lack of which now is a handicap to our defense that we are in our present mood indifferent to, but some day are likely to feel acutely. As Capt. Knox points out, in a short but pithy article in the current United States Naval Institute Proceedings, "the problem of protecting commerce is closely related to naval bases. When such positions are located at intervals along the line of merchant traffic a much smaller number of naval ships are needed to guard the trade than if the naval guards are forced to depend only upon home ports for the replenishment of fuel and machinery overhaul and repairs. Or, stating the case another way, a certain number of ships having outlying bases available to them can give much greater security to commerce than if these bases were not available."

For these reasons the British have established and firmly hold a magnificent system of bases covering the main trade routes in every ocean, whereas we have not only failed to acquire such bases, but, as Capt. Knox points out, have actually weakened our ability since the late war to defend not merely the Philippines, which we may give up, but our commerce in the far east, which, notwithstanding our present conditions, we ought to realize will some day be of great importance to our prosperity. As a result of the war Japan especially has acquired the Caroline and Marshall islands, which are athwart our lines to the Philippines and the Asiatic mainland.

The present value of our trade with the east in such commodities of import and export as rubber, tin, jute, silk, lumber, petroleum, automobiles, and the great variety of manufactured articles which Asia wants and we can supply should admonish us of the need for securing our access to its markets. This trade is already of importance to us and will be much more important to us in the future. Its interruption will be a serious blow at our future prosperity, as we ought to realize at this time, when our present trade has been paralyzed by other than military conditions.

The grave preoccupations of the present should not blind us to the future. It never blinded the British, who developed a great empire and worldwide trade through foresight and persistence in good times and bad.

We are constantly being told that our gold reserve and tariff protection prevent our debtors from paying their debts to us, but the suggestion that part payment might be made in territorial cessions, of little economic value to our debtors, but of commercial and defense value to us, has been brushed aside as inconsistent with the dignity of great states. Repudiation of debts seems not to be. The real weakness of our proposal is at home, where our government, preoccupied with experiments in pacifism, has failed to advance, much less press it with the vigor our debtors would show if the conditions were reversed.

"PUBLIC MORALS."

Remarks of Deets Pickett, leading dry, upon Gov. Roosevelt's recent declaration in favor of returning liquor control to the states are an example of the moral quality of professional prohibition which has made it a disreputable partner of the churches that support the prohibition experiment. That the remarks are those of the editor of the Voice, organ of the Methodist board of temperance, prohibition, and public morals, gives them an authority and significance which must be uncomfortable for conscientious members of that denomination.

Mr. Pickett explains that "in view of two recent wet statements, Gov. Roosevelt can certainly not be the first choice of the drys in his party," but he recalls that when in Washington they knew him as a dry, and his wife, unless she has recently changed, is a prohibitionist. Gov. Roosevelt, says Mr. Pickett, "is a man who has no natural sympathy with the saloon"—such as, we are to infer, President Hopkins of Dartmouth, President Hibben of Princeton, President Butler of Columbia, and the tens of thousands of men and women now demanding the end of the prohibition evil. On the whole, it is to be gathered from Mr. Pickett that Gov. Roosevelt is not to be cast into the outer darkness as "a soaking wet," and, while "it is no particular compliment [sic] to a man to say that he has made a statement for political purposes only, we" [Mr. Pickett and his co-laborers] "cannot get away from the assumption that Mr. Roosevelt did just that when he threw a sop to the wets recently." And Mr. Pickett adorns the records of the experiment of noble motive with the following: "His" [Gov. Roosevelt's] "statements were so long delayed that it may be surmised he considered them necessary to hold his New York support, without which he would be helpless in the convention, and, having made them, it is hoped [sic] that he will consider that his obligations to the wets in his party have been discharged."

Does this represent the "public morals" cherished by the board of temperance, prohibition, and public morals?

MILITARY CONTROL OF WASHINGTON SOCIETY.

When Mr. Stimson came back from the Philippines, where he had been governor general, and became secretary of state, he brought with him his military aid, Capt. Eugene Regnier of the cavalry. The secretary of state needs considerable social assistance and Capt. Regnier continued on with him, administering the protocol not only on Mr. Stimson's estate at Woodley but in affairs of which the protocol division of the state department is supposed to have charge.

The house appropriations committee cut Capt. Regnier out of the army supply bill and Mr. Stimson protests that it is mighty odd the only enthusiasm for economy revealed in congress should be concentrated upon his social secretary. Secretary Hurley of the war department being asked as one secretary by another to do something about it, appears to believe that the army should not pay for the conduct of the state department's garden parties.

They are being charged to war and not to diplomacy, giving Senator La Follette further occasion to say that Mr. Hurley's expenses are ruining the country.

Mr. Stimson has probably made the point—if he has not it is there for him to make—that conducting social affairs in Washington is a military operation. If a one man army can do it it's a good one man army. A cautious commander would not undertake it without tanks.

WE DON'T BELIEVE IT

A STATEMENT in which probability is stretched to a point where credulity ceases to be an active human function: "It seems only fair that if the government is going to buy bottled water for one house of congress it ought to be equally generous to the other house of congress. Incidentally, the city water of Washington is very palatable and pure. The probability is that many senators drink it in their homes, boarding houses, or hotels."—Washington correspondence of the New York Evening Post.

THE ITALICS ARE OUR OWN

THE STILL BETTER than the human race—an appreciation of the English people by one of them—no other source of appreciation would be qualified for appreciation: "The Preface to Shakespeare is a magnificent panegyric, although the moralist did not approve of the morality and the lexicographer did not approve of the style. Johnson had a passionate interest in human beings, and all humanity is Shakespeare's province. Chaucer, like Shakespeare and Dickens, is an interpreter of human beings (English, of course, which is better still), and Mr. Chesterton, although he has many facts and fancies to expound about the Middle Ages and the Renaissance and Roman Catholicism, is primarily concerned with Chaucer's persons and personality." (From a review of G. K. Chesterton's "Chaucer" by George Rylands in the London Spectator.)

GOD'S COUNTRY

AMERICAN self-satisfaction is generally regarded as the outstanding characteristic of the birds of freedom, but in reality it is naive, seldom quite convinced, and often pale in comparison with other national gratifications in self. There is an American bluster about God's country and it makes a noise, but the Englishman's assumptions in the matter constitute an institution, like the British constitution. They are parenthetical in most of John Bull's observations of life and implied in all of them. Another imposition upon general credulity is the legend that the English feeling is too profound for expression. It's always being expressed. It can't be suppressed. Whatever may be the context a little ointment from the perennial springs of English contentment will drop upon it.

SENSATIONAL sign of the times found at the edge of a street excavation: "Men Working."

COMRADE ZACK FOSTER'S endeavor to interest the young people of the University of Chicago in communism and the dictatorship of the proletariat carries the doctrine of manual labor autocracy to students who wouldn't be where they are if they intended to work with their hands for their living. The organized manual workers do not listen to the comrade. The children of the bourgeoisie are interested, confirming Mr. Foster's conviction that the bourgeois class is intellectually unfitted to survive.

MR. HOOVER is a diffident man, as was illustrated when he went to Capitol hill to deliver his emergency speech on taxation. The trial this personal appearance was to him was apparent to all observers. The occasion, if it were to be used for the greatest effect, required the buoyancy of Roosevelt, even Mussolini's flair for theatricalism. The opportunity, if there was one against the opposition Mr. Hoover faced, was one for the polished rhetorician. Mr. Hoover is an almost bashful President.

THE TAX INCREASE BILL as it left the senate had run the new takeup to one billion and a little over. The economy bill when it came up in its turn proposed a savings of $238,000,000. If the figures had been turned about the budget would have been balanced without knocking the citizen off his balance.

An economy bill of one billion and a tax increase of $238,000,000 would reduce the federal government to its grandfather's size and substitute private for public works. A pyramided bureaucracy would be demolished and a simple administrative government would remain. The "general welfare" would not then be the whole substance of the American constitution.

Modern excavations uncover magnificent ruins of great public works and insignificant remains of private homes. The public works were enormous; the private possessions were unimpressive. The pride of the state was in public works and the ruins are magnificent. It may be overlooked that they are ruins. The state builded itself to death.

THE LARYNX.

A CORRESPONDENT asks for an article on the larynx, its diseases, and possible cures.

The larynx is the first part of the air tube lying beyond the nasopharynx. Just above it lies the crossroads, one of the very few in the body. At this crossroads the food highway crosses the air highway. The crossroads is located near curves on both highways and, in consequence, the location is not a safe one. The gate which closes off the entrance to the larynx is a double duty apparatus called the vocal cords and, to help this barrier keep food out of the air passages, nature has provided another barrier, called the epiglottis. If a person is a skilled investigator of his own machinery he can press down his tongue well and see the top of this second barrier—a semicircular flange placed back of the tongue root and pointing upward.

The protective arrangement is reasonably effective and food rarely goes into the windpipe unless the larynx apparatus is paralyzed—not even when a man tries to eat and talk at the same time. The likelihood that the food will go into the nose is greater.

The larynx extends only, say, one inch. It begins where the air tube leaves the back of the mouth and runs the width of two vertebræ, or nine cartilages. Beyond that lies the trachea—the same air tube but with another name. The only reason for setting aside this top inch of the air duct and giving it a special name is that within it lie the vocal cords—and these are of first importance—and between these cords lies the narrowest part of the entire breathing apparatus. This pass, like the Khyber pass and all other passes, is where potential grief always hangs around. The only one of the nine cartilages that the ordinary man knows anything about is the thyroid—the one he calls his Adam's apple.

It is worth while knowing about the two bands running across the larynx from front to back, not only because they are the gates to the larynx but because they are the organs of sound and, therefore, are necessary for speech. At one end these cords are tied to one angle of triangular cartilages. When these cartilages are swung around by the pull of certain muscles the cords tighten or loosen, changing the character of the sounds produced. This arrangement is exactly that used with fiddle strings. The shape of the larynx has a little to do with the voice, though control of the muscles and of the sounding boards of the nose and mouth is a more important factor.

The diseases of the larynx are not many, nor are they very important. Diphtheria is liable to locate there, but it is not a favorite site for it. Tuberculosis of the larynx occurs occasionally. It is a more serious disease than is tuberculosis of the lungs. Syphilis may involve this organ just as it may locate almost anywhere else.

When the upper respiratory passages are infected with those viruses that cause influenza, the common cold, and allied disorders, the infection is likely to involve the larynx. The only special importance that attaches to acute laryngitis, whatever its cause may be, is that the space between the vocal cords is not great and a moderate amount of swelling may completely close the passage, causing strangulation. This is a real danger in laryngeal diphtheria, in a few cases of acute laryngitis due to other causes, and in an occasional case of giant urticaria. It is a cause of alarm, though not of real danger, in a spasmodic condition known as croup. In any inflammation of the larynx the cough is apt to be dry and exceptionally annoying. The huskiness which singers sometimes develop is apt to be due to a very mild chronic laryngitis. In many cases it is due to nodes on the vocal cords, a condition that may be compared to corns on the feet.

MILK MAY BE CAUSE.

Mrs. C. B. J. writes: At Christmas time my 13 months old boy had a small rash on his chin and since then it has got constantly worse, until now it is on both sides of his face, his chin, and under his chin. Some days it is better and then it is worse again. It is red and acts as if it might be chapped, but it will not respond to any treatment. It gets rough, like chapped skin. One person remarked that his milk might be too rich, and I have been adding some water to it. But that does not seem to help. I very seldom use soap on his face, and then not directly.

REPLY.

The usual cause of this form of chap or eczema in children is the food or some ingredient thereof. When it occurs in a young child, the chances are strong that milk is at fault. A child of 13 months can fatten and grow on a diet that contains no milk, and on such a diet the skin trouble should disappear. He can have meat, eggs, soups, cereals, vegetables, fruits, soy bean milk, vegetable milk, breads, crackers, and butter.

TREATMENT FOR CROUP.

Mrs. A. S. K. writes: When my son was 3 years old he had whooping cough in a severe form. It ran its course. I did not use inoculations. Now he is 6, and during these last three years he develops very heavy colds which sound like the croup. He usually runs a fever. These colds can be loosened only with a plaster on his chest.

1. I am told this will all cease when he becomes 7 years old. Is that true?

2. Does whooping cough leave the lungs weakened?

REPLY.

1. No.

2. Sometimes it does, but "lungs weakened" is very vague.

I judge your son is of the croupy type. This physicians call the spasmophilic diathesis. Children of that type are generally benefited by ultraviolet, vitamin D preparations, and lime in some form.

WHEEZE IN THROAT.

Mrs. R. G. writes: Our second child, a girl now 6 months old, is 22 inches long and weighs 13 pounds. She is small boned but very fat. At 2 months she caught a cold, and ever since then she has had a wheeze. The doctor here said her lungs are clear; that it is a cold in her nose and drains into her throat. But she does not show any signs of a cold in any way. She is healthy in every other way.

REPLY.

If she is not getting liver oil or viosterol, she probably will be better off if you will give her some. She should be improved by getting more lime and more foods rich in lime. Among these are milks, cottage cheese, cereals, and vegetables. She is old enough to be getting vegetable juices and soups. She needs sun baths.

A WAITING MATTER.

Chicago, May 26. — [Friend of the People.] — I am desirous of learning whether there is any intention of the bus line running a feeder bus south to 85th street on Damen. You will agree that this should be done due to the fact that between 83d and 85th between Damen and Seeley the population is increasing rapidly. The only transportation we have now is seven blocks to Ashland or five blocks to 79th street. F. W.

The traction settlement ordinance approved at a special election, July 1, 1930, provides for the extension of South Damen line to 87th street. However, as proceedings testing the validity of this ordinance are now pending in the Supreme court of this state, the city council has extended the time for its acceptance to Jan. 31, 1933. There is no prospect, therefore, of any extension of the service on this street for at least another year. JEFFREY A. O'CONNOR, Commissioner, Department of Public Service.

JOINT TENANCY PROPERTY.

Chicago, May 27. — [Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Can a piece of property held in joint tenancy be sold by one party if the second party is not in favor of selling? 2. Can a participation suit break joint tenancy? 3. If sale has been effected by one party in joint tenancy, what recourse has second party of the joint tenancy arrangement? 4. First party in this joint tenancy has died. Regardless of sale effected, should not property automatically go to second party in joint tenancy deed? J. F.

1. Either party can sell his one-half except that if the property is a homestead both spouses must join.

2. Yes. We assume that you mean partition.

3. A conveyance of one-half would destroy the joint tenancy and thus cut off the survivorship feature. In our opinion a mere agreement to sell would not have this effect.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CONTRACT OBLIGATION.

Chicago, May 24.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I sold a house six years ago. The purchaser is paying $50 per month on contract. There is no limited time for the amount due. If payments are not met can party be put out? If so, how am I to go about it? There is a first mortgage of $2,000. W. S.

Subsec. 2 of sec. 5 of the forcible detainer act authorizes a suit at law for possession "when a vendee, having obtained possession under a written or verbal agreement to purchase lands or tenements and having failed to comply with his agreement, withholds possession after demand in writing." Sec. 3, as amended in 1931, requires 30 days' notice before suit. While in a mortgage foreclosure the defendant is sometimes permitted to enjoy the use of the premises during the 15 months allowed for redemption from the foreclosure sale, there is no such delay on these contract cases. The foregoing relates only to possession. To clear the title the vendor may have to file a bill in equity if the contract has been recorded, and the court, before entering a decree, may order the refund of an equitable portion of the purchase money. If the contract has not been recorded the vendor may resell clear of the vendee's equity. If the vendee within a reasonable time and before court proceedings tenders the amount due he can, in most cases, reinstate the contract.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

COULD BE DEPORTED.

Chicago, May 22.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Please advise me whether or not a person that came to the United States on a one year vacation passport in 1922, returned to Europe in July, 1928, [1] and came again to the United States in September, 1928, would be liable to deportation? 2. Isn't there a new law that says any person illegally in the United States can be deported at any time? S. A. W.

1. We assume that this second entry was illegal. In such case he could be deported.

2. Yes.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JUNE 5, 1916.

LONDON.—The British admiralty issued a statement saying that it has proof that the Germans lost at least eighteen warships in the North sea battle, including several of the larger type, and claims that in reality instead of being a disaster to the British navy it was a victory over the Germans.

AMSTERDAM. — A semi-official statement from Berlin concerning the naval battle off Jutland says that the British lost twenty ships. It denies the big losses to its fleet claimed by the British admiralty.

BERLIN.—The German drive on the Verdun front between the Caillette wood and Damloup, northeast of the city and near Fort Vaux, is progressing favorably, the war office announced. It says that several attacks were made by the British against positions won by the Germans east of Ypres, but were everywhere repulsed.

ROME.—Repulse of strong attacks by the Austrians southeast of Arsiero in the southern Tyrol, in the Posina sector, was announced by the war office. The desperate struggle for the possession of Monte Sengio is continuing.

CHICAGO.—Chicago began to take on a real convention aspect when four big state delegations arrived for the Republican national convention. Fourteen more state delegations are expected today. The Old Guard of the party made overtures to Col. Roosevelt to enter into a treaty based on his withdrawal as a candidate for the nomination for President in the Republican and Progressive conventions, the elimination of Chief Justice Hughes in the convention by defeat or enforced withdrawal, and an agreement between Roosevelt and the Old Guard upon the nomination of one of the minor Republican candidates, with the understanding that the agreement will carry with it the endorsement of the nominee by the Progressive convention. When these overtures became known in the Roosevelt camp, Progressive party leaders served notice that a third ticket will be placed in the field unless the nominee of the Republican convention be Col. Roosevelt or a Republican whose attitude is satisfactory on questions of preparedness and Americanism.

SAVING SOAP.

Urbana, Ill., May 23.—On several occasions we have called attention to the waste which results from the use of hard water. But when we have said that in our town a ton of soap a day is wasted we have met a tolerant smile which seemed to say, "O, that's just some professor's test tube theory."

About a year ago we decided to try to find out for ourselves whether this was only a theory. It was really Mr. Bonvoulair, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Chicago Heights, who suggested to us that we make a sale survey of the soap consumption in towns which had hard water and in towns where soft water was available. This was obviously a job for an economist rather than a chemist, so we appealed to Dean Thompson of the University of Illinois college of commerce. He assigned Mr. H. W. Hudson of his college to the task and the results have been most interesting.

For this work two towns with very soft water were selected to serve for reference or a base. They were Superior, Wis., which has an almost perfect water, and Bloomington, Ill., whose new supply is highly satisfactory.

Then two towns in Illinois, whose names I will not mention, were selected to show the soap consumption where the water is hard. One of these towns had a very hard water, while in the other the water was of moderate hardness.

Mr. Hudson spent a good many months sending out questionnaires, compiling data, and finally making a store to store canvass to determine just how much soap was consumed in each town.

He found that if the towns with soft water are taken as a base the town which has a moderately hard water with a population of 30,000 is wasting a half ton of soap a day, or $180 worth, while the town with the very hard water and a population of 20,000 is wasting $224 worth of soap a day. The waste per year amounts to $66,000 in the town with a moderately hard water and $81,000 in the case of the town with the very hard water. Bloomington's savings in soap alone resulting from the new and improved supply amounts to more than $100,000. This saving would pay the entire cost of the new supply in ten years.

Now please note that these figures refer only to domestic consumption of soap. Laundries and hotels are not included. Nor have we made any estimate of the damage done to plumbing fixtures, water heaters, and steam boilers. Surely the waste due to hard water is a leak worth stopping.

A. M. BUSWELL,
Chief State Water Survey.

SECOND CLASS RATES.

Kalamazoo, Mich., May 24.—Congratulations on your editorial, "Second Class Rates," which appeared in this morning's TRIBUNE. As far as I know this is the first instance where any publication has had the courage to give perfectly fair treatment to a problem where the self-interests of the entire National Publishers' association were at stake and on only one side of the question. Thank you for the good example, and I hope other publications will follow it.

BARTLETT C. DICKINSON.

ON GOVERNMENT POLICY.

Chicago, May 26.—I notice in this morning's paper Alfred E. Smith does not agree with the President on the emergency relief bill. In my humble opinion they are both wrong. I do not like Smith's plan, as it means additional taxes, and the President's plan means the government getting more into business.

If railroads default on loans the government will have to take them over. Mr. Smith proposes to raise money by selling bonds as we did for war measures. At that time I bought bonds up to $5,000 worth, but I could not buy one at this time, and there are many thousands in my position.

The government must balance the budget. The sales tax I believe puts less burden on business. The government must reduce salaries, and 90 per cent of the bureaus must be dispensed with. I feel if the government keeps on getting into business we will have a form of government similar to Russia.

People out of work must be taken care of. My idea is for the government to sell bonds to people who have money, this money to be loaned to states, they in turn to loan it to cities, the states to pay this back to the government on long terms, and the cities to pay the states on the same terms.

Mr. Florsheim's proposal of a forty hour week is sound and a good solution to the unemployment problem.

JOHN HANSEN.

WATER SHORTAGE.

Chicago, May 25.—Ever since the Park Ridge water system was connected to our water main in Norwood Park we have been entirely without water in the northwest section on every warm day from about 5 to 8 o'clock p. m., which apparently is caused by the excessive use of the water for sprinkling purposes, and which seriously interferes with the preparation of the evening meal and with the care of the sick. Previous to the connection of the Park Ridge system we had an ample supply at all times, but apparently the needs of Park Ridge are more important than those of the Chicago taxpayers.

CHARLES F. FREUTEL.

AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE.

Chicago, May 25.—The insurance companies have admitted that it is to their advantage that the rule against all night parking be put into effect. Why should the police department be employed to help out the insurance companies when the taxpayers are paying their salaries to prevent crime? If the police department would give as much time to the major infractions of the law as they give to bothering a few poor people who are in reality not hurting any one, the taxpayers would be a lot better off. The insurance rates on automobiles have been increased as it is, so I fail to see the justification of this action.

TILTON ASSERTS LACK OF WATER CAUSES CANCERS

Testifies He Solved Mysteries of Disease.

"Old Doc" Lester Tilton of Clinton, Ia., took the witness stand in Judge Rudolph Desort's Criminal court yesterday. He hopes his testimony will convince the jury which is to decide whether he is guilty of conspiracy to practice medicine without a license that he, a man with no medical training, has discovered the cause of cancer and its cure.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles A. Bellows was elated over the bold stand taken by Tilton under the direct examination of Defense Attorney Irwin N. Walker. The prosecutor said that he will be able to prove on rebuttal evidence that Tilton is a quack and that his theories on cancer are absurd. Tilton told the jury that he had been able to discover something which has baffled science.

Calls Water Cancer Secret.

Cancer comes, according to Tilton's theories, from the lack of water. One of his curative medicines is a distillate of peat from the banks of the Mississippi river.

Tilton, a large, heavyset man of 60 years, was born on a farm at Viroqua, Wis., and spent a year at the University of Wisconsin. Then he went to Ottumwa, Ia., and started a screen factory, later becoming a locomotive engineer in Galesburg, Ill.

The witness said he started the study of cancer in Keosauqua, Ia., after he had developed a persistent sore on his face. Cancer had caused the death of his grandmother, he said, and was suspected of being responsible for his mother's death. He studied books on cancer and talked to physicians, he testified, and then worked in conjunction with a Dr. Lovesee to find a cure. In 1907 he found, he said, a "substance" [he did not give the secret of his black "specific salve"] which arrested the cancer in his own face.

Experiment with Tissues.

From that time on, Tilton said, he and various physicians and chemists who worked with him tried out compounds made from herbs and drugs, and experimented with chickens and rabbits, and also with some human tissues. Finally, with the aid of James Smith, a Clinton, Ia., chemist, the peat distillate was perfected. Dr. Robert G. Timms, formerly of the Chicago health department, helped out on the experiments, Tilton said. Dr. Timms is dead.

Tilton said he has treated 4,000 cancers and has come to the conclusion that they are "caused by a lack of water drinking." "All victims are poor water drinkers," he said. A bruise may give the cancer its start, he added. The witness told the jury that he asked for a test of his medicines in 1907 from the president of the American Medical association, but was refused. He reached the point where his medicine was tested at Northwestern university when court adjourned. He will resume his story tomorrow at 11 a. m.

DR. D. C. BRADY DIES OF INJURIES IN AUTO CRASH

Dr. David C. Brady, 26 years old, 1226 North Central avenue, a dentist, died at the Illinois Central hospital yesterday from injuries suffered May 22, when his automobile overturned near East Troy, Wis.

His death and one other increased the Cook county automobile death toll for 1932 to 471. The victim:

Unidentified man, about 65 years old. Died at the county hospital yesterday. He was struck by a milk truck Friday at Clark and Van Buren streets. Nick Paulos, 34 years old, 1340 East 55th street, was ordered held by a coroner's jury in Hammond yesterday for "reckless and careless driving" in the accident which caused the death of Miss Dorothy Smith, 19 years old, of Chicago, and injuries to her sister, Josephine, on May 15, in Hammond. The girls were hitch hiking to Ohio, and were riding in Paulos' car.

Miss Elizabeth Dalton, 71 years old, and her sister, Miss Bridget Dalton, 64 years old, 1108 Peale street, were seriously injured last evening in a collision at Avondale and Oliphant avenues.

WOMAN DRESSES AS WORKMAN SO SHE CAN SEE POPE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, June 4.—Vatican gendarmes today noticed a suspicious looking working man loitering around the entrance to the Vatican gardens, where the pope passes on his daily automobile ride or promenade.

Questioning revealed the intruder was a French woman disguised as a working man. She was arrested and turned over to the French embassy. The woman declared she had chosen this method to have a good look at the pope as she had been refused a ticket to the regular public audiences.

She had borrowed a workingman's clothes and checked her own clothes wrapped up in a package with the guard at the entrance to the Vatican. To make the disguise more perfect she was carrying a sack of cement on her shoulder when discovered. Great relief was felt by the Vatican police force when the woman was found to have been unarmed.

"There is no mystery. I just wanted to see the pope," the woman said.

MARINES MAKE MERRY IN ANNUAL RALLY

24 DAY CARNIVAL OF SPORTS READY FOR CONVENTIONS

Lake Front Will Be Scene of Big Program.

A 24 day sports and civic carnival, covering the periods of the two national political conventions, will be held at the Navy pier beginning next Saturday. It will be known as the Chicago Conventions exposition, and is designed to portray Chicago's eminence in industrial, commercial, cultural and other fields.

The sponsors say the exposition will include, among its early highlights, a colorful yacht regatta on the lake front at the conclusion of which President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia university will deliver an address on prohibition. This regatta will be held next Sunday, and is to be staged by Chicago yachtsmen in conjunction with the Crusaders.

350 Boats in Parade.

Some 350 lake boats will participate in the water parade. Commander Gene McDonald has been named as grand marshal of the marine show by Fred G. Clark, commander in chief of the Crusaders.

A number of women's clubs, it is stated, have agreed to participate in the pier exposition. Dr. Irene Behnke will head the women's activities. Several high schools will send their bands. Choral organizations will entertain.

Present plans include a wide range of general activities, many of them in the sports field. There will be motor boat races, sailboat races, cutter races, swimming contests, sculling races, boxing, track contests, gymnastics, basketball, tennis, archery, pingpong, and other features. A highlight will be a national billiard tournament featuring Willie Hoppe, Schaeffer, Kieckhofer, Rudolph, Greenleaf, and other well known players.

Air Show Also Planned.

It is planned to have all the outdoor activities, including a huge air show under the direction of Maj. R. W. Schroeder, extend as far as the World's Fair grounds and back to the pier.

The principal sponsor of the Chicago Conventions exposition is H. J. Miner of Evanston, a retired capitalist. Assisting him are Walter George and Maj. M. L. Bromberg. John Ross Reed is the general manager.

100 TEACHERS TO TAKE PARTS IN OPERETTA

A musical operetta will be presented next Friday night at the Auditorium theater by Chicago school teachers, under the auspices of the Chicago Teachers' federation. All reserved seats have been sold.

The presentation will be a takeoff on "The Mikado." More than 100 teachers, singers, dancers and others will participate.

The general theme of the production will deal with the plight of the local teachers. One of the numbers will be "The Paydays that Bloom in the Spring." Another will be the "Depression Ballet." Proceeds of the operetta will go for the benefit of teachers.

9 Escaped Felons Slain, 18 Caught, 43 Get Away

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, June 4.—(AP)—Nine prisoners who escaped recently from the Omoa penitentiary were killed today in a fight with troops who found them in the mountains. Eighteen were recaptured. The rest of the 70 who escaped in the jail break again got away.

SEIZE BEER AND ALCOHOL.

Frank Krogel was arrested early yesterday when prohibition agents raided a saloon at 6730 South State street and seized alcohol and beer.

700 ATTEND

Campaigns from China to France and back again by way of the Philippines and Central America were refought yesterday by some 700 former marines at their annual reunion here. They toured the World's Fair grounds in the morning and saw the White Sox whip the Browns in the afternoon.

A banquet in the Auditorium hotel last night completed the rally. Among the speakers were Maj. C. L. Fordney, U. S. M. C., representing Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, U. S. M. C., retired, who commanded the 2d division; George D. Gaw, representing Mayor Cermak; the Rev. Harris A. Darche, national chaplain of the American Legion; C. Wayland Brooks, assistant state's attorney; William Scherrer, commander of the Marine post, American Legion, which sponsored the reunion; Edward P. Dowling, chairman of the committee, and Ambrose Mahoney, president of the Second Division association.

The former marines came from their homes in all parts of the middle west.

IRELAND TO SEND DELEGATION TO OTTAWA PARLEY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, June 4.—The Irish Free State will send a delegation to the imperial enonomic conference at Ottawa, President de Valera said today. He added that nothing has happened to change his plans.

The names of the delegation have been communicated to Ottawa and will be published next week. The delegates will sail on the White Star liner Laurentic from Belfast on July 9.

The De Valera government is being fiercely attacked over the threatened closing of the Gallagher tobacco factory as a result of the increased tobacco tax. Sean F. Lemass, minister of education, today repeated his refusal to remit the tax but promised to find employment for the 300 workers who are threatened with unemployment. The Labor group is showing signs of embarrassment over the government's determination and may withdraw its support.

LINCOLN PARK ADDS 21 ACRES OF PLAY SPACE

Twenty-one acres of picnic and recreational grounds in Lincoln park will be opened to the public as soon as the grass has grown tall enough, probably in ten days, the park commissioners announced yesterday. The new park area consists of filled-in land stretching from the foot of Montrose avenue to the lake.

Another Lincoln park project, a new 9 hole golf course, will be opened on June 15. The entrance to the course is at Addison street.

La Porte, Ind., June 4.—[Special.]—The milk price war flared in the open here today when two drivers for a dairy which has been cutting prices during the last month were hijacked by forty men, believed by the victims to be farmers who sell milk to other dairies. The drivers were halted shortly after they left their dairy north of here. About twenty cases of milk were spilled.

SITE OF BATTLE SOUGHT TO END LONG DISPUTE

Bloomington, Ill., June 4.—[Special.]—In an effort to settle a long standing dispute over the accuracy of written history on the location of the old French fort at which the Fox Indians made their last stand in central Illinois, the McLean County Historical society today began excavations on the Joseph P. Smith farm, near Saybrook, Ill.

For more than a generation evidence has been accumulating that the Smith farm was once the site of a big battle. Finding of slugs and patina covered bullets, human bones, arrow points, and parts of weapons leads to the belief that the French engaged the Indians there.

Historians disagree, some even disputing the location given by Beauharnois and Hocquart to the French minister in a report dated Nov. 11, 1733, at Quebec.

Walter B. Douglas placed this fort in La Salle county on Covell creek. John F. Steward placed the location near Plano, Ill. Eaton G. Osman, state historian and student of Indian records, believes the site is nearer Bloomington than the Smith farm.

JAP WAR CHIEF SOUNDS WARNING AGAINST LEAGUE

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

TOKIO, June 4.—There is no friction between the governments of Japan and Russia that is likely to lead to serious consequences, Gen. Sadao Araki, minister of war, told a secret session of the diet today. Russia, he said, is not opposing Japanese policies in Manchuria, but is evidently formulating its own policy to meet changed conditions there.

More attention should be given to the attitude of the league of nations, he declared, for unfavorable action at the league meeting in September would have undesirable consequences on developments in Manchuria.

The secret session of the diet was held to deal with interpellations on the financial and military situations as regards Manchuria, the question of recognition of the new state of Manchoukuo and Russo-Japanese relations. Premier Saito said Japan would continue to assist Manchoukuo, but that no date could be set for recognition.

MUSSOLINI LAUDS GARIBALDI; QUEEN UNVEILS STATUE

Memorial to Hero's Wife Is Dedicated.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, June 4.—Red shirted Garibaldi veterans mingled with black shirted Fascisti on the top of Janiculum hill here today when Premier Mussolini, in the presence of the king and queen and within sight of the pope's Vatican apartments, delivered a fiftieth anniversary eulogy of Giuseppe Garibaldi, hero of Italian unity, whose leaders took Rome from the pontiff and made it the capital of Italy under the house of Savoy.

The occasion was the unveiling of a statue by the Neapolitan sculptor, Rutelli, of Anita Garibaldi, the Italian liberator's Brazilian wife and his intrepid companion on many campaigns. Her ashes were brought from Genoa and deposited in a crypt under the statue a few days ago.

Addresses Speech to King.

Closing his oration, Mussolini addressed the king:

"Sire, as long as the statue of this heroine dominates this hill of destiny the country will be strong and secure."

The new statue of Anita Garibaldi shows her on a galloping horse holding an infant child in one arm and brandishing a revolver with the other. It was molded from a true incident in one of Garibaldi's campaigns. It stands a short distance from an equestrian statue of Garibaldi himself.

The ceremony was attended by descendants of Garibaldi and high state and municipal officials. Queen Elena, who wore deep mourning because of the recent death of her brother, acted as godmother to the statue on the petition of Mussolini. At her signal after Mussolini's speech six firemen pulled a cord which released the Italian tricolor and exposed the statue.

Carry On Garibaldi's Work.

In his oration Mussolini declared that the black shirts of the 20th century are continuing the work of the red shirts of Garibaldi.

"Italy has regained her Alpine frontier and carried her banner to central Africa," he said. "Now she is preparing to live a much more ample life."

To foreign chancelleries at Rome today's ceremony was interesting as showing a relaxation of the tension and apparently closer relations between the triumvirs—the pope, the king and il duce—who rule the Italian peninsula in one way or another.

Avoids Friction with Vatican.

It was remarked that Mussolini is making more frequent public appearances with the king and also that in his speech today the premier avoided all reference to or polemics over Garibaldi which might have given offense to the Vatican which resented the presence of Garibaldi's statue on Janiculum hill overlooking the Vatican and which in the past regarded the position of the hero looking down on St. Peter's as almost an affront.

Three years ago in a speech in the chamber on the ratification of the Lateran pact, Mussolini made a remark which is said to have offended the pope when he declared that not only should the statue of Giordano Bruno remain in the public square, Campo di Fiori, and the statue of Garibaldi remain on the hill following the reconciliation with the church, but also that the new statue which was unveiled today should be raised at the expense of the Fascist government.

OAK PARK YOUTH IS IDENTIFIED AT "SHOW-UP"

Picked from 10 Blond Boys; Shot Motorist.

Danville, Ill., June 4.—(AP)—Ten blond college boys walked across the Vermilion county courtroom for a "showup" today and out of the group three witnesses picked William H. Blackburn, Oak Park, as the hitchhiker who shot and robbed Russell Gardner of Indianapolis after being given a lift in Gardner's automobile.

Gardner himself, still partly paralyzed from five head wounds, but able to walk without aid, was one of those who identified Blackburn. Harry Ludwig and Harry Bauer, linemen for an Indianapolis utility company, also recognized Blackburn. They had heard the shots and turned their spotlight on the youth as he raced away in Gardner's car after leaving him wounded.

Former Purdue Student.

A former Purdue university student, Blackburn is under bond on a fugitive warrant. Today's "showup" was to determine whether he is to be extradited to Indiana for trial on robbery and assault charges. De Witt Stillman represented Gov. Emmerson of Illinois and said he would lay the results of the hearing before the chief executive. Nine University of Illinois students, all of similar height and complexion, were brought here from Urbana to help determine whether the identification of Blackburn was correct.

Russel Burt of Chicago, attorney for Blackburn, argued that Blackburn's pictures had already been shown Gardner and identification of the defendant after seeing his pictures would not be conclusive.

Forced from Auto.

Gardner, purchasing agent for the Indiana highway commission, was driving from Lafayette to Indianapolis when he picked up the youth carrying a suitcase with a "Purdue" pennant. Near Indianapolis the youth drew a pistol, forced Gardner from the car, and shot him.

The Illinois students who participated in the "showup" were Ira Kyle, Elmhurst, Ill.; Frank H. Walker, Mount Vernon; J. E. Anderson, Rockford; Arthur Peltzer, Palo Alto, Cal.; Frank Hanafin, Litchfield, Ill.; B. L. Blatt, Joliet; William H. Maxant, River Forest; Harry Sahlin, Benton Harbor, Mich.; and H. V. Lundeberg, whose home was not announced.

WISCONSIN 'U' STATEMENT HITS POLITICAL FOES

Its Achievements of Last Year Are Listed.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Wis., June 4.—[Special.]—In a lengthy communication today the University of Wisconsin lists its achievements during the last year, "by which it has attempted to point the way out of the present crisis."

It was accepted throughout the state as a reply to charges made against it by several Republican regulars, led by John B. Chapple, Ashland editor and candidate for United States senator. In its opening paragraph, the communication says:

"The University of Wisconsin, target of recent attacks because of its traditional fight for freedom of intellectual thought and speech, has made important contributions during the last year toward efforts now being exerted toward the economic recovery of the state and nation."

Much space is devoted to discussion of the research work of the university.

Guides State in Slump.

"The results of these studies are in line with a recent statement by Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the university, in which he declared that research by the university on living problems of the state had had much to do with the relatively advantageous position Wisconsin holds in this period of depression," the statement says.

Holding firmly to the belief that if educational institutions, especially those supported by the taxpayers of the state, are to render their full service, they must through experimentation and research aid in solving the problems of the people. The Badger institution is attempting to help lead the way from economic chaos to state and national economic sanity.

"There are various ways in which the state university of Wisconsin has attempted to point the way out of the present crisis. During the last year research and experimentation along six different lines—tariff, public works, taxation, general economic survey, agriculture, and highway building costs—have been inaugurated, and much of it still is being carried on. The results of these projects have been made available to the state in particular and to the nation in general.

Host to Conferences.

"In addition to the valuable research projects, the university has been host to two general conferences. The first of these was the labor conference, held last July, when the general subject of state and national economic planning was considered from all angles. The second was a land utilization conference, attended by state and national leaders, at which the problem of idle land was attacked.

"The Wisconsin institution has, as in other years, also lent several of its most prominent faculty members to the state during that period, and some of them, on leave of absence, now are serving the people in responsible state positions.

"The motivating idea behind all these efforts is that the university not only can aid in economic recovery but also can make a major contribution toward preventing a recurrence of depression.

"The most notable of these contributions have been carried on in the field of economics. The university's economics department has carried on an extensive survey of both state and national economic trends in the various fields of industry and agriculture. Monthly reports showing the trends of business in the United States as a whole and in Wisconsin now are made available through university research.

Study of Tax Problems.

"Several studies of the tax problem as it applies to industry, agriculture and the small business man and wage earner have been made, and the reports printed in bulletin form. One of these was by George Loeffler and Prof. Harold M. Groves of the economics department, while the other was undertaken by Prof. John Guy Fowlkes of the education department.

PRISONER USES CHAIN ABOUT NECK TO BLOCK ESCAPE TO HANG SELF

Jacksonville, Fla., June 4.—(AP)—Arthur Maillefret, 19 year old prisoner, was strangled in a road camp cell last night by the chain placed about his neck to prevent escape and officers said he had chosen death as a final way out of confinement.

Prison guards said Maillefret, serving a nine year sentence for robbery and grand larceny, had deliberately held his feet off the cell floor to suspend himself from the overhead beam where the chain was fastened. A full investigation was ordered.

Officers said he first had been placed in close confinement with leather straps about his neck and body as a punishment for refusal to work for several days. He chewed these away slipped out of his clothes and fled.

After his recapture, the road camp officials said, the chain collar was substituted for the leather straps as Maillefret again refused to work and begged to be shot.

Several months ago the prisoner escaped from his guards, as he was being returned to Volusia county for trial. Handcuffed and in the darkness, he leaped from the automobile and dived from a bridge into the Halifax river near Daytona Beach. He was recaptured the next day.

DUKE TO SETTLE 500 FAMILIES ON ESTATE IN AFRICA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 4.—The duke of Westminster, one of England's greatest landlords, who recently disposed of part of his valuable property in Cheshire, has purchased 100,000 acres of land in Kenya colony, where he intends to settle 500 families of his London and Cheshire tenants.

The duke is being advised and assisted by two former colonial governors—his brother-in-law, Lord Beauchamp, and his cousin, Lord Stradbroke.

Last year the duke toured the cotton estates of Egypt. Egyptian cotton and coffee will be produced on the new ducal estate, which will be run on coöperative lines. A steamer has been chartered to transport the 500 families.

German Aviatrix Hops from Panama for South America

PANAMA CITY, June 4.—(AP)—Elli Beinhorn, German aviatrix, took off in her own plane today for Cali, Colombia. She plans to make a tour of South America.

FLOSSMOOR BOY AND GIRL WIN HEALTH TITLES

Acclaimed Champions of County Schools.

The new boy health champion of Cook county's grade schools, announced yesterday by Supt. E. J. Tobin, might easily have stepped out of one of Mark Twain's stories, red hair, freckles, grin and all. And the new girl champion, picture of health herself, could, with curls instead of a bob, easily have been Becky Thatcher.

The two youngsters, Melburn Smith of Flossmoor and Elda Koehler, who resides on a farm at Cicero avenue and 183d street, near Flossmoor, were winners in the final health contest selection from some 4,000 children in the county school system. The scores of all twelve divisional winners who were competing yesterday were so close that the three doctors, sitting as judges in the superintendent's office in the county building, found the score sheets of little aid in picking Melburn and Elda.

Judges Work All Morning.

The judging was conducted all morning by Dr. W. A. Evans, health editor of THE TRIBUNE; Dr. Hugh O. Jones, assistant to the president of the Chicago board of health, and Dr. L. W. Morrey, chief of the city health department's dental hygiene bureau.

Wreathed in smiles at the announcement were Melburn, who is 13 years old and is finishing the eighth grade in district school No. 161, and Elda, 11 years old, a seventh grade pupil in the Coopers Grove Evangelical Lutheran school. They stood erect and modest as Mr. Tobin gave them each gold medals for themselves and banners for their schools.

No presidential candidate ever was quicker in answering the barrage of questions from reporters. Like milk? O, boy! What do you play? Baseball, volleyball. Swim? Melburn loved it, but Elda demurred.

Elda Youngest of Three.

Elda is the youngest of three sisters. She helps her mother, Mrs. Amelia Koehler in the garden and in the house, sometimes walks the mile to school, and likes to feed the ducks on her grandfather's farm where the Koehlers live.

Melburn disclosed that while he helped mother run errands or wipe dishes and sometimes mowed the lawn, he preferred the school yard ball game or the Hyde Park "Y" swimming pool. Both the children are ruddy cheeked, clear blue eyed, and vivacious. Elda wore a neat lavender frock. Melburn's auburn hair and freckled face topped a suit and tie of brown.

Both youngsters' mothers were happy at the news yesterday. Melburn's parents, John and Lillian Smith of Flossmoor road, said he was a good boy. Mrs. Smith's neighbors acclaim her baking as the best, but she said her two boys, Melburn and Vernon, also eat "plenty of meat, potatoes, milk, fruit, and vegetables."

40 WOMEN QUIT CLUB; PROTEST 'MOSCOW TALKS'

Nine of the 15 Directors Turn In Resignations.

It was disclosed yesterday that nine of the fifteen members of the board of directors of the Ravinia Women's club have resigned as a protest against the policy of allowing radical speakers, from the salmon pink to the deep red shade, to spread "propaganda from Moscow" in speeches before the organization.

The tempest in the club teapot burst out into public notice Thursday evening when a fiery cross seven feet high was ignited on the lawn of Carl Haessler, 1737 Rice street, Highland Park, one of the radical lecturers. Mr. Haessler and his family were inclined to make light of the matter, but the anti-Red faction in the club maintained that things have gone too far and that it's high time to stop talk of confiscating wealth.

Explains Her Resignation.

Mrs. R. E. Wagner, one of the resigning directors, yesterday explained why she had withdrawn.

"There was a luncheon meeting on May 11," she asserted, "and I presented a resolution providing that whenever speakers of a radical type appeared to address us, the other side—the conservatives—should be allowed to have a speaker present and make a reply.

"That resolution was defeated by a vote of 49 to 46. Also, I remember quite well when the proposal came up to let Mr. Haessler speak. All but one of the directors were present and we voted then, nine to five, not to permit him to address the club.

"At that point Mrs. Robert L. Grinnell, president of the club, whose husband is a member of the Highland Park board of education, announced that unless we allowed Mr. Haessler to speak she would resign We were tolerant. To keep the peace in the club we allowed her to have her way."

Mrs. Grinnell has insisted there is no grave dissension and no marked radicalism in the club, but Mrs. Wagner declared the organization was growing more and more Red and that resignations from the membership now number more than forty.

According to Mrs. Albert W. Dilling of Kenilworth, who was a guest at the meeting when the Haessler talk was given, his remarks were radical in the extreme.

Tells of Haessler Talk.

"He gave out propaganda for the confiscation of private property," she declared. "He said that socialism and communism were aiming at the same ends, but with the difference that Socialists believed they could be attained without violence, while communists favored direct action at once.

"Also, he said he leaned to the communist side; that it was merely a question of whether we would drag along for several generations or get rid of the present system at once. History had taught communists that they must seize power by violence when they could, he asserted."

Mrs. Dilling told the club members at the time that they were listening to the voice of Moscow. Later, she wrote an article in a north shore paper entitled "Red Ravinia."

JESSEL, COMEDIAN, CLAIMS WIFE WILL GET DIVORCE—IF ANY

New York, June 4.—(AP)—The wife of George Jessel, comedian, read today that her husband had returned from Europe last night, and indicated their marriage soon would be dissolved by divorce.

Said Mrs. Florence Courtney Jessel: "Mr. Jessel has not always been wise in his remarks, and this has gone a little too far. I have been humiliated and embarrassed. If I do intend to give him a divorce—about which I have not made up my mind fully—I will get it in the regular way."

And Jessel said:

"There was a misunderstanding. I was asked if there were going to be a divorce and I said I thought there would be. But I didn't say I was going to get the divorce. If there's a divorce, she'll be the one to get it. She's a very good woman."

The two were married in 1920, divorced in 1922 and later remarried.

SEARCH GOES ON FOR ILLINOIS MAN LOST ON AIR RIDE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HARBOR GRACE, N. F., June 4.—No trace has been found of Karl Kuehnert, 23, of Crystal Lake, Ill., who left St. Anthony last Monday evening on an airplane ride, or Arthur Sullivan, his pilot. Hundreds of miles of coast line have been covered by planes, steamers and motor cruisers without result. A Canadian Airways seaplane with Sullivan's mother aboard is due in St. Anthony this afternoon. Kuehnert was graduated from the Northwestern university school of dentistry in 1931.

CHILD HURT AT PLAY DIES.

Margaret O'Keefe, 4 years old, 4854 Crystal street, died yesterday in St. Anne's hospital of an infected cut on her knee suffered at play.

Breaks all cross-continent speed records!
Covers a year's driving in ten days!

BENEATH the graceful, big-car beauty of today's Essex is a ruggedness that does not falter under the sternest test.

Far beyond the limits of the average driver's needs, this smart, fast, able car will stand up, "take it," and keep going.

These are records for any car to envy, yet they are trivial compared with the staunch, satisfying, day-in-day-out service Essex delivers daily to its thousands of owner-friends.

When you examine Essex exclusive advanced features it's plain why Essex sets the pace: full 70 horsepower Essex Super-Six motor with famous Duoflo Oiling System, 30-times stronger Diagonal Truss Frame, long-wearing and satin-smooth Essex Oil-Cushion Clutch.

Combats Age Lines; Restores Lost Youth

Science Performing Near Miracles in Youth Restoration by Applying European Principle of Gland Rejuvenation to an Exquisite Toilet Creme.

HORMEZ is the new scientific way of combating age lines—it acts on principles entirely new to beauty science—the recent glandular discoveries of eminent scientists in Berlin and Vienna. Hormez is now sweeping all America.

The development of this method is based on the recent scientific finding that the skin is kept smooth and young by the glands of the body. When nature fails to supply glandular substances, the skin tends to age and often lines, wrinkles and hollows appear almost immediately. Virtually every woman over 20 faces this lack of gland extracts.

This method acts to restore lost youth to the skin because it contains actual glandular substances, hormones and nourishing oils; it thus is designed to resupply these substances to the tissues.

BROOKHART ON SPOT AS IOWA GOES TO POLLS

Six Cornered Race Goes to Vote Tomorrow.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Sioux City, Ia., June 4.—[Special.]—Iowa's great six ring political circus, as Monday's primaries draw nigh, became tonight the great corn belt guessing contest. Chances of any one bagging 35 per cent of the Republican votes is regarded doubtful by a lot of the most seasoned politicians. A 35 per cent vote makes a nomination automatic—if nobody gets 35 per cent the candidate is picked by state convention. If it should go to a convention, it is argued, Brookhart would be all washed up, as regulars would predominate among the delegates.

The closing hours tonight saw Brookhart, a leader of the "sons of wild jackasses" at Washington, pursued over the primaries by Henry Field, the Shenandoah nurseryman and radio order merchant, who hit the air with another speech on the general theme, "Debunking Brookhart, or knockout out the flapdoodle and poppycock." Field put final stress on nepotism—"the Brookhart family pay roll," which has become a sort of taproot issue in the campaign.

Brookhart Losing Strength.

Brookhart whanged away at "Wall street and its tools," but the old tune, from all accounts, is not striking up the chorus this time. Field in his caravan has been countering on the cracks of Brookhart that he is a "Wall street agent" by exhibiting in his caravan "Henry's Wall Street Gang."

It's a group of ordinary folks in gingham and overalls, pushing cultivators and doing farm chores.

Field has been tearing into Brookhart's old strength among the farmers, at least such is the consensus among leaders in nearly all the camps. The Shenandoah seedman, during the campaign has been giving Brookhart a shot of his own medicine, and for weeks has been the great showman of the campaign. Field has been talking to the farmers over the air in their own language. For the first time in his career, Brookhart's ponderosities on "Wall street," "the crime of 1920" and "seven billions of water in the railroads" have been ridiculed and burlesqued, while attention has been turned to such matters as family pay rollers, Chautauqua lecture fees, mileage expenses, and the like. It has been a campaign on the lowdown, to show that "wild jackassism" is no more annointed with grace than the rest.

Six Cornered Race.

"I never had the nerve," said Field tonight, "to ask my neighbor to pen up his hogs when I had a dozen shoats running around loose myself."

Each of Brookhart's five rivals is regarded as appealing to a group of his own. Brookhart has said it is the easiest fight he has ever faced, but the possible split up of the vote among six candidates is regarded by the politicians as reducing the senator's prospects of a 35 per cent vote.

Field has been cutting into the farm vote. Louis H. Cook, who was Brookhart's manager a decade ago, is supposed to have a little following of his own. George Cosson of Des Moines, former attorney general, and Col. Glenn C. Haynes of Des Moines, former state auditor, are rated as appealing to large conservative groups. L. E. Eickleberg of Waterloo will poll some votes.

Fight in Democratic Party.

Another factor is the possible Democratic turnover. This time, a larger Democratic primary than ever is expected, due to a spirited contest for senator, governor and for other offices all down the line.

As was the case in Wisconsin and Illinois and other states, many who have voted in the Republican primaries heretofore because the Democrats have been without a fight, this time are expected to vote in the Democratic primaries. The general estimate is that this will tend to reduce Brookhart's former strength.

Charles F. Lytle of Sioux City, one of the five Democratic candidates for senator, one of the largest contractors in the state, is reported to be cutting into Brookhart's old labor vote.

See Convention Nominations.

Brookhart has always been strong up around this city and northwest Iowa has been his great stamping ground. In Sioux City itself the two prophets who have hit it right for years forecast Brookhart will not get 35 per cent in Iowa, and that it looks like convention nominations in both parties.

This time the presidency is not mixed up in the senatorship battling among the Republicans. Two years ago in the Dickinson-Hammill fight, both wanted a seat in Washington "to uphold the hands of Hoover." Six years ago, when Brookhart beat the late Senator Cummins, one of the protuberant factors was the agricultural grouch and the desire to take a sock at President Coolidge and the administration for its "eastern slant" on farm relief. This time Hoover's name is not brought into the battling. In four days in the state this observer has not heard a Republican politician bring the name of Hoover into the conversation—when it is broached they seem to view it with an air of resignation as a necessary cross to be borne at the head of the ticket at the Chicago convention, June 14.

The Democratic candidates for senator are Fred P. Hageman of Waverly, an old party wheelhorse; Louis Murphy of Dubuque, wettest of the candidates, former internal revenue collector; Mr. Lytle of Sioux City, N. G. Kraschel of Harlan, a live stock auctioneer, and Dan F. Steck of Ottumwa, former United States senator who defeated Brookhart in 1924.

Three are running against Gov. Dan W. Turner for the Republican governorship nomination. Turner is regarded as probable winner.

WALKER TO FIGHT EARLY TRIAL BY GOV. ROOSEVELT

New York, June 4.—[Special.]—Mayor James J. Walker, it became known today, intends to fight any move to place him on trial before Gov. Roosevelt until after the Democratic National convention which meets June 27 in Chicago.

The mayor, according to his friends, also is determined to turn the removal proceedings he is facing into a trial of his chief accuser, Samuel Seabury, if the governor will permit him to do so.

Although Dudley Field Malone is expected to assist the mayor in preparing his defense to the charges that are being formulated against him, Mr. Walker plans to appear before the governor when called upon to defend himself as his own attorney.

Hint Quiz of Seabury.

It was said to be Mr. Walker's present intention to charge that Mr. Seabury's presentation of the evidence against him was biased and unfair, and to ask the governor to place the chief counsel to the Hofstadter committee upon the stand for cross-examination by the mayor.

This threat has been made before but never carried out. When former Sheriff Thomas M. Farley appeared before the governor in removal proceedings, it was reported that his counsel, Siegfried Hartman, intended to demand the right to cross-examine the committee's counsel, but nothing of the sort occurred.

While the mayor's friends said he could be ready to answer charges within twenty-four hours, they made it clear he had no intention of doing so. He feels, it was said, that his interests are so entangled with national politics that it would be unfair to call him to account until the political atmosphere has cleared.

Mr. Seabury meanwhile prepared to follow exactly the same course he pursued in causing the removal of Farley, a Tammany district leader, from the office of sheriff of New York county. In lieu of formal charges, Mr. Seabury sent the governor a transcript of the evidence, an analysis of the testimony and a letter asking him to decide whether the incumbent was fit to remain in the office to which he had been elected.

How soon after Seabury's return to New York tomorrow this analysis will be sent to Albany, it was believed, would depend upon whether it is decided to have the record printed.

Seabury Raps Politicians.

Washington, Pa., June 4.—[Special.]—Declaring that some of the largest cities in the country are being "bled white" by unscrupulous politicians, who grew wealthy from graft, Judge Samuel Seabury today urged graduates at Washington and Jefferson to take an active part in politics and help combat these corrupt conditions but to stay away from political machines—Republican and Democrat.

The noted New York attorney, a former judge of the New York Court of Appeals, was awarded the degree of doctor of laws.

In his address which bristled with caustic references to the financial affairs of Mayor "Jimmy" Walker and other Tammany leaders, Seabury said: "Young people uncontaminated by cynicism and with the spirit to fight conditions as they exist now in so many large cities can correct conditions by which corrupt officials with ill-gotten gains, tin boxes, or "safes in their homes can prosper."

BUILDING MEN EXPECT RECORD CROWD AT MEET

National Convention to Be Held Here.

BY AL CHASE.

CHARLES F. PALMER.

Chicago is to be host for five days, beginning tomorrow, to more than five hundred delegates to the twenty-fifth annual convention of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, to be held at the Drake hotel. This will be a record attendance, according to William Marshall Ellis, chairman of the 1932 convention committee, who states that the nearest approach to this figure was in 1927, when 341 attended the Detroit sessions.

A glance back at some of the other twenty-four conventions discloses an attendance of 207 at Seattle in 1931 and 209 at Biloxi in 1930. The second best year was in 1926, at Cleveland, with a showing of 334. The first national convention was held in Chicago in 1908, with an attendance of 75. This city had the convention again in 1918, but no record of attendance for that year is available.

An elaborate program of business and pleasure has been outlined by Mr. Ellis and his two vice chairmen, Earle Shultz and Gordon Strong—all three, by the way, former presidents of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers. The convention will be presided over by Charles F. Palmer of Atlanta, president.

Strawn in Keynote Speech.

Of the five days' activities, Monday will be devoted to getting under way and to listening to a keynote address by Silas H. Strawn, of Chicago, who will talk on "What the Country Has Before It." D. F. Kelly also is scheduled to speak on "Controlling the Cost of Local Government," and will be followed by Graham Aldis, who will talk on taxation.

Tuesday will be "renting" day, with the timely topic of rentals being foremost at both morning and afternoon sessions. Earle Shultz of Chicago will talk on "Basis of Prosperity"; George Stimmel, of San Francisco, will discuss "Stabilizing Rentals Through Association Action"; Lee T. Smith, of New York, will talk on "Rental Policies, Past, Present, and Future."

At the Wednesday afternoon session William F. Davidson of St. Paul and E. B. Murray of Kansas City will discuss "Rehabilitation and Remodeling." Other speakers and subjects will be: W. R. Thomas, Detroit, "Elevator Operating Costs in the Modern Office Building"; A. H. Fromm, New York, "Double Deck Elevators and New Equipment."

Chicagoans to Speak.

At a special apartment house meeting that same afternoon, Frank McNally, of Chicago, will discuss "Remodeling Apartments and Equipment" and John L. Curley, of New York City, will talk on "Apartment Rental Surveys."

At the afternoon session the following speakers and subjects are scheduled: John B. Lear, Philadelphia, "The Relation of Business Conditions to Leasing Practices"; L. V. Echols, Houston, "Proper Rent Adjustments"; Frank S. Slosson, Chicago, "Percentage Leases"; R. S. Hawley, Seattle, "Code of Business Practices."

At a special apartment house meeting Leo Hogan will discuss "Renting and Handling Tenants with Reduced Income"; Oliver Turner will talk on "Operating" and Arthur M. Wirtz will have as his subject "Reorganization and Financing."

Operating Problems.

Wednesday will be devoted to the discussion of operating problems. Following are some of the morning speakers and subjects: Clarence T. Coley, New York, "Adjustments for 1932 Operating Conditions"; Samuel G. Neiler, Chicago, "Air Conditioning"; Paul E. Saving, Geneva, "Essentials of Office Quieting."

Thursday will be a day in which financing will be the main topic. Holman D. Pettibone, Chicago, will deliver the opening address. C. M. Turley, St. Louis, will talk on "Proper Office Building Financing" and Andrew Steers, of Seattle, will speak on "Controlling Future Production."

On the South Side.

Friday morning will be given over to association business, ending with the annual election of officers. There will be a short public session in the afternoon.

An extensive social program for the feminine members of the convention has been scheduled with motor trips, teas, luncheons, bridge, informal parties, a formal ball, a banquet, visits to the World's Fair, the planetarium, stores, etc.

In addition to the pleasure sight seeing trips about Chicago, a number of business trips are scheduled, one being a tour of the business district and another being through apartment houses. Of course there'll be a golf tournament and there'll be visits to broadcasting stations, and Art institute and other points of interest. The closing feature of the convention will be the annual banquet and dance in the ballroom of the Drake at 7 p. m. on Friday.

Will Have Exhibited.

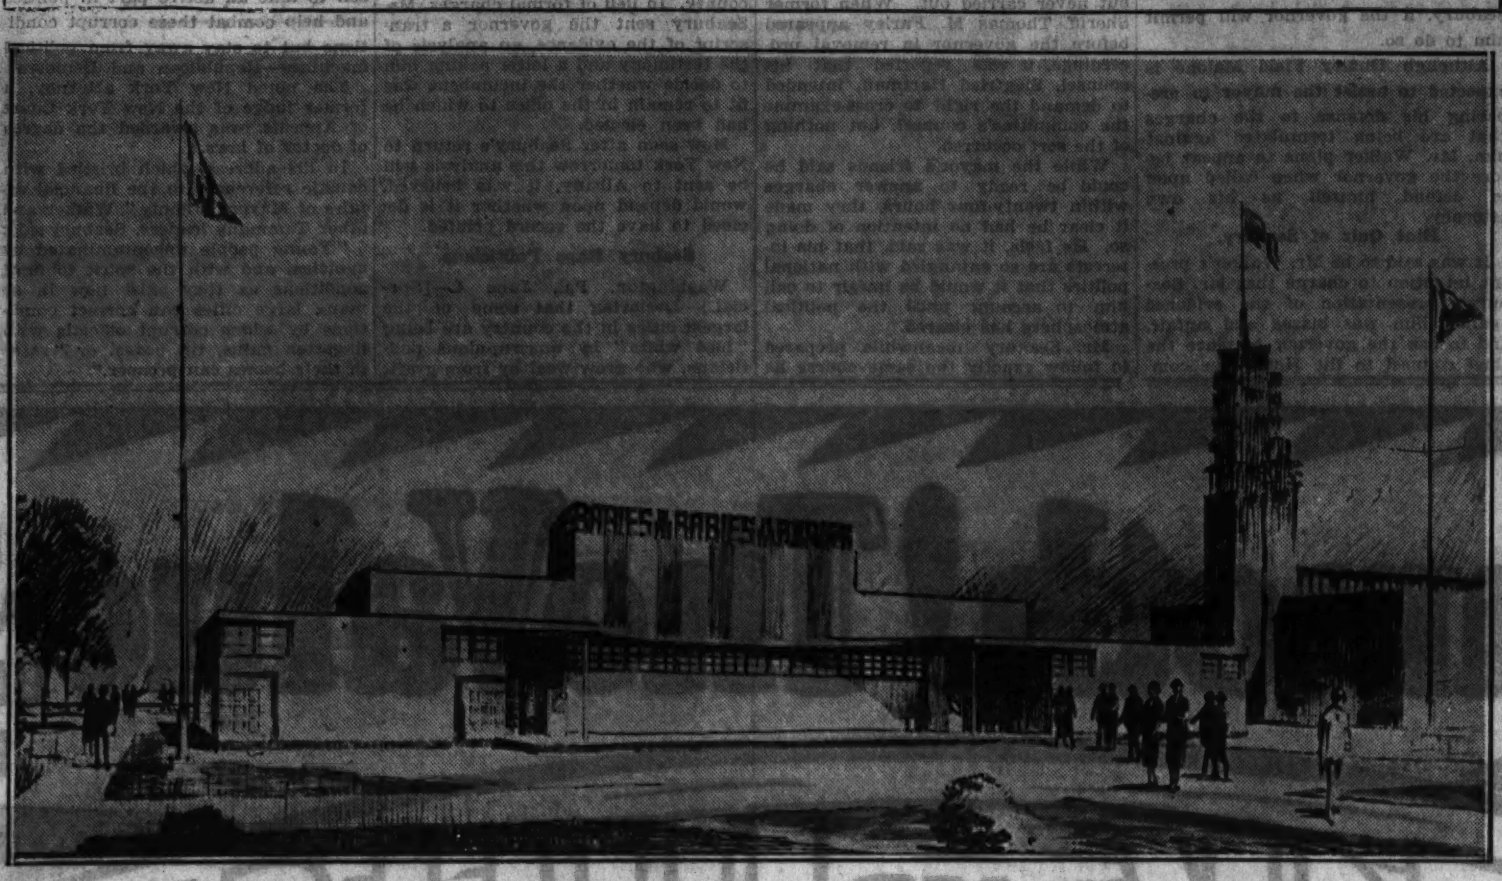
The various convention committees and their chairmen are: Apartment house, Aldis J. Browne; building inspection, W. A. Niles; entertainment, Earle Shultz; exhibits, E. W. Rinder; finance, Graham Aldis; program, John T. Redmond; promotion, Leo J. Sheridan; reservations, George R. Quin; sports, Leo G. Varty; transportation, Frank S. Slosson.

An elaborate exhibit of operating methods and devices is planned for the main dining room and the French room of the Drake and will be open to the public during the convention.

BUYS UPTOWN RESIDENCE.

Arthur Kruggel & Co. report the purchase of the eight room residence at 5857 Winthrop avenue by Race N. Wilt from E. M. Johnson for an undisclosed consideration, subject to $9,700. Garland Edwards was broker.

A PINK AND BLUE NURSERY



One of the most popular exhibits planned for the amusement zone at the Century of Progress exposition, according to Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, will be the above baby incubator station, announced for the first time yesterday. Schmidt, Garden & Erikson of Chicago are the architects. It'll have white walls, with baby blue and pink stripes for decoration and with the trim of those same two juvenile shades. Details are given elsewhere on this page. Hugh M. G. Garden made this sketch.

$100,000 Job to Give Work for 250 Men

Work for approximately 250 men and an expenditure of $100,000 in cash will result from the decision of Dr. C. H. Searle, president of the G. D. Searle company at 4733 Ravenswood avenue, to go ahead and rebuild the six story building at 213-19 West Ohio street, recently partially destroyed by fire. The general contractor is the A. L. Jackson company, 310 South Michigan avenue. The architect is Henry C. Hengels, state military architect of Milwaukee, Wis.

"Following the recent fire, the owner was advised by several real estate men to tear down the remainder of the building and leave the lot vacant until renting conditions improved," said R. T. Sullivan of the A. L. Jackson company. "But Dr. Searle decided that there was no better time than now to build economically, and in addition give work for a large number of idle men."

An entirely new brick and cut stone front will be installed, with a new main entrance done in white metal, marble, terrazzo, and ornamental iron. Complete new wiring, plumbing, sprinkler, elevator, and heating systems will be installed. The building is 75x100.

GEORGE FRED KECK.

Begining tomorrow and continuing until the last day of June an exhibition of modern houses will be held at the Walden gallery, 546 North Michigan avenue. Paul Schweikher There'll be models of various sizes, plans, drawings and photographs of these modern homes, most of them in the popular priced bracket, with the construction price for some of them as low as $4,000, according to Mr. Keck. Modern materials are specified in most of them. Some of the models are of metal. Reproductions of several designs by Mr. Keck have appeared in the home building section of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE

REALTY BOARD HEAD NAMES NEW TAX COMMITTEE

Porter Is Chairman of Group.

LESTER W. PORTER

Lester W. Porter of the realty firm of Hodge, Nicholson & Porter, Inc. yesterday was appointed chairman of a legislative and taxation committee just formed by J. Soule Warterfield, president of the Chicago Real Estate board, to prepare a comprehensive program of legislation needed by the various departments of real estate. It is intended, Mr. Warterfield stated in announcing this new group, that the program prepared by Mr. Porter's committee, aided by a group of subcommittees, will be presented to the Illinois general assembly next January for enactment into law.

The other members of the committee are: John J. Fischer, Arthur Kruggel, George W. Reinecke, Clarence O. Rosen, Percy Wilson, Newton C. Farr, Mark Levy and Henry N. Lorish.

To Start At Once.

"With the help of the sub-committees, which are to be appointed within the next few days, this new legislative and taxation committee will at once undertake the task of determining what new legislation is needed by real estate and then prepare bills to be laid before the lawmakers at Springfield" said Mr. Warterfield.

"The work is to be started now in order to give the committee ample opportunity to lay the results of their study before other interested business and civic bodies prior to the convening of the legislature.

Names Fair Committee.

Appointment of a World's Fair committee for the board was also announced yesterday. Mark Levy is chairman and Percy Wilson is vice chairman. The other members are Harry H. Harper, Ward T. Huston, LeRoy J. Kenevel, Adolph F. Kramer, Arthur C. Lueder, George F. Nixon, Louis T. Orr, Hyde W. Perce, Holman D. Pettibone, Peter F. Reynolds, M. A. Ring, J. Milton Trainer, Albert H. Wetten, Henry G. Zander Jr., Lester W. Porter, Bruno Martin, Louis W. Repsold and Homer Schneider, with Mr. Warterfield as a member ex-officio.

Woolworth Leases North Central Avenue Store

The F. W. Woolworth company has leased the 30x125 store in the building at 326 North Central avenue, from Marshall Solberg for twenty-five years beginning Sept. 30, 1932 at an undisclosed rental. It will be occupied some time prior to the beginning of the lease.

Receivership O. K. Plan to Be Put Up to Chancellors

ARTHUR KRUGGEL.

The seven judges in the Superior and Circuit courts who act as chancellors and can appoint receivers of property in Cook county are to be given an opportunity to indicate their stand on the question of saving money for investors by approving or disapproving the recent plan announced by Arthur Kruggel, chairman of the board of governors of the renting and management division of the Chicago Real Estate board.

Mr. Kruggel stated last night that he has called a meeting of the board of governors for next Tuesday afternoon to consider securing prompt and definite action from the chancellors regarding the recent suggestion of having an independent group of property managers and maintenance men assist the court in passing on work to be done on and supplies to be purchased for buildings in receivership.

Up to the Judges.

This suggestion was made by Mr. Kruggel at a meeting of the Chicago Real Estate board on May 26 and was fully reported in THE TRIBUNE. On June 3 a TRIBUNE editorial on "The Receivership Racket" called attention again to the real estate board suggestion, saying: "There is nothing wrong with Mr. Kruggel's plan except that it probably will not be put into effect. Everything which he wishes his committee to do should be done and would be done if the majority of judges in whose courts receivership proceedings are pending wanted them to be handled economically and expeditiously."

"We intend to put the plan definitely up to the chancellors," said Mr. Kruggel. "If they refuse to consider it, their action will speak for itself."

The Kruggel plan called for an official board composed of property managers, plumbers, painters, carpenters, etc., which would pass on all bills for supplies, work on buildings, and perhaps even O. K. rental schedules for properties in receivership.

Save Time and Cash.

Mr. Kruggel, who pointed out that receivership buildings operated under court supervision have a higher operating cost and a lower income than those operated by competent property managers, declared at the recent Real Estate board session that the suggested official board would speed up receiverships and save money and time by taking over much routine work now handled by the judges.

There are only seven judges who act as chancellors and can appoint receivers of property in Cook county. They are Denis E. Sullivan, Robert E. Gentzel, and William J. Lindsay, all judges in the Superior court; Philip J. Finnegan, Michael Feinberg, Joseph Burke, and Chief Justice Stanley H. Klarkowski, all judges in the Circuit court of Cook county.

The members of the board of governors of the renting and management division of the Chicago Real Estate board are Thomas J. Fleming, Arthur M. Wirtz, Warner G. Baird, Louis T. Orr, James W. BABIES, BABIES, AND BABIES AT WORLD'S FAIR

Incubator Kiddies Will Be on Exhibit.

Fifteen incubator babies, housed in a striped pink and blue structure, will comprise one of the World's Fair most popular exhibits, according to Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank of the Chicago Lying-in hospital and the only woman member of the exposition executive committee, who yesterday announced the details of this unusual combination amusement and educational concession. The building, of modern design, of course, will be the work of the Chicago architectural firm of Schmidt, Garden & Erikson. It will be erected according to Mrs. Fairbank, as soon as the financing is arranged for.

"We hope to borrow enough to erect the building and then pay back our debt from our profits," said Mrs. Fairbank. "There's no question about its success. At the St. Louis fair they cleared $181,000. We expect the Chicago incubator exhibit to be tremendously popular.

"It'll be located somewhere in the amusement zone, for this'll be classified as both entertainment and educational. Instead of the usual separate incubators, however, the fifteen babies will be shown in cribs in a semi-circular row in front of plate glass windows set at an angle so visitors can walk through and see the youngsters practically from all sides.

Will Be Air Conditioned.

"The irregularly shaped room in which the babies will be housed will be air conditioned and in addition will have ultra-violet ray glass to get the full benefit of sunshine. It'll also have a battery of lights to supply artificial sunlight for the babies on dark days.

"We plan to have lectures given by physicians standing in the exhibition room to the public on the other side of the glass wall, made possible by annunciators. Of course, the feeding and care of the babies will be plainly visible through the plate glass. We also intend to have a mothers' aid shop where everything for babies can be purchased.

"We hope to make at least $100,000, and all profits, after we've paid back our original loan which we hope to negotiate, will go for the benefit of free patients at the Chicago Lying-in hospital."

3,000 Visitors Hourly.

The plans of Schmidt, Garden & Erikson provide for the free passage of about 3,000 people an hour through the incubator exhibit. After seeing the babies through the glass walls visitors who are interested may stop in a tiny theater about 25x42, with 100 seats, where there'll be moving pictures showing how to care for babies. In addition there'll be exhibits along the walls of the main room.

The exterior of the building will be of white with baby blue and pink striped panels for decoration. Instead of a coping or cornice the building will have the word "babies" in blue neon tubes repeated ten times. The trim of the building will be baby blue, with pink about the entrances.

The building will be in effect a complete hospital. There'll be two rooms for wet nurses and two for regular nurses, with kitchenette and two baths and lockers.

SWAN, LORISH AND CASPERS ANNOUNCE NEW TYPE OF SERVICE

PAUL CASPERS.

Inaugurating a loop receivership management service, which will offer the advantages of neighborhood, renting facilities to attorneys, trust companies and banks in the down town area, Swan, Lorish & Caspers, Inc., south side management specialists, tomorrow will open a central office in the Conway building, 111 West Washington street. It will be in charge of Paul Caspers, who will direct the receivership activities of the firm. An organization with a personnel of sixty-five men, operating through four south side offices, will be available for the renting and management of properties taken over by this new receivership unit.

"Through this service we believe we'll be able to give properties in distress a more efficient management than can be provided by an organization whose contact with prospective tenants is limited to a manager on the premises," said Mr. Caspers.

"It's a well known fact that the bulk of apartment renting is done on Saturday afternoons, Sundays and in the evenings. Yet, it's our experience that at these times the average receivership office is closed. Our organization, however, is ready to show apartments and service tenants at these times to meet public convenience."

Mr. Caspers, who has had fourteen years of experience with renting and management on the south side, is now receiver for over forty properties. He states that the fact that these receiverships have come to him unsolicited, indicating a need for efficient management by a neighborhood organization with intimate knowledge of local renting problems, prompted the establishment of this new service.

A consultation service relative to properties which are in distress or in danger of default will be offered to property owners, trust companies, banks, insurance companies and attorneys through the new central office. This service will be offered as a convenience and no charge will be made for it.

REAL ESTATE BOND SERVICE

Inquiries must be accompanied by stamped, self-addressed envelope for personal reply. Answers are based on information received from outside sources and, beyond care in securing it, The Tribune assumes no responsibility. Inquiries should be addressed to the Real Estate Bond Service, Chicago Tribune. Information should not be asked for more than one issue at a time. Give the name of the underwriter and the full title of the bond.

Highlands Building.

Please be good enough to give me any information on the Highlands building at the northwest corner of 69th street and South Ashland avenue. This issue was underwritten by the Chicago Trust company. R. B.

W. B. Henderson, secretary of the bondholders' committee, reports gross receipts from Aug. 1, 1931, to March 22, 1932, of $5,612, with operating expenses of $857. Cash on hand, exclusive of receiver's fees and receiver's attorney's fee, neither of which are given, was $4,755 on March 22, 1932. Occupancy on April 11 was as follows: Four of the five stores rented, three of the seven offices occupied, loft space taken. The property is being managed by a receiver. Foreclosure bill has been filed.

Schroeder Properties.

I own $2,000 bonds on the Schroeder properties bought from the old Madison and Kedzie State bank. Interest defaulted Feb. 11, 1931. Any information will be appreciated.—W. A. W.

W. A. Lomax, secretary of the Bondholders' Protective committee, states that an original first mortgage of $185,000, since reduced to $167,000, was underwritten by the old Madison and Kedzie State bank. The issue now is in default a total of $29,545, which includes interest and principal due Feb. 11, 1931; Aug. 11, 1931, and Feb. 11, 1932. The properties comprise three separate parcels.

Parcel No. 1 is at 3512 Carroll avenue and is improved with two factory buildings, a two flat building and a cottage. All are unoccupied. Negotiations to rent them have been unsuccessful.

Parcel No. 2 is at 1315 West 21st street, and is improved with a two story factory and one story power plant, occupied by H. L. Schroeder, manufacturer of bakers' woodenware. Mr. Schroeder, who is one of the mortgagors, agreed in 1931 to pay $350 per month rental on this property to the trustee, but he has now declined to make such payments, according to Mr. Lomax. Certain money was paid in by him and used for insurance premiums and like charges. He now is in default $1,050, representing rents due in February, March and April, 1932.

The third parcel comprises 238,765 square feet of vacant industrial at the southeast corner of Cicero avenue and West 15th street.

"Foreclosure proceedings have been instituted, but no receiver has been appointed," Mr. Lomax states. "Taxes for 1928 have not been paid, but objections have been filed. No action has been taken on either 1929 or 1930 taxes.

"The future of this issue is rather dubious. When the first mortgage originally was negotiated it was thought that this property had quite a future as industrial locations, but, as will be seen, we have very old property vacant and it is impossible to say at this time just how the same will turn out. We expect that a receiver will be appointed in the near future, although it is expected that a contest will be had with Schroeder."

FORM NEW BODY TO GIVE AID IN BOND TROUBLES

Chicago has a new independent group of men to give expert advice on first mortgage bond troubles of various kinds. Yesterday J. Soule Warterfield, president of the Chicago Real Estate board, appointed a body of realtors bearing the somewhat topheavy but certainly self-explanatory title of "general committee for rendering service where requested in connection with properties about to go into default." It is headed by S. O. Stone as chairman.

"Of course, the first thing we'll do will be to pick out a shorter name," explained Mr. Stone. "There are a lot of equities that can be saved. We hope to be able to help save them by advice that will prevent foreclosures and receiverships wherever possible. In other words, it'll be a sort of arbitration board as well as advice giving body.

"The new committee will not actually effect any reorganizations or take over any properties. It'll merely be an independent aid in a serious situation and will offer assistance to both bondholders and equity owners of properties facing trouble. The service probably will be free, but this point hasn't yet been determined."

The other members of the committee are George J. Eckhoff, D. Avery Kimbark, Ralph H. Beesley, J. Frank Lindsey, Newton C. Farr, and Henry G. Zander.

DEPOSIT 89.9% OF HILLDALE BONDS WITH REALTY TRUST

Bonds of the Hilldale apartments, Hilldale and Morse avenue, deposited with the George M. Forman Realty Trust or under its control, have reached 89.9 per cent of the total, William G. Lodwick, president, reported last night.

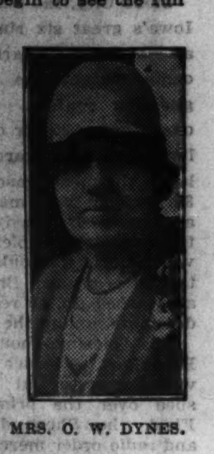
The trust is handling 29 apartment and hotel buildings financed by George M. Forman & Co. bond issues, all of which defaulted as to interest and principal.

The building was financed with a $250,000 issue of 6½ per cent George M. Forman & Co. bonds, of which $179,500 are outstanding. It is a three story and English basement structure, with 41 apartments. It is 90 per cent occupied.

VISITING OTHERS' GARDENS HELPS HOME GARDENER

Pointers on Rose Culture Prevent Losses.

BY PAUL POTTER.



MRS. O. W. DYNES.

This is the season when gardeners and flower lovers begin to see the full effect of their spring labors and to find time from seeding, weeding, and watering to tour a bit in search of other gardens in which they may find ideas and inspiration.

Whether the expedition is a family affair or in a group of garden club members, there is a wealth of fine gardens in the Chicago region which are ample reward for visitors. One can reach a point where he has been so occupied in landscaping and developing his own plot that such visits may bring more satisfaction in his handiwork or help him answer questions which arise in any gardener's operations.

Six Acres in Hinsdale Garden.

Several garden clubs in northern Illinois have been enjoying visits to the six acres of home garden developed by Mrs. O. W. Dynes of Hinsdale. Mrs. Dynes, as the new president of the Garden Club of Illinois, a federation of the 110 amateur garden clubs in the state, has one of the outstanding displays of peonies in the entire metropolitan area.

Other groups have been visiting the Dunes near Waukegan and in northern Indiana, where rare and unusual natural plant life settings are to be viewed. Peculiar in the botanical world are many of the plants which the sand hills of Lake Michigan nurture, so that visitors from far points in the nation come to study and admire.

Tribune Honor Roll June 19.

Many other interesting displays of peonies, roses, and iris are to be found within easy Sunday driving distance. With the completion next week of THE TRIBUNE's third annual Honor Roll judging a list of modest yet outstanding home gardens will be presented as a guide for those interested in treating the average sized home grounds. This list will appear in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE of June 19.

In the course of visiting gardens this spring one is brought to realize that, more than ever before, men are taking active interest in home ground and garden development. More time is available, golf is sacrificed partially if not largely, and a new and most intriguing hobby ensues.

Prizes His 400 Rose Bushes.

Should this hobby develop as it has for Charles N. Evans, 2822 Blackhawk road, in Wilmette, grandmother will need to look to her laurels in rose culture. With some 400 rose plants in his home yard, some of them imported and new hybrid varieties, he will have an unusual study in rose growing in about two weeks.

"The difficulties of rose growing about Chicago are overdrawn," declares Mr. Evans. "After five years of experience with them I am convinced that much of what we hear about growing roses near the lake is false, causing many to pass up rose growing and developing in others an inferiority complex that causes too much coddling and too much attention. Bushes are not forced to depend upon some of their own resources."

Soil Treatment Aids Growth.

Mr. Evans emphasizes that roses must be carefully planted in a bed sheltered from north and west winds, avoiding a solid wall. A good black loam is spaded to a depth of 2 feet, natural clay being better than sandy soils due to moisture retaining tendencies. If sandy, add peat moss or other moisture absorbing materials.

"Good drainage must be had," he points out. "Roses are not water lilies. At least six hours of sunshine daily is necessary. Avoid large trees with spreading root systems unless you cut back the intruding roots or supply sufficient food and water for both roots and roses.

Spraying an Easy Job.

"It only takes a few minutes to spray 100 bushes with sulphur, arsenate of lead and nicotine. A fine spraying under the leaves is better than an overdose covering and coloring the foliage.

"The soil should be cultivated every week following a rain or thorough soaking from the hose. Do not sprinkle, remember, regardless of your religion, sprinkling or immersion will not convert a rose bush. It is the roots that demand water so as to get the plant food from the soil."

In the Evans rose garden, fertilizing is an important factor. This should be done well and early. Never feed or cultivate roses later than mid-August. He has found cow manure, well aged, the best fertilizer, about two inches of it worked into the soil just as the flower buds appear.

CONGESTED HIGH SCHOOLS BLAMED ON SUPT. BOGAN

Strayer Report Advises Use of Vacant Rooms.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The failure to provide a substantial part of 39,700 high school pupils with proper accommodations while there are many vacant rooms in the elementary schools is a responsibility which the Strayer survey report places upon the office of the superintendent of schools.

This report asserts there is a seat shortage in the high schools of 40,255, and a surplus of 484, leaving a net shortage of 39,771. There are 100,856 high school pupil members, so nearly 40 per cent are without proper accommodations.

In the elementary schools there are 186 vacant rooms, according to the superintendent's records, 200 according to the Strayer report, and more than 300 as reported by the principals to the business manager.

Fixes Responsibility.

The difficulty of adjusting the shortage to the surplus of accommodations are recited in the report which was presented to the board of education last week, but it goes on to say:

"The responsibility for maintaining the proper adjustment rests with the education division."

The report of the survey, directed by Dr. George D. Strayer of Columbia university, makes it plain that the present situation is unsatisfactory.

"Clearly," it asserts, "there is need for immediate action, and, if need be, drastic action, to meet the shortage situation in the senior high schools."

The experts recite what would be a normal approach to a solution of the problem, and then add: "But an emergency exists, an emergency in seat shortage augmented by a financial emergency. Therefore, drastic emergency measures are necessary."

Suggest a Remedy.

The Strayer group suggests a remedy. They would take 10,000 or 12,000 of the first year students in the high schools and shift them back to the junior high schools. Then from the junior high schools would be shifted a like number of seventh grade pupils to the vacant rooms in the elementary schools.

The 186 vacant rooms in the elementary schools by the superintendent's records, or the 200 by the Strayer count, are insufficient to care for 10,000 or 12,000 pupils. But those are not all of the rooms in the elementary schools which could be made available.

When a Room Is Vacant.

When the superintendent's office and the Strayer group counted the vacant rooms, a room was not vacant if it was used as a branch for another school, or as an office for a district superintendent or supervisor, or is used as much as 40 per cent of the time for science, music, art instruction, or by doctors and nurses, corrective work, project work, or adult classes."

"The survey staff," says the report," recommends that standard class rooms in the elementary school buildings now used as offices of district superintendents and supervisors, where feasible, be vacated, and used as class rooms; and further that wherever possible rooms that are now used only 40 per cent of the time be made available for full time use."

But that is not all. The survey staff recommends that more rooms be made available in the elementary schools in this way:

Drop Some Subjects.

"In computing the pupil capacity of an elementary building," reads the report, "no capacity is charged to sewing, cooking, handicraft rooms, print shops, manual training shops, or library. Under the prevailing organization of the elementary program in Chicago, these rooms are auxiliary to regular class rooms and do not serve as additional capacity.

"The survey staff recommends that sewing, cooking, printing, and manual training be dropped from the elementary program of instruction in schools housing the first six grades. Many of these rooms will then become available as regular class rooms."

The survey recommends this course as an emergency measure.

Lake Forest Girl Weds Poet's Son

Mr. and Mrs. Diarmuid Russell in garden at home of bride's parents after ceremony.

Receive Guests

The marriage of Miss Rose Lauder of Lake Forest to Diarmuid Russell, son of the Irish poet George William Russell, known as "Æ," was solemnized at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the Lake Forest residence of the bride's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Ambler. Only a small group of relatives attended the ceremony, but at 5 o'clock about 50 guests came in for an informal reception and tea.

The bride, who had no attendants, wore a powder blue crêpe dress and a navy blue straw hat. She was given in marriage by her brother, Rae Lauder.

After a fortnight's wedding trip through northern Minnesota and Canada, Mr. and Mrs. Russell will reside in an apartment on Mrs. Charles S. Holt's estate in Lake Forest.

EXPECT PASCHEN DEFENSE TO END CASE TOMORROW

Few Minor Witnesses Yet to Be Heard.

All of the defense witnesses, except three or four minor ones, finished testifying in the Paschen trial yesterday and Cassius Poust, defense counsel, notified Federal Judge Barnes that he will need only an hour tomorrow to close his case.

Rebuttal testimony from the government and surrebuttal from the defense will not be extensive, the attorneys believe, and can be completed tomorrow. Final arguments have been set for Tuesday, with each side limited to four hours. Mr. Poust does not believe that he will need half that time, so the case probably will go to the jury late Tuesday afternoon. It will then have extended five weeks and two days, a record for income tax trials.

Investigator Testifies.

Yesterday's most interesting testimony was given by a private investigator, A. L. Farrell Chamblin, who said he had been hired by Paschen during May to find Joe Sladek, who managed Paschen's building cleaning and tuckpointing company during 1927 and 1928, the years in which the government alleges Paschen evaded payment of $114,000 income taxes. The government has been seeking Sladek and the defense insists it wants him too.

Chamblin didn't find Sladek, but he testified to having known the man for several years and to have heard Sladek say, a year ago, "I have lots of money now and I'm sick and nervous and I'd like to get away from here." Chamblin suggested Mexico as a good climate.

In his testimony, Chris Paschen intimated that Sladek made much of his income by performing city work himself under three fictitious names—work which the government charges benefited Paschen.

On cross-examination of Chamblin, Assistant Attorney General William J. Froelich asked if Chamblin had tried to find Sladek at Paschendale, the defendant's farm near Antioch, and at Paschen's office. Chamblin said that he hadn't looked there.

"And you're the man who suggested he go to Mexico?" asked Froelich. Chamblin admitted that.

Tells of Radio Station Loan.

Another witness was Miss Mary Martin, a striking brunette, who managed radio station WHT during part of 1928. She testified that Paschen, a director of the Radiophone Broadcasting company, which operated the station, had loaned more than $85,000 for its operation and had not been repaid.

Poust also presented several character witnesses for his client, including Col. A. A. Sprague, commissioner of public works; Municipal Judge Francis Borelli, Lawrence Whiting, chairman of the board of the Indiana Limestone company, and Bernard J. Fallon, vice president of the Chicago Rapid Transit company.

NEW METHODIST BISHOP TALKS IN EVANSTON TODAY

Kansas City Leader Takes Bishop Hughes' Place.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

As his first official act as head of the Methodist Episcopal area of Chicago, Bishop Ernest L. Waldorf, formerly of the Kansas City area, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon for Garrett Biblical institute at the First Methodist church, Evanston, this morning. Bishop Waldorf arrived in the city yesterday. He was appointed to this area at the recent general conference of the Methodist church in Atlantic City, to succeed Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, who becomes the bishop of the Washington, D. C., area.

Bishop Waldorf expressed keen interest in the action of the general conference in indorsing the 1933 World's Fair. The resolution, proposed by George W. Dixon and unanimously adopted, asks that all educational and missionary agencies of the church prepare exhibits for display in connection with the general religious exhibit.

Show Unity of Faiths.

The Dixon resolution provided also that the exhibits be arranged so as "to represent the essential unity of religious faiths in their relation to progress, and also to give a clear idea as to Methodism's contributions to the deeper life of the nation and the world."

The new bishop announced that he would open his office in the Chicago temple, Washington and Clark streets, on June 13. Bishop Waldorf expressed deep interest in Garrett Biblical institute, as he announced the commencement program which begins today and closes Wednesday night, and declared that Methodism would not let the seminary lose its acknowledged leadership, even though the economic situation has placed it in a precarious position.

Seek New Institute Head.

No announcement was made by Bishop Waldorf as to who will succeed President F. C. Eiselen as head of Garrett. Dr. Eiselen, who has been advanced to world leadership of the educational program of the church, however, said last night that the trustees had asked him to remain as head until his successor is appointed, or at least until July 1. Dr. Eiselen's new office will be opened at once at 740 Rush street.

Tomorrow night a farewell dinner will be given to Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, who has been head of the local area since 1924. The dinner will be held at the Hotel Sherman under the auspices of the Methodist Social union.

VETERAN PREMIER AGREES TO FORM GREEK CABINET

PREMIER VENIZELOS.

ATHENS, Greece, June 4.—(AP)—Eleutherios Venizelos agreed today to form a cabinet to succeed the ministry of Alexander Papanastasiou, who resigned yesterday.

The veteran Venizelos stepped down from the premiership May 21 after the legislature had refused to adopt his program for settling Greece's financial problems. Two days later Papanastasiou formed a ministry.

Yesterday Venizelos made a speech which Papanastasiou interpreted as meaning the government did not enjoy the confidence of the chamber, and so he withdrew.

THE AMERICAN GLASS COMPANY
A Statement Supported By Fact

In the Chicago Tribune editions of May 31st and June 1st appeared articles involving the American Glass Company in connection with the arrest of three men caught breaking windows. I feel it is my duty to the trade as well as my friends to give them facts pertaining to all statements made in these two articles, without the assistance of a frenzied reporter or the help of associations who are doing their utmost to get the public and trade in the frame of mind so as to reflect the cause upon us.

The American Glass Company was organized in 1919 on a capital stock of five thousand dollars for the purpose of selling and installing glass. Its success speaks for itself, that it has outgrown three plants, and in spite of periodical unfavorable publicity it has gotten, continues to stay in business.

In 1921, unfortunately, two young men were arrested intoxicated at the corner of Van Buren and Wabash avenue, sitting on the curb, caught throwing stones through a window on the opposite corner. Both of these men were employed by an insurance agency. One of these men had a card on him from this firm, and "lo and behold" I was involved in a conspiracy charge to have them break windows for me. The true outcome of this case was that a jury of twelve men tried the case before Judge Fitch on the conspiracy charge and found him Not Guilty. The case involving me was not tried for reasons unknown to myself.

In spite of this setback, I continued to carry on, and my loyal friends and customers favored us with their business.

In the year of 1928 I was again given front page publicity, involving me with several labor men in a conspiracy charge of boycotting medicine cabinets, and indicted by the government for violating the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. Newspapers came out with headlines that I profited to the extent of a million to four million dollars. To this day I do not know on what testimony I was indicted, nor do I know why on a motion of the United States Attorney an order was entered February 19th, A. D. 1929, before the Honorable James H. Wilkerson, Judge, to have the case of Benjamin Beris dismissed.

Now come along three young men, two of them men that I have never remembered even knowing, and become intoxicated. One of these men, a glazier, sent into us by the Union and who worked for the American Glass Company two days last week, had on him a pay roll check for the amount of $23.84, which was due him for his services. The second man was a clerk employed in our office and a brother to the glazier. The third man I have never known or ever seen. It is a most unfortunate incident that these boys, who have never been involved in any trouble before, became boisterous to the extent of wanting to damage property.

I am not trying by any means to defend their action, but it was unjust and unfair publicity to involve the American Glass Company—to state that they were employed by us to do this. The firm employs during the week an average of eighty-five men, and any business man will agree it is an impossible feat to keep check on employes after working hours. I again state openly, and fearlessly, that I or the firm had no more to do with their actions or conduct than any of my competitors.

It is most regrettable that one of these men happened to be an employe here, and I hope the trade as well as the public will in due course of time find that we were not involved. The authorities to this day have not in any way connected us with their actions other than ASSOCIATIONS—which we are not members of—are again trying to use a spot-light.

SOX WIN IN 10TH, 6-5; PIRATES CRUSH CUBS

17,000 SEE SUNTICA'S DRIVING FINISH TAKE OAKS

LATE DATE IS NOSE BEHIND IN DRAMATIC DUEL

I Say Runs Third, Lengths Away.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Suntica, a big, proud bay daughter of famous old Sun Briar, picked up the green, brown and orange jacket which old Sun Beau tossed aside last fall and won the Illinois Oaks at Washington Park yesterday.

In a thrilling, heart-breaking finish she carried the widely known Willis Sharpe Kilmer silks to victory by a nose over Late Date from the Audley Farm stable. Ten lengths back of them came I Say, Chicago's representative from Albert Sabath's stable. Depression brought up the rear in the field of four.

Johnny Maiben Shares Glory.

Suntica repeated her Kentucky Oaks victory when she annexed the Illinois Oaks which had a gross value of $12,200, but did it more impressively against the stoutest kind of a contender in Late Date. And it was old Johnny Maiben, the jockey who has staged a half dozen comebacks and who right now is putting up another, who shared the glory with the daughter of Sun Briar.

For Late Date was a hard horse to conquer, and if she hadn't swerved in the stretch, and if Maiben hadn't put out his right foot to keep her from smashing right over against him, Suntica and the little old man of the jockeys might have been pushed over into the infield.

The Oaks was run before a crowd of some 17,000 and even with the eastern star Evening which was an 11th hour scratch missing, a more exciting finish could not have been arranged by the most exacting stage manager. The battle which Suntica and Late Date staged was not only thrilling—it was desperate. It had people cheering and booing. It found old Johnny Maiben doing as great a job of riding as he ever has done, and he's won some famous stakes by just an inch or so in his day.

I Say Drives Into Lead.

Suntica was first away from the barrier but a second later I Say passed by her and drove into a lead of a length. Late Date was three lengths back of them but running the best race of her career.

Midway down the back stretch Suntica moved up and collared I Say. The Sabath filly quit as if somebody had hit her on the top of the head. Suntica flew to the front and Late Date moved up on the outside. They began running heads apart.

That's the order in which they came to the finish line, and a sixteenth from home Late Date had pushed her nose in front. But she swerved in, not once, but a half dozen times. Old Maiben hardly knew what to do. Finally he picked Suntica's head up and drove her on to the front and there she stayed in the most stubborn kind of a finish.

Suntica ran the mile and an eighth over the fairly good track in time of 1:53 4-5. She had mustered more backers than the popular I Say could and was at odds on in the betting, paying $3.66 to win and $2.86 to place. Late Date paid $6.74 to place. No show mutuels were sold.

Gift of Roses Pays $129.12.

During the early part of the afternoon long shot players and favorite backers had occasion to cheer. Opening the program was the Daylight special purse for 3 year olds. Rolling home in front was Gift of Roses, owned by J. P. Eberhardt of Kentucky and paying $129.12 for a $2 ticket. The daughter of Sandmole-Loveliness won by three lengths from Mannerism, with Renewed third.

One couldn't find many folks who held winning tickets. Jack Keene of Kentucky, who bred the filly and who owns her daddy and mamma, speculated to the extent of a $5 ticket. Old Screw Sanders, the sage of Churchill Downs, had two bucks riding right on the beezer. So did Dan Higgins, the big railway supply man from the south side.

Gift of Roses Wins Easily.

Gift of Roses won easily after she conquered Zone going into the lower bend. The shouts of the long shot players had no sooner faded than the favorite players began to cheer. Red Whisk, the crack Kentucky 2 year old, came home a handy winner of the Seminole purse, which engaged some of the fleetest western juveniles. After a stubborn battle he beat La Bruyere by a length and a half, and the fast finishing Metaurus from the Audley Farm stable. Red Whisk paid $4.52 and won like a 1 to 2 shot.

Then the favorite players were silenced, for in the Creole claiming purse Portcodine, a 16 to 1 shot, finished first and Portmanteau at 8 to 1 was second. Portcodine was disqualified because he had interfered with the favorite, Black Comet, coming down the stretch. That only served to move Black Comet up into third place, Grand Prince getting second money.

The favorite players were put in a better humor when their pick, Dis Dat, owned by Tom Taggart's French Lick Springs stable, won the Illinois Central purse at a mile out of the chute. He trounced Mrs. Emil Denemark's Blackstrap handily by a length.

This is the way Soldiers' field will look the night of July 26 when the Golden Gloves champions of Chicagoland battle the champions of Germany in the second of the international amateur boxing series. This diagram shows how the 46,000 reserved seats are divided according to price scale ranging from $3 to 50 cents. There are 12,000 seats in the $3 section, 7,000 in the $2 section, 6,000 in the $1 section, and 21,000 at 50 cents. Starting at the 12th row the seats are elevated at an average rise of more than three inches a row. This is three times the elevation of the ringside section at the bouts between the United States and France last year. Grouped around the diagram are members of the Chicago squad.

Seven high school students from Arkansas City, Kas., won the track and field championship of the United States yesterday. These boys, who already had won the Kansas high school championship, scored 31 2-7 points in the twenty-eighth renewal of the University of Chicago interscholastic meet at Stagg field.

Arkansas City won the title principally because of the all around ability of Harold Wilhelm, who, however, did not win an individual title, and because it presented three pole vaulters who shared in a seven way tie for the championship, scoring 13 2-7 points alone.

But the team championship, undetermined until the officials had checked and rechecked the records, was not the feature of the all day program, which attracted a crowd of 8,000, the largest to see any outdoor games in Chicago since the British-American meet at Soldiers' field two years ago.

Records Are Broken.

Three meet records were broken and two of these also established new national marks. But even these superior races in the 100 yard dash and the high hurdles, the fastest ever run by prep athletes, and the new Stagg rec-

ECONOMIC TIES RECORD TO WIN IN OHIO DERBY

Cleveland, O., June 4.—(AP)—Economic, the odds on favorite, equaled the Derby record of 1:51 3-5 to run the Ohio State Derby, $10,000 added, at Bainbridge Park this afternoon. Springsteel was second; Our Fancy third. The race was for a mile and an eighth.

Economic, which finished second to Burgoo King in the Kentucky Derby, flashed over the line first in a field of seven. The track was lightning fast.

Fonseca's Hit Scores Kress, Beats Browns

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Manager Lew Fonseca, who has been growing increasingly weary of beholding his various castoffs slay his ball nine, had a happy day for himself yesterday in the course of a 6 to 5, ten inning victory over the St. Louis Browns.

The climax of Lew's joyous afternoon came when he personally slammed a single with two out in the tenth to drive home Red Kress with the winning run. But even before that he had felt pretty swell while watching Bruce Campbell, class of '32, strike out twice in the pinch after having driven in both of the Browns' first two runs. And he had felt no great sorrow when Bump Hadley, also class of '32, and the object of the principal criticism of Lew's wholesale swappings, faded out of the picture. Bump wasn't charged with the defeat, but his wildness did much to keep the Sox in the ball game. And it was fitting that Red Kress, who came to the Sox for both Campbell and Hadley, should be the laddy buck who came home with the winning run.

Schulte Is a Pesky Gent.

The game was a nice one to watch, especially for Sox partisans, for the Chicagoans played their second errorless game in two days and Sam Jones and Tommy Thomas did some good pitching, except when casting to Freddy Schulte.

Schulte had a triple, two doubles and two singles in six times at bat, and the one time the Sox got him out he drove in the run which gave the Browns a 4 to 3 lead. The Belvidere blond scored after his triple and his first double and would have scored after his second double but for the best catch of the year which Hodapp executed on Goslin in the fifth inning.

Schulte drove in the fourth Brownie run in the sixth for a 4 to 3 edge

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 4.—A hurricane of enemy hits caught the Cubs today and swirled them into one of their most decisive beatings of the campaign. Sixteen safe clouts, ranging from homers down to singles, bounced off the Pirate bats, and under pressure such as that the league leading Chicagoans could do nothing more than wait for the inevitable finish. It finally came with the score reading 12 to 4.

As might be guessed by what the frolicking Pirates did with their bats, it was a bad afternoon for Cub pitchers. Old Burleigh Grimes, who once was employed hereabouts, was the first to have his cap knocked off. He went away from where he was trying to work just as the home troops were completing a four run rally in the fourth. Jakie May finished that inning and then Bud Tinning was elected. What the Pirates did to him in the sixth will not make good reading for his folks back home.

Bill Jurges Hits a Homer.

To aggravate matters the Cubs didn't hit enough to cause any alarm among the 6,000 attending partisans. Heinie Meine, making his first start of the year after a prolonged appearance in a holdout rôle, yielded seven hits, but only three came in the first seven innings. One happened to be a homer by Bill Jurges with a teammate on base in the third and that was the only time during the struggle that the Chicagoans were in front. The Pirates adjusted that in a hurry by making good use of their bats as well as Grimes' apparent lack of control.

A slip in the Cubs' defense provided the Pirates with their first run in the second inning. Barbee opened with a fly ball two bagger close to the line in right and moved to third on Suhr's fly to Hornsby. Piet bounced to English, who threw to the plate trying to get Barbee. Hartnett chased Barbee back toward third and then cut loose at close range with a bullet like peg. English couldn't hold the ball, so Barbee scored and Piet went to second. That was as far as he traveled.

Cubs Lead for a Few Minutes.

Meine adopted the old country custom of dusting 'em off in the third, and by so doing rendered the Cubs some valuable assistance. ATHLETICS AND YANKEES SPLIT DOUBLE HEADER

Macks Win First, 10 to 7; Lose Second, 7 to 4.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 4.—(AP)—The Athletics and the New York Yankees continued their home run bombardment through the first game of a double header today and then settled down for a quiet contest that ended the twin bill and their six game series all square.

The A's won the first game today, 10 to 7, hammering the ball all over the lot and smashing out four homers to bring their total for the series to 10. The Yanks slammed Tony Freitas, Philadelphia rookie, around in the first inning of the second game and won, 7 to 4.

The homers, which included Jimmie Foxx's 20th of the season, handed Lefty Grove his tenth victory of the season and ninth in succession on a platter. The star southpaw had a bad time trying to still the Yankee bats, yielding 13 hits, but he lasted the full distance.

EASTMAN BREAKS 2 WORLD MARKS, THEN COLLAPSES

San Francisco, Cal., June 4.—[U.P.]—Ben Eastman, sensational Stanford middle distance runner, bettered two world records in one race today when he breasted the tape at the end of 800 meters in 1:50 and continued several paces to the 880 yard tape in 1:50.9. He collapsed at the finish.

The old record in the 800 meter event was 1:50.6, set by Sera Martin of France. The recognized world's mark in the half mile is 1:51.6, which was broken once before by Eastman this season.

His exceptional performance was a feature of the annual Pacific association track and field championships today. Bob Kiesel, University of California track star, equaled the world record in the 100 meter dash when he won that event in 10.4 seconds.

BRAVES' SPLIT WITH DODGERS COSTS LEAD TIE

Boston Takes Opener, 9-2; Then Loses, 6-4.

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 4.—(AP)—The Dodgers knocked the Boston Braves out of a chance to tie for first place in the National league today when they edged out a 6 to 4 decision in the second game of a double header after Boston had won the opener, 9 to 2. The split gave the Braves the series, 3 to 2.

Huck Betts won his sixth straight victory in the first game although tagged for 11 hits. Boston pounded Waite Hoyt in the early innings. Bill Akers batted in five runs with a homer and a triple. Jack Quinn relieved Hollis Thurston in the eighth inning of the second game with the tying run on base and held the lead through Kelly's good play at first.

Four teams will battle for the mayor's trophy at 4600 West Fullerton avenue. The four squads, all members of the first division of the International league, are the Swedes, Polish-Italians, Norwegians, Danes, and the Germans.

In the first game, which will start at 10 o'clock, the Swedes will meet the Germans and in the nightcap the Polish-Italians will face the Norwegian-Danes.

Terry Frees McGraw Slaves; Giants Whip Phils, 10-4, 6-4

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Copyright: 1932: By The Chicago Tribune.]

New York, June 4.—About 25,000 customers, by no means a parkful, but the nearest approach to an old fashioned quorum that has attended a game at the Polo Grounds this year, turned out this afternoon to watch the emancipated Giants celebrate their release from the mental legirons and the household espionage which trammeled them at work and at play when John McGraw was the master mind of the operating department and the head man of the Cheka system. The young men won a double header from the Phillies, the first game 10 to 4 and the second 6 to 4, and climbed from last place to seventh.

DAVE BANCROFT.

The victory in the first game was only their third on the home grounds this season out of thirteen played and Bill Terry, the young emancipator, who signalized his succession to McGraw by abolishing the master mind plan as well as the secret service department, romped to his position with unusual vigor and grace and with an air of friendly intimacy hitherto unknown in a manager of the New York Giants.

Bancroft Resigns, Too.

Some of the patrons may have been drawn by a morbid wish to observe Mr. McGraw sitting among them stripped of his old prerogatives, but he thwarted all such when he took his stand at the office window high above the center field exit, observing but unobserved. Dave Bancroft, who had been his assistant manager, met him there and told him that he, too, had quit his job lest he come into conflict with the new authority. McGraw said, "Don't be a fool," but presently endorsed his course in this and got him an appointment as his own assistant.

Inasmuch as McGraw's duties in his new position of adviser and counselor seem to be nominal, if not quite imaginary, Mr. Bancroft's work will probably be a little less than half of that. But McGraw is a sincere Tammany man and it is not at all unconventional for a Tammany office holder with nothing to do to enjoy the assistance of a deputy to take care of the details.

Dave Talks About Beef.

Mr. Bancroft visited the press cage between ball games to explain his position and describe his new duties and said McGraw seemed quite sound of wind and limb, a tactless compliment, considering that only 24 hours earlier he had quit his job because of illness.

"He called up home and asked what was for dinner tonight," said Bancroft, "and when she told him roast beef with noodles he said, 'Fine, that's swell.' It takes a pretty fair sort of man to tear into a plate of roast beef and noodles on a hot day like this, so I guess there is some life in the old boy yet."

The suspicion would persist that McGraw had quit because he had lost spiritual control of his ball club, discredited, perhaps, by his own strict methods or undermined by other officials of the firm, or that he and Charlie Stoneham, the owner, had been rolling among the waste baskets on the office floor in some casual argument.

McGraw Goes Home Early.

The testimony in Francis X. McQuade's suit for back pay as treasurer of the firm last winter disclosed that when the high officials of the concern wished to reason with one another the customary way was to start hurling loose objects or right hand swings. At any rate, there was a compliment to McGraw in the skeptical notion that he never would have quit his club in last place while he was well enough to come to the ball yard at all.

The fact was, however, that McGraw looked ill and had lost much of his old incisiveness, and notwithstanding Bancroft's cheerful interpretation of his appetite for roast beef and noodles the old fighter left for home after a few innings of the first game, too weary to stay on.

There was no real reverence for his old master in Terry's inaugural remarks in which he said that first off he was going to give the boys a break and let them be the arbiters of their own bedtime as well as their own diet and refreshments. It was one of the fundamentals of the McGraw system that a ball player would get drunk and stay out all night if there wasn't a house detective to prowl the corridors and fire escapes and report all A. W. O. L.'s to him for discipline. Possibly in the first enjoyment of their unaccustomed freedom some of the athletes will indulge in a few more small beers than are good for ball players, but Terry's belief obviously is that after the reconstruction days they will become responsible citizens.

Doc Knowles Still Around.

Doc Knowles, the club trainer, which was the official title of the house dick under the old régime, was still present in the dugout this afternoon busily fanning this one and that one with his bath towel, but Terry was ominously noncommittal as to the tenure of the functionary who was chased through a diner last year by Shanty Hogan for reporting to McGraw that Shanty had refused to eat up all his spinach. It seemed likely that Mr. Knowles would be allowed to resign, too, but in that case, of course, he could hope for a job watching Bancroft help McGraw do nothing. Under the Tammany system it is not at all common to employ spotters to watch the deputies help the officials perform nominal duties.

Mr. Hogan, the catcher, could not adjust himself to the abolition of the master mind plan this afternoon and for the first few innings his head was turning to the bench for signals before every pitch, as of old. But the boys on the bench, with a shrug and a spread of their hands, only signaled back: "He ain't here any more; use your own judgment," and the catcher adjusted himself to the unaccustomed responsibility and cerebration.

The Giants hit four home runs to win the first game. Ott celebrated Emancipation day with a drive into the stands in the first inning and Jackson hit another in the fourth, scoring Hogan, who had singled. Lindstrom hit one in the sixth, scoring Koenecke and Fitzsimmons, and Fitzsimmons got another in the eighth. There was a slight disturbance in the ninth when the Phils scored three runs, but Bill Walker relieved Fitzsimmons and the challenge fell 'way short.

All About Second Game.

The six runs which won the second one took a lot of making, but the gist of it all was this: Critz and Fullis doubled in the first for one run; Moody scored Vergez with a triple in the second and ran home himself on a single by Critz, who came in on another double by Fullis. That made three more. Then in the seventh Lindstrom hit his second homer of the day, scoring Terry.

LANE TECH BEATS LINDBLOM AGAIN FOR TITLE, 8 TO 3

Seventh Inning Rally Breaks Up Tie.

Two old rivals in the Chicago Public High School league—Lane Tech and Lindblom—met again for the baseball championship yesterday, and the result was unchanged from last year. Lane Tech, led by Edward Hope's four hits, defended its title by scoring five runs in the seventh and eighth innings to triumph, 8 to 3, at Mills stadium.

Until the seventh Lindblom battled the champions to a standstill, but Lane Tech's heavy hitters began to pound the same pitcher they faced last year, Frank Narbut, and two runs broke up a 3 to 3 tie.

Narbut Is Routed.

Narbut, making his last appearance as a prep pitcher, held Lane Tech to only four hits until the seventh, when he was routed. He was replaced by Stevens, who plays first base when Narbut pitches. Stevens proved to be no more effective and Lane Tech scored three more runs in the eighth.

The victory brought Lane Tech its eighth city championship since 1920. It missed the championship series only once in the last twelve years, 1924, when another north section team, Schurz, captured the title.

Lindblom scored only seven hits off Johnny (Bullet) Hari, veteran southpaw hurler, who will be graduated in a few weeks. Johnny quits prep baseball with one of the best records ever achieved by a city league pitcher. He won two of the three Lane Tech victories in the title series, and it was the second time he pitched Lane Tech to a city title.

Lindblom Takes Lead.

Lindblom took the lead in the first half of the fourth inning when Stevens, after a scratch hit, scored on a hit by Blinstrub. Lane Tech in its half of the fourth scored two runs, but Lindblom regained the lead when it scored two runs in the fifth. Another run by Lane Tech tied the score, 3 to 3, at the end of the fifth.

Hari, who held Lindblom hitless in the first half of the seventh, was the first man to oppose Narbut in Lane Tech's half of the inning. He struck out. Hope got on base on Richards' error and a sacrifice by Watson sent him to second.

Denning Triples.

Denning then tripled to score Hope. Denning came home with the second run of the inning on a passed ball and the side was retired when Plaske flied out to Richards.

A triple by Heyer and doubles by Hari and Hope, with three walks off Stevens, gave Lane Tech three more runs in the eighth inning. Score:

I Say, Chicago filly, set the early pace, but when the stretch run started it was a toss-up between Suntica and Late Date, the former getting the decision largely due to the strong ride of Johnny Maiben. FAIRENO WINS BELMONT STAKES BY LENGTH, HALF Woodward Colt Leads from Start to Finish.

New York, June 4.—[Special.]—Faireno, a son of Chatterton and Minerva, owned by William Woodward's Blair stud, today won the 64th running of the historic Belmont stakes before 15,000. The colt led from start to finish in the mile and a half test. It was the second Belmont victory in three years for Woodward, whose Gallant Fox won in 1930.

A length and a half back of Faireno came W. R. Coe's Osculator, which led the Brookmeade stable's Flag Pole by a length. Flag Pole was the 6 to 5 favorite and made a game bid through the stretch, but appeared to pull up lame as Jockey George Fields dismounted.

Delay at Post.

During an eleven minute delay at the post Flag Pole straddled the stall and it is possible he may have suffered an injury then. Trainer R. A. Smith was unwilling to make a statement until the colt had been cooled out and thoroughly examined.

The race grossed $70,120 and had a value of $55,120 to the winner. Faireno was the 5 to 1 second choice and finished in 2:32 4-5, one-fifth of a second slower than Gallant Fox's time two years ago. The track was fast.

Few more thrilling Belmonts have been run, due largely to the fact that the field was the largest of recent years, eleven going to the post. Polo Bar was an added starter and there were no scratches.

Faireno May Be Champ.

Faireno by his victory must be more strongly considered for three year old honors and it is entirely possible he may come on in later specials to clinch the championship. He was not a starter in either the Derby or the Preakness, largely because of an indifferent performance in the Wood Memorial.

Of secondary interest to the Belmont was the twentieth running of the National Stallion stakes, which was captured by Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney's Caterwaul. Joseph E. Widener's The Pelican ran second, three lengths back but two lengths ahead of Wedding Ring. The Pelican was shut off in the closing stages and Garner lodged a claim of foul, but it was not sustained. The value to the winner was $22,520.

Joanna Jones Will Defend Stake Title

Joanna Jones, owned by Dr. C. H. Bramwell of Chicago, will defend her title in the five gaited stake class in the 23d annual South Shore Country club horse show, beginning Tuesday.

SWEEPING LIGHT BRINGS $7,200 AT BELMONT SALE

New York, June 4.—(AP)—Sweeping Light, winner of the Champagne Stakes and second to Tick On in the 1931 Hopeful last year, today topped the dispersal sale of Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt's Fair stable, held at Belmont Park. The three year old son of Manna went to Herbert Pulitzer and Ogden Phipps for $7,200.

Sarazen 2d, five year old son of the famous High Time, was sold to Benny Creech, trainer of the W. R. Coe stable, for $1,800. The B. B. stable stepped in to purchase Makalu, a promising three year old for $600, and also bought Herbert Bayard Swope's Seb for $1,650.

HINDENBURG SEES HIS 1ST GERMAN SPORTING EVENT

BERLIN, June 4.—(AP)—President Paul von Hindenburg for the first time in his life attended performances of various German sports clubs at the Grunewald stadium today.

The meet was held under the auspices of the national athletic board, for the benefit of the Olympic fund, from which the trip of the German team to Los Angeles this summer will be financed.

The president showed great interest in the track and field events, as well as performances of aviation clubs, in which a stunt flyer crashed and was seriously injured.

Notre Dame Athletes Get Scholarship Awards

Notre Dame, Ind., June 4.—[Special.]—Two members of the Notre Dame basketball team, Tommy Burns of Rochester, N. Y., and Clay Johnson of Kent, O., received scholarships at the annual class day exercises today. Burns won a purse of $200 for being adjudged the monogram athlete whose conduct, bearing, and leadership ranked highest. Johnson won the Frank Hering-LeRoy Keach prize for the highest scholastic average of any monogram man for the four year period.

OAKS OR OATS? SUNTICA WINS BOTH

Closely grouped, the field of four in the Illinois Oaks dashes past the Washington Park grandstand on a mile and an eighth gallop for $10,000 prize. Suntica, the eventual winner, is sticking her nose in front, but soon was shuffled back into second place, where she remained until the stretch. There the Willis Sharpe Kilmer filly took the lead and fought it out with Late Date, which was beaten by a nose. Evening, the overnight favorite, was scratched shortly before post time.

Republicans Win Congress Baseball, 19-5; Recount, 20-5

Washington, D. C., June 4.—(AP)—A game that got going as genuine baseball was rounded out as riotous comedy today as Republican congressmen defeated the Democrats, 19 to 5—20 to 5, on the recount.

In the seventh the Republicans evened off the Democrats' flying start of five runs and in the next inning piled up a big lead. In the last half of the eighth the game was almost called for lack of balls. The batters, fouling to right and left, appeared intent in supplying all the small boys in the grandstand with souvenirs.

Vincent Carter, southpaw, captain for the Republicans, showed that he learned a lot playing semi-pro baseball in Wyoming when he pitched the full nine innings, and smacked out a single, a double, and a triple.

Louis Douglas of Arizona, who played with Amherst, made the Republicans think he was a major league pitcher for five innings.

A home run by Hopkins [Rep., Mo.] was the husky hero of the ninth, bringing in two of the seven Republicans' runs when he lifted a ball high over the left fielder.

It was a field day for the camera man and for small boys and girls after autographs. They swarmed over field and grandstand, catching in genial mood Gene Tunney, the umpire; Vice President Curtis, Mrs. Dolly Gann, Chief Justice Hughes, Speaker Garner and Mrs. Garner, and others.

Classic to Be Run July 16 at Arlington

Headlined by the $70,000 Classic, which will be run for the fourth time on Saturday, July 16, dates for the outstanding features of the Arlington Park Jockey club's meeting June 27 to July 30 were announced yesterday by President Otto W. Lehmann following a conference with Racing Secretary Joseph McLennan.

The Classic, which will gross $85,000 with ten starters and will be the world's richest event for three year olds, promises to engage every outstanding member of the division, as none are absent from the entry list. Supplementary nominations on June 1 of Brandon Mint, Flag Pole, and Trinchera rounded out the roster.

$5,000 Inaugural Handicap.

Featuring the opening day's program will be the $5,000 added Arlington Inaugural at 7 furlongs, engaging 3 year olds and older horses, and the feature for Saturday, July 2, is the $15,000 added Arlington Oaks, for 3 year old fillies at one mile and a furlong. George D. Widener's Evening, C. V. Whitney's Top Flight and Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Suntica are among the prominent eligibles for this event, Mr. Lehmann said.

The Stars and Stripes handicap, with $20,000 added and for 3 year olds and older horses at one and one-eighth miles, headlines the Fourth of July program, while another $20,000 added fixture, the Arlington Gold Cup, for 3 year olds and older performers, has been set for decision on Saturday, July 9.

Hyde Park on July 13.

On Wednesday, July 13, the $10,000 added Hyde Park stakes, for juveniles at 5½ furlongs, will be run, and the week-end special is the mile and a quarter Classic. The Lassie stakes, for juvenile fillies at six furlongs that will gross above $30,000, is the main attraction for Wednesday, July 20, and the special for Saturday, July 23, is the $20,000 added Arlington handicap, engaging 3 year olds and older horses at one mile and a quarter.

The two major stakes to be offered during the final week will be the Matron handicap, for fillies and mares 3 year olds and upward, on Wednesday, July 27, and the Arlington Futurity, for juvenile colts and fillies at six furlongs on the closing day, Saturday, July 30. The Matron is endowed with $7,500 and the Futurity, with $25,000 added, will probably gross more than $60,000, making it the richest affair for two year olds ever offered outside of New York and Maryland.

Mr. Lehmann stated that dates for the 21 other stakes to be offered during the Arlington Park meeting, in carrying out the stake-a-day policy, would be decided within a few days. In all Arlington Park will distribute $252,500 in added money to successful horsemen, he added, and the total sum of purses during the meeting may reach $700,000.

BOTTOMLEY WILL NOT BE TRADED TO CINCINNATI

St. Louis, Mo., June 4.—(AP)—Jim Bottomley, Cardinal first baseman, will not be traded to Cincinnati, Sam Breadon, Cardinal owner, said today.

The possibility of Harvey Hendrick, outfielder, being sent back to Cincinnati was not denied by Breadon.

"We have to get rid of three players before June 15," he said, "to reach the midseason player limit. I could not say right now who the players will be or where they will go."

Camping Near a Good Fish Supply; There's the Life!

BY BOB BECKER.

The outdoor fans who like to camp by a lake or stream started to pitch their tents some weeks ago. When we were in northern Michigan on a trout fishing trip we found tent dwellers even on the more remote banks of one of the streams which we visited. It was the last locality in which we would expect to find anybody camping in the month of May, because the stream is quite some distance from a well traveled highway.

If advance indications are any criterion of the summer ahead, the tent dwellers will be numerous in the vacation states from now until fall. Camping next to a supply of good fish is not only a delightful, but an inexpensive outing. Moreover, if the outdoor fan has had experience in the outdoors he can live very comfortably in a tent with such modern equipment as mosquito-proof shelters, air mattresses, and small stoves.

For the camper who wants to leave the automobiles behind and travel by canoe into real wilderness we suggest either the Superior national forest and the Quetico district reached through Ely and Winton, Minn., or the Lake of the Woods region via Fort Francis, Rainey river, or Emo.

These sections of the north woods give the exploring and fishing canoeists some of the finest fishing on the continent and, if one travels far enough away from the going in place, there is no need to worry about traffic cops taking care of the traffic. On the contrary, it is possible to canoe, camp and fish for weeks without seeing anybody.

In the Lake of the Woods country the northern 'lunge [Esox immaculatus] is the king pin, and many go there to fish for nothing but this fish. [The world's record today is from that region—about 56 pounds.]

One of the big differences between the Lake of the Woods country and the Superior Quetico region involves the muskellunge, or "mascalonge" as they spell it in Canada. The Superior territory is out of the drainage system which features the muskie. But up there the northern pike grow until they weigh 15, 20 and 25 pounds and quickly make you forget about muskies.

For an out and out canoeing and fishing country where the outdoor fan wants to leave resorts behind and hit the flowing roads for day after day, the Superior forest and the Quetico is probably the best as far as accessibility is concerned. One can get a complete and efficient outfitting service [from canoes to dried prunes and mosquito nets] at the edge of the forest. So all you have to do is walk down to the waters' edge with your fishing rods and start out.

An added lure this season is the discovery of dozens of new, unfished lakes up there. They haven't been touched as yet and the fish in them are the last word in unsophistication. So take along your machete, your hand ax and compass if you decide to go camping, fishing and canoeing in the Superior and the Quetico, because there are new trails to blaze.

WHY IS IT GREAT HORSES CARRY GREAT NAMES?

Think 'Em Over — the Handle Always Fits.

The Other Side

GREAT race horses, apparently, always are blessed with great names. The following seems to prove mediocre horses have mediocre names. Look at the names of these thoroughbreds which last year were unplaced in all their races:

Acey Deucy	La Pooch
Ah There	Lemon Squash
An How	Little Oo
Baby Leaves	Sam Dink
Barber Bill	Shabby Shoes
Black Lizzie	Swayback Tillie
Bus Fuz	Tweet Tweet
Ibia	Xixies Hat
Jabonlay	Hamhocks
Justa Hug	Donnie Oodles

BY FRENCH LANE.

The other day the word went the rounds on the lawns at the Washington Park course that Twenty Grand was coming back to the races.

You should have seen the faces brighten and should have heard the expressions of delight. Of all the great horses that have ever raced in America none ever became so widely known as Twenty Grand.

Was it the name or the horse? One who cares to look back to the days of prosperity when Twenty Grand came into the world suspects it was the name. Even the baby knew the meaning of the word "grand." And Twenty Grand—well, wasn't that grand?

Great Horses, Great Names.

And come to think of it, has there ever been a great horse with a bad name?

Take Col. Edward R. Bradley's horses down through the years. He's owned some great racers and a lot of bad ones. But he's had four extra good horses—Behave Yourself, Bubbling Over, Blue Larkspur and Burgoo King. Anything wrong with these appellations even if one name was suggested by the antics of a very naughty boy and the other was named for a soup? You can answer.

Now take Man O' War. Wasn't it a pretty good idea to give that name to the greatest American race horse of all time? Suppose he had been called High Wave or Beautiful Flower. It is hard to imagine one of America's greatest champions with such a name.

Regret and Modesty.

Next consider the names of two of the great mares of American racing. One captured a Kentucky Derby. The other was triumphant in an American Derby. Either might have been called Fanny Petticoat or Smiling Mamie or Sugar Plum. But not these two great mares. One was named Regret, the other Modesty.

There were other noted racing mares appropriately named. They included Cleopatra, Sweetheart, Alice Blue Gown, Prudish, Florence Nightingale, and Edith Cavell. Of course any one could have been an ordinary or a no account race horse. But they were great, all of them. And, of course, you recall Top Flight, sensational filly of last season.

It was highly appropriate that the English bred star which gained most of his fame in America should have been called Reigh Count. And Gallant Fox was a good name for a horse that smashed a world's money winning record of long standing.

Happy Gal! Can't Beat It.

Then two great horses of this year's racing—Equipoise and Gallant Knight—have names that cannot be forgotten. Also Mate. That is a trademark for any man's horse. Now take our most promising 2 year old of this season. Her name is Happy Gal. Hard to beat that one, in these times. Happy Gal is so closely related to Gallant Fox she can almost be referred to as his little sister. She runs like the Fox did when he was in his prime.

After scanning the names of these illustrious horses one wonders what is going to become of the good looking 2 year old which Mrs. Dodge Sloan of New York has named Crap Shooter.

When this colt came under the hammer in the E. B. McLean yearling sale last summer Mrs. Sloan and young Jock Whitney had designs on him. They liked the way the son of The Porter and Surplice was put up. So they did all the early bidding for him. When Whitney said "Six Thousand" he was in a chair not so far away from Mrs. Sloan. He leaned over and whispered, "I won't carry the price any higher if you'll toss me a coin for him." Mrs. Sloan's answer was "Okay, Mr. Whitney." So she got him on a bid of $6,100.

Instead of tossing a coin they decided to shake dice for the young thoroughbred. It was to be two high throws out of three. Whitney won the first shake and Mrs. Sloan the second. Then Whitney threw a six. Mrs. Sloan came back with a seven and the colt belonged to her.

So she named her new race horse Crap Shooter.

THORNCLIFFE HANDICAP GOES TO YOUNG KITTY

TORONTO, Ont., June 4.—(AP)—The Seagram stable's Young Kitty outlasted the Erindale stable's Gay Parisian in a driving finish to win the Greyhound handicap for Canadian foaled horses at Thorncliffe Park today.

The 6 year old daughter of Old Koenig-Gallant Kitty, victor in the 1928 king's plate, ran the mile and one-sixteenth in 1:48 and paid $8.10 for a $2 mutuel ticket.

C. V. Whitney's Clotho won the $2,500 added Bryan and O'Hara memorial handicap at a mile and one-sixteenth with Tred Avon second and Ulunlu third. Clotho's time was 1:46 3-5.

ATHLETIC REFORMS.

PRESIDENT JAMES R. ANGELL of Yale has announced acceptance of a survey commission's recommendations for curtailing varsity sports competition and emphasising intramural athletic activities.

The Wake often is at variance, in fact nearly always at variance, with suggestions for drastic college reform movements in sport. Of course, our views may be just as far from correct as we think those of many college professors are, but it seems to us too many of them savor of the cloister and disregard the human element of normal youth.

The Yale plan, however, contains many sound points. There are others which we doubt will prove practical over a period of years. Therefore we'd like to see the system tried out under the sane handling which has nearly always prevailed in Yale athletics. Our viewpoint is influenced by the fact the movement is not hailed as a radical elimination of intercollegiate athletics, but apparently is a sincere effort for a betterment of conditions, at least so far as Yale is concerned. Whether it would prove a betterment can hardly be foretold without trial.

Let us look at some of the points cited.

Curtailment of varsity football schedule to five contests—This was once tried in the Big Ten. It was discarded after two years. Players did not get enough varsity experience in so few games with an eligibility limit of three years. Injuries were not reduced as players did not learn as well how to protect themselves in short training period. Caliber of performance not as good as with more games.

Games only with traditional rivals—Question for each college to decide. Intersectional games unquestionably stimulate public interest. Public money paid for football admissions supports other sports not so self-sustaining.

Cut in athletic costs—Unquestionably expense too high in some colleges. Safe and sanitary equipment must be provided and it is not cheap. Athletic coaches not overpaid, expect in few places, but question involves whether coaches be pros or amateurs, a matter of policy. Economy, but not economy at risk of boys, would be acceptable.

Cutting varsity squads and stimulating intramural squads—Theory fine. Successful at Notre Dame with ball teams, but varsity squad not cut and stimulus for intramurals is the chance of making varsity. Plan still experimental otherwise. Under certain conditions could develop satisfactorily.

Free admission to undergraduates—Not important. Nearly all colleges have student books and all sports calling for reserved seats with annual cost from $6 to $10.

Training tables in dining halls—Excellent! This is something in which the Big Ten, usually a leader, is sadly behind the times. The Wake has been campaigning along this line for some time. Athletes in training need supervised nutricious food.

No organized practice out of season—Spring football only important sport in this category. Difference of opinion now prevails in college circles. The Wake's thought is, "If you do a thing at all, why not do it well?"

No scouting—Opinion differs. It seems more sportsmanlike not to scout if both sides agree, but under present plan there is no chance for accusations along that line.

Amateur coaching—Often tried, but never proved satisfactory. Danger of jealousies and nearly always criticism producing ill feeling. Free work seldom as well done as that for which compensation is given. Many alumni could not afford this time without payment, limiting field of coach. The Wake welcomes trial by an institution of Yale's standing. Doubt that it ever could prevail universally.

Student management of athletic contests — Takes too much time from studies. Seldom as well done as when paid alumni or outsiders make arrangements.

The Wake professes to be open minded toward this Yale plan, yet we must admit our summarization of points involved sounds hostile. It's not hostility—it's simply agnosticism. We doubt whether a majority of the proposals would survive over a period of years. That's why we'd like to see the theory given a fair trial as one feels sure such trial would be given at Yale.

In this discussion we have not brought up the subject of gate receipts or how the athletic budget would be obtained if the public did not provide the financial sinews. That is important at many colleges and universities which wish to use all endowment funds and appropriations for educational purposes.

250 BALL TEAMS OF C. Y. O. START SCHEDULE TODAY

The Catholic Youth organization inaugurates another major sport program this afternoon when the baseball and softball leagues open with more than 250 teams in action throughout the archdiocese of Chicago.

Made up of 56 baseball teams, 108 senior softball squads and 93 junior softball nines, the league will bring into play more than 4,000 boys and young men between the ages of 15 and 25 years.

Germany will have a better team. And so will Chicago. But, more than that, the seating arrangements for July 26 will surpass any accommodations over constructed for an outdoor show.

TRIBUNE officials, with experience gained last year, have chartered a ring side section of 19,000 seats, the farthest of which are only 160 feet from the ring. Elevation, necessary if all are to see, has been considered. The ringside section is elevated THREE TIMES that of last year. The platform on which the seats are built begins to rise at the 12th row ringside and at its highest point converges into the 12th row of the permanent stands of the stadium.

21,000 Tickets at 50 Cents.

Fourteen sections spiral in ever widening circles like a giant spider web, with the ring as the hub. The ring will be placed approximately at the goal posts at the south end of the stadium gridiron. This has permitted the use of the permanent seats and will afford unobstructed view of the fights.

Twelve thousand of these seats are priced at $3. Seven thousand are $2. Beginning in the 12th row of the permanent stands, there are 6,000 $1 seats in the semi-circle. And back of these, just 192 feet from the ring, are 21,000 fifty cent seats. No other boxing show ever has offered reserved seats for such prices.

Buy Your Tickets Now!

A diagram of all seats has been prepared. It attests to the effort of the architects to make every seat perfect. And now is the time to buy your tickets. Study the diagram; select the locations you prefer, and order them immediately. Mail your request with your check, money order, or cash, to the GOLDEN GLOVES TICKET MANAGER, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Tribune Tower. All checks should be made payable to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

The American team, boys from the annual Golden Gloves tournaments of five states, will be ready for the German champions. Make no mistake about this. While the eight champions of 1932 will be among the squad which will start training the first week of July in the Wisconsin woods other fighters will be included in the party. And the best boys will get the chance to meet the German champions.

Forget That New York Defeat.

Chicago lost the intercity bouts in New York last March, but the score of that tournament did not indicate the ability of the Chicago boys. Only two of the sixteen fights in Madison Square Garden were uneven. Fourteen others were so closely contested that one point in the judges' scores frequently determined the winner.

Three weeks of training outdoors will prepare the Chicago boys as no other team ever has been trained. Daily drills and careful instruction under perfect conditions will produce a team that Germany will find worthy of its boys, who last winter whipped a Yankee team which invaded the fatherland, ten bouts to six.

The international bouts will mark Germany's only team competition this year in America. Five of the boxers will return home immediately. Three are expected to participate in the Olympic boxing at Los Angeles.

FORTY TO START IN J. P. I. FOUR MILE ROAD RACE

A four mile road race will be sponsored by the Jewish People's institute today. Forty have entered the race, which will start at 1:30 o'clock at the J. P. I. clubhouse, 3500 Douglas boulevard. The outstanding runner is James Bliss of the Schwaben Athletic club, winner of last year's Central A. A. U. five mile championship.

Eight awards will be made. The winner of the race will receive a loving cup, the next five will be given medals and the first two teams scoring the most number of points will be awarded a trophy. The route follows: West from J. P. I. to Independence boulevard, north to Garfield park, south on Independence boulevard to Douglas boulevard, east to Douglas park and west to J. P. I.

EX-NOTRE DAME STARS CALL YALE PLAN OBSOLETE

Point Out Defects in 'New' Athletic System.

Notre Dame, Ind., June 4.—[Special.]—The proposed Yale house plan of athletics today was called an antique by several nationally known Notre Dame graduates who are now coaching here.

The consensus is that Yale is doing what Pennsylvania did last year in reorganizing its athletic department, namely, going back in the history of football to ideas that have been previously tried. Some of these ideas have worked and some have not and will not, the coaches said.

Edward [Slip] Madigan, St. Mary's, Cal.; Charles Bachman, University of Florida; Frank Thomas, University of Alabama; Tom Lieb, Loyola, Cal.; Larry [Moon] Mullins, St. Benedict's, Kas.; Chet Wynne and Rog Kelly, Alabama Poly, and Arthur [Bud] Boeringer, Detroit university, were those who expressed their opinions on the Yale innovation.

Hall Competition Old.

Madigan said the Yale plan, in providing for inter-hall athletics, is merely doing what has been going on at Notre Dame for 15 or 20 years. "We have only four dormitories at St. Mary's," he said, "but we have a successful inter-hall system. The same true of Santa Clara [Cal.], where Maurice [Clipper] Smith, a former Notre Dame man, is coaching.

"As for Yale's idea of minimizing gate receipts by letting students into the games free and cutting the prices I find that all over the coast students are admitted free to contests, either for a specified amount taken out of their tuition or out of their general entertainment fee. Of course, if a school is heavily enough endowed it can do away with admission prices entirely. If Yale is making too much money it can turn its proceeds over to organized charities."

Regarding Yale's plan to cut its intercollegiate schedule to five games, Madigan said: "Well, Yale doesn't play more than five good games now and they'll keep the good teams they are now playing."

Frowns on Amateur Coaches.

Bachman said Yale's idea of employing amateur coaches is a reversion to the days of football's infancy when the captain or previous year's captain trained and coached athletic squads. "The idea was tried and it failed. There must be supervision and responsibility vested in one man for the good of the game and of the players," he declared.

"I don't think it advisable," Bachman continued, "to cut the schedule to five games. The Big Ten once cut to seven games, but it returned to eight, which, I think is the ideal schedule. You can work up to your hard games on a eight game card."

The Yale plan suggests doing away with spring practice and with scouting. Thomas believes spring practice is a good thing for conditioning players if it does not interfere with other sports, if it is not compulsory, and if it is not too strenuous. "Scouting," he said, "cannot be eliminated. It is at least frank and above board. If it is abolished, there is always the slight suspicion that the team is getting information from some source or another."

Wynne and Kiley Agree.

Wynne and Kiley echoed this opinion, saying that players cannot play any better than third rate football without spring practice. Wynne thinks Yale is merely trying something which has been largely in effect at Notre Dame and other schools for years.

Mullins gave the point of view of the average small college from his experience at St. Benedict's. "The Yale plan," he said, "is all right for Yale, but it won't work in a small school. There must be athletic receipts to pay for equipment and for the professional coaching that the players want and deserve. Amateur coaches just won't care about their teams."

Lieb had this to say regarding the cutting of gate receipts at Yale: "Students will be admitted free as they are everywhere else. Prices for other persons will be cut as they will be cut everywhere else because of economic conditions."

Colleges Need Receipts.

Bachman pointed out that Florida was hard hit by the collapse of its real estate boom and again by the current business depression. "We feel the need of gate receipts," he said, "to support our athletics."

Madigan was the only coach to express an optimistic prediction for attendance at all games next fall. Others said that while reductions in prices will be necessary and attendance at small games will drop, the major games will be as well attended as ever.

rive any pleasure from the advantage.

Herman committed a bad throw on Lloyd Waner's grounder to start the Pirate third, and this caused all kinds of trouble. Grimm's neat pickup of P. Waner's grounder forced the kid brother at second. Vaughan singled into center and Traynor walked to load the bases. P. Waner ran home on Barbee's fly to Richbourg. Suhr contributed a single to score Vaughan. Piet then walked, but Grimes batted down Grace's drive and threw him out to end the inning.

Here's the Terrible Fourth.

Meine singled to start the Pirate's four run uprising in the fourth. Lloyd Waner also singled, but Brother Paul was tossed out by Herman. Meine and L. Waner dashed home on Vaughan's single to center. Traynor singled, Barbee flied out and a pass to Suhr filled the bases. At this point Grimes committed a balk by making a motion to throw to first but not releasing the ball. Vaughan scored on it and the two other runners advanced. A walk to Piet filled the bases again and Manager Hornsby excused Grimes. May was greeted by Grace's single to short on which Traynor scored the fourth run of the attack.

Courtesy on the part of the Pirates enabled the Cubs to break out with a run in the fifth. Grimm was thrown out and Hartnett lined a single over third. Jurges tapped to Meine, whose idea about throwing to second to force Hartnett was all right, but the peg was wild and Hartnett went to third.

Zack Taylor batted for May and rolled one to Piet, who put on a juggling act which permitted Hartnett to score and Taylor to reach first.

Good Old Des Moines!

Tinning did very well in the fifth, his first inning, but after the sixth probably wished he was back in the quiet of Des Moines. Traynor stirred up this hurricane by doubling to left. Barbee scored him with a single. Suhr's triple off the right field concrete scored Barbee. Piet walked and then Grace scored himself and a couple of others by drilling a homer into the center field corner. After this the bases were filled on scratch singles by P. Waner, Vaughan and Traynor, but none of them scored.

The Cubs crowded into the eighth as many hits as they had produced in the seven previous innings. One run grew out of this flurry. It began with Richbourg singling to center with one out. Herman singled to left and when Barbee fumbled Richbourg ran to third. Suhr knocked down a drive by English, but couldn't recover in time to prevent the sprightly Cub from beating it for a hit on which Richbourg scored. Then Moore, who had taken Hornsby's place, poked into a double play.

WARNEKE SEEKS NO. 8

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 4.—The Cubs and Pirates jumped back to Chicago this evening for their Sunday date at Wrigley field. Lon Warneke will be sent out in quest of his eighth victory of the season. Larry French will try to keep him from getting it.

Pitcher Buck Newsom said good-by to the Cubs this evening. He started on his way to join Clarence Rowland's Reading, Pa., club of the International league. Newsom hadn't appeared in a Cub game until today.

Stanley Hack, who was purchased from Sacramento for $42,000 on the theory that he was a big league third baseman, is absorbing a lot of practice as an outfielder.

Hornsby excused a half dozen of his men from the jump back to Chicago tonight. They went straight to New York, where they will be rejoined by the team Monday evening. The eastern jaunt opens Tuesday at Brooklyn.

Hornsby, after playing six innings, decided he had seen enough. He retired to give Moore a chance in right. The manager was up at bat three times. He singled once and was doubled at second when Stephenson struck out on a hit and run play. In his two other attempts Hornsby bounced to the shortstop.

Arkansas City Wins U. S. Prep Track Title; 3 Records Fall

ord in the high jump, must yield to the double championship won by Little Fritz Pollard of Senn High school, Chicago.

Fred Pollard, son of Fritz Pollard, former Brown half back, whom Walter Camp named on his all-American football team sixteen years ago, won the national high and low hurdle titles. Without aid, he counted 20 points, sufficient to give Senn High second place in the final standings, edging out Libertyville, Ill., which finished third with 18 points.

Two weeks ago Little Fritz won both hurdle championships in the Illinois high school meet at Champaign, setting new state records.

Pollard Beats Allen.

Pollard wasn't the best high hurdler in yesterday's meet, but, although his best mark in the preliminaries, 15 seconds, was bettered one-tenth of a second by Sam Allen of Bristow, Okla., Fritz literally ran his opponent into the ground in the finals.

Stamina was the answer to Pollard's high hurdle victory. With preliminary heats in the morning and the semi-finals and finals crowded into an hour in the afternoon, endurance was a vital factor. Allen won his morning preliminary in 15 1-10 seconds, which tied the meet record. Pollard won his semi-final heat in 15 seconds, but Allen came back with a race of 14 9-10 seconds, establishing a new national mark in the semi-finals. Then the pair hooked up in the finals.

At the fourth hurdle Pollard ticked the barrier, but he continued stride for stride with the Oklahoma youngster. At the seventh hurdle, leading by half a step, Allen crashed into the barrier, was thrown completely off stride, and, while he didn't fall, he was unable to finish. Pollard continued, to win the championship, again in 15 seconds.

He Wins Lows, Too.

Three high hurdle races prepared the Senn star for the 220 yard low hurdles. He coasted through his preliminary heat and then in the finals called on his limitless reserve to beat out Harold Wilhelm of the championship Arkansas City team by less than a yard. It was Fritz's fifth hurdle race of the day.

Jimmy Owen of Maplewood, Mo., was the other prep who flashed across the cinders to national recognition. This speedster, specializing in the 100 yard race, broke the national record established in 1913. First he tied that mark of 9 8-10 seconds in his qualifying heat. This dash made him the seventh high school athlete who had equaled Charley Hoyt's original mark and placed him in the same category with George Simpson, Eddie Tolan and Ralph Metcalfe. But Owen wasn't through.

In the finals Jimmy came speeding down the path far in front, and even before the official announcement the thousands sensed they had seen the fastest dash of the 28 interscholastic meets. He had covered the distance in 9 7-10 seconds. Owen was the defending champion from 1931.

Sets Jump Record.

Orville Madsen of Senior High, Ames, Ia., broke the third meet record. Madsen cleared the bar in the high jump at six feet 4½ inches, surpassing the five year old mark of six feet 2⅜ inches set by Brame of Roosevelt High, Dayton, O.

Roosevelt High, perennially one of the outstanding contributors to the meet, did not send its star, Amsden Oliver, defending hurdle champion. Oliver was unable to secure permission of the school authorities to skip graduating exercises on Friday night.

Seven pole vaulters officially tied for the championship at 12 feet. Three of the tying pole vaulters—Raymond Noble, Dalton Landers, and Vinson Tingley—were from Arkansas City. Their 13 2-7 points were added to Wilhelm's second place in the low hurdles and fourth place in the high hurdles. Herman Blackwell finished fifth in the javelin throw, and the relay team, on which Wilhelm ran anchor, was fourth.

Six Illinois Champions.

In all, Illinois boys accounted for six individual championships. Marshall Miller of Maine Township High school, Des Plaines, which won the 1931 meet, won the second race in the quarter mile. His time was better than that in the first race. Bob Stephen of Joliet, tossed the 12 pound shot over 51 feet. Bange Burnett of Libertyville won the discus throw, while George Meagher of De Pue was the best of the broad jumpers. Pollard, of course, had two titles.

Randall Herman of Oak Park, state sprint champion, who was believed to have excellent chances yesterday, failed to place in the 100 yard dash, but he managed to get third place in the longer sprint. Summaries:

SCHOONER VELMA VICTOR IN ANNUAL GAS BUOY RACE

Brisk Breeze Gives Yachts a Merry Afternoon.

That frisky southwest breeze which helped Chicago's sailors open the local yachting season on Memorial day must have decided to stay over, for it was still hanging around the lake front yesterday and assisted them in producing spirited racing at Belmont harbor, Jackson park, and the downtown sailing grounds, although it betrayed a leaning toward the west several times during the afternoon.

Jackson Park held its tenth annual race to the Calumet gas buoy, with Hal Redmon's schooner Velma, Bryce Hess' yawl Beaver, the Byrne-Nemeth sloop Flight, and the O'Rourke brothers' Q boat Intruder the winners in their respective classes. The Weston-Dunlap schooner Fame, sailing without competition, also made the trip down the red marker off the old South Chicago light.

The first leg, from the starting line to the Cheltenham shoal buoy, was close hauled, while the second leg, running to the Calumet buoy, was a close reach. Velma and Edith III., sailed by Redmon and Bert Williamson, rival skippers from the days of their 21 foot boats, had quite a time of it in the early running, but Redmon finally pulled away and won by six minutes on the corrected time basis.

Flight's Big Start Wins.

Fran Byrne made a great start with Flight, and that was enough to give hive him a lead over Columbia which he protected to the finish. The Intruder and the Princess also had a battle which wasn't settled until the last leg of the race.

The stars and jacks didn't make the run to Calumet, sailing once around the regular club course, with Fred Reuter's star Dan and Dr. C. H. Miller's Crackerjack the winners.

At Belmont harbor, in the second race of series A over the triangular twelve mile course, Gossoon II., owned and sailed by Mal Vail and Bill Fauret, made its first appearance of the season and ran away from four other R class boats. Mrs. Haven Requa again sailed Ulysses to an easy victory in the pup class, while George Getz Jr.'s Acquila was home first in the eagle division.

Finish Seconds Apart.

Colleen crossed the line first among the R boats, but Gossoon soon stepped out in front and was never headed, being three minutes ahead of Ariel on the first time around. The best part of the race came in the finish, among Nancy, Ariel and Varya. They finished in that order, but only seconds apart.

The eagles had the best battle of the afternoon, Acquila, Falcon and Ora being so closely grouped at the finish that their crews didn't know who had won the race until some minutes after it was over. Falcon was first over the line under Bob Haynie's guidance, and struggled for the lead with Acquila and Orn the first time around. Orn was a minute and a half ahead of Falcon the first time they reached the home mark, with Acquila running third, and they maintained those positions until the last leg, when Acquila drew a break and finally won by 14 seconds.

Dee Wins Star Class.

In the star class only two boats appeared, George Dalseg's Bee, sailed by Martin Nilsen, defeated Steve Trumbull and his Pegasus, but not until Steve had given him an argument.

The speedy Hansen-Lotz yawl Swanee was again the victor in the Columbia Yach club's race off the downtown lake front. Nip 'n' Tuck, which last year was sailed by Bert Williamson as Edith II., was second, and A. O. Mason Jr.'s Wanderer II. third. The latter pressed Nip 'n' Tuck all the way around for second place, after Swanee had made it plain that she was going to repeat her Decoration day victory.

Star Poloists to Play Today at Oak Brook

The Oak Brook Polo club will open its season this afternoon when two all-star teams meet on the club's No. 3 field, reserved for important match play, in York road, one mile south of Roosevelt road. The game will begin at 3:30 o'clock.

The opposing teams are well balanced and evenly matched. Both lineups include players who have starred in both the outdoor and indoor game.

Barney Balding, a member of a polo family famed in international play, and who carries an official rating of six goals, will be opposed at the No. 3 position by Paul Butler, who is handicapped at four goals.

Capt. M. L. Stockton of the Four Horsemen will have his troubles stopping James A. Hannah, a fast, flashy player who has come to the front in the last two seasons. Deering Davis, playing at back for the Rough Riders, is another star who reached the top of his game late last season when playing on two tournament winning teams from Oak Brook.

Lineups:

FOUR HORSEMEN.		ROUGH RIDERS.

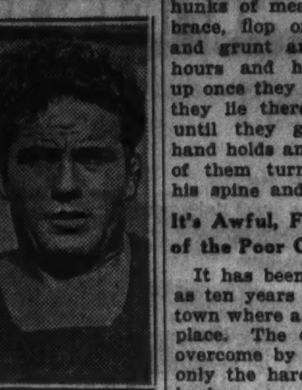
NOBODY'S BUSINESS

by Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK, June 4.—What unreasonable fellows these professional athletes are, to be sure. Now here was the wrestling business, a very corpse of a business, and along came a large, fat, moist philosopher, with a gentle smile and a social background which included a term as bottle washer in a St. Louis bier stube and a party at St. James's palace as the guest of the prince of Wales. This was Jack Curley. Mr. Curley put a battery to this defunct business and made it twitch seven or eight lively twitches. The customers came a-running and for almost two years this business enjoyed a life after death not only in New York but elsewhere.



JIM LONDOS.

They had to have a champion, of course. Every sport must have a champion. So a picturesque Greek immigrant boy with a limousine body and an accidental look of hauteur when you took his picture in profile was elected champion. And didn't this Londos hang the customers from the rafters though? This Londos did. He packed Madison Square Garden and wrestled all hands 'round not once but several times, although William Muldoon, himself an old wrestler and therefore a skeptic, refused to let them designate any of these frolics as matches or contests but insisted that they be advertised as nothing more serious than exhibitions.

Nevertheless, the customers dangled from the roof beams and Londos and Steele, McMillan and all the rest of the herd got rich on the proceeds.

But Will Mr. Londos Give Up Title? Heh!

Then what happened?

Well, then it became apparent that the patrons were weary of the Londos répertoire and the accidental hauteur and were wishful for a new champion, preferably an ugly one with a brutal face, a nominal neck, if any, and a set of doorknob ears. Perceiving this, and being the man who had made the cadaver to twitch those astonishing posthumous jerks, Mr. Curley endeavored to match Londos with some one who would hurl him on his neck for the good of the grand old sport.

And did Mr. Londos accede in a manner of generous sporting resignation as all the champions before him had acceded when they had run their courses? Londos did not. Londos, the greedy, wished to be champion forever.

So they seem to have split out and what has happened to the business now?

Well, now it looks as though Mr. Curley, disgusted with everything, had decided to kill off the business for good and all with a serious wrestling match between two large and fatty parties named Ed Strangler Lewis, a gross and paunchy specimen with a hairy bosom and dangling folds of blubber in his middle region, and Richard Shikat, an irritable German sailor, a veteran of the battle of Jutland, with three tiers of chins.

Let it be understood that a serious wrestling match is an awful thing. A serious wrestling match would be a death blow to the profession. That is the sort of match in which two big hunks of meat come into a fast embrace, flop on the floor, and heave and grunt and roll and wallow for hours and hours. They never get up once they go to the mat. Instead, they lie there and wiggle and twist until they get too moist for firm hand holds and after a long time, one of them turns a flip and lands on his spine and is pinned for the fall.

It's Awful, Folks, to Think of the Poor Customers.

It has been known to take as long as ten years to revive wrestling in a town where a serious match has taken place. The customers stagger home overcome by the horror of it all and only the hardiest of them ever come back.

These two parties, Strangler Lewis, who must be all of 50 by this time, and Shikat, the petulant German, are to be sent into the ring at the Garden corporation's new stadium on Long Island ten days before the Sharkey-Schmeling fight with no agreements or instructions as to how they are to begin or proceed or end up. There will be no rehearsals, all the formulated routines will be ignored, and they will not know which man is the winner until the bout is over, a most unconventional, and, if you ask me, ruinous way of doing in a wrestling bout.

The customers will go to this one no doubt, but they will never go to another. The thing is that nobody in these parts has seen a serious match in the last 25 years, so that nobody in the present generation of customers has any appreciation of the horrors which are about to be perpetrated. But I recall wandering through a college gymnasium a few years ago inspecting the various departments of the manhood factory and observing two young students snuggling off together on a mat in a corner. Inquiring just what was going on, I was told that the two boys were members of two class wrestling teams engaged in an intra-mural bout. They had started two weeks before and they were still wrestling for the first fall. The wrestling season was waning into the baseball season, the cheering sections had long since gone back to their occupations, the match was forgotten by all but the young men concerned, but the coach explained that it was really a furious bout. The closer they snuggled the more grim the contest became, although, to the naked eye, it looked as though the boys were merely mixed up and waiting for some one to come along and untangle them.

STRANGLER LEWIS.

This seems like the end of wrestling in New York, but that is O. K. after all. The boys were bound to fall out some time and destroy their own game and a serious bout is the surest way of all to do it.

Fonseca Sends Fonseca to Bat in 10th, Hits and Sox Win, 6-5

for his team and, with two out in the eighth, tied the score at 5 all with his fourth hit, a single. He put Coffman on second with his fifth hit with two out in the tenth, but Coffman forfeited the scoring position when he got picked off the base by Thomas.

Kress, Blue Fatten Averages.

Kress and Blue fattened up their batting averages in helping the Sox pile up a total of twelve hits. Red had a double, two singles, and a walk and Lu had two singles and two walks. Fothergill had only one hit, but his double with one out in the tenth shook up Coffman and so was a factor in the windup of the game, though he supplied the second out by being trapped between third and home.

Schulte led off the contest with a triple which hit the centerfield wall beyond the scoreboard. Freddy held on while Burns grounded out to Blue, but walked home on Campbell's long fly to Funk. Goslin then singled, but was forced by Ferrell.

The second of Schulte's series of accomplishments started with a double to left, with which he led off the third inning. He moved to second on Burns' sacrifice, and scored on Campbell's single to left.

Jones Gets Busy.

Jones, having observed his associates in a more or less helpless state in the first two innings, decided to set them an example at the start of the Sox third. Sam led off with a single to center and went to third on Appling's single to right. Funk sent a fly to Schulte and Jones scored after the catch. Blue walked and he and Appling moved up on Hodapp's fly to Schulte. Selph grounded to Levey, but the shortstop's throw pulled Burns off the bag, Appling and Blue scoring before Burns could regain his equilibrium.

It wasn't Schulte's fault that he didn't score his and the Browns' third run to tie the score in the fifth. For the third successive time in the game Fred led off an inning with an extra base hit—in the fifth it was another double—and reached third on Burns' infield out. Campbell then fanned and Hodapp made a great diving one hand catch of Goslin's fly to retire the side.

Browns Regain Lead.

In the sixth the Browns popped into the lead. Ferrell doubled off the left field wall, missing a homer by inches, and went to third while Kress was throwing out Melillo. Storti doubled to right, Ferrell scoring the tying run. Levey walked, and the bases were full after Hadley beat out a roller to Kress. Schulte shot a potential double play ball at Kress, which Red fumbled but recovered in time to force Hadley at second, Storti scoring. Levey and Schulte attempted to put on a double steal, and Levey was trapped between third and home, but after a ludicrous attempt at a rundown Levey was permitted to slide back to third, the net being the theft of second by Schulte. Burns walked, filling the bases, but Campbell struck out again.

In their end of the sixth the Sox again effected a tie. Selph beat out a hit to deep short. Then the bases were filled with walks to Fothergill and Kress. Selph scored on Berry's fly to Schulte, Fothergill taking third. Sullivan batted for Jones and rolled to Melillo.

The Sox took the lead in the seventh. Funk singled with one down and stole second. Blue walked, then Funk stole third. Hodapp singled, scoring Funk and putting Blue on second.

Score Goes to 5 to 5.

The score became 5 to 5 when Schulte functioned for the fourth time to single home a run after two were out in the eighth. Storti walked and moved up on Levey's sacrifice. Jenkins batted for Hadley and grounded to Kress, who started a rundown play which retired Storti between third and second, Jenkins reaching second on the maneuver. Grimes ran for Jenkins and scored on Schulte's single to right.

Then came the big doings in the tenth. With one out Fothergill doubled to the scoreboard in left and went to third on Kress' single to short. Berry grounded to Levey and Fothergill was trapped between third and home, Kress going to second. Then Fonseca batted for Thomas and singled to score Kress.

Sox, Shut Out by Gray Twice, Face Him Again Today

Sam Gray, who boasts two shutouts over the Sox this year, will perform in the Sox-Browns final this afternoon. Lyons probably will pitch for the Sox.

The White Sox are city champions but many doubt that they will outdraw the team they vanquished in the city series in today's conflict engagement.

Pete Daglia and Art Smith, new White Sox pitchers, were due here yesterday. Telegraphic advices say they're sure to get in today.

The Red Sox gained only half a game on the White Sox in their astounding double victory over Washington. The Sox are comfortably out of last place with a margin of 6½ games. They are 4½ games back of the sixth place Browns.

It is hoped the Red Sox did much to soften up the Senators in that double licking. The Senators come to Chicago Tuesday.

The season series between the Browns and White Sox now stands 6 to 4 in favor of the St. Louisans.

LONDOS PITCHES THURSDAY NIGHT AT CUBS' FIELD

Hopes to Throw Garibaldi Out of Ring.

Night baseball was quite an innovation a couple of years ago, but it was not half as novel as the kind of baseball to be presented at Wrigley field on Thursday night. Dr. John Krone, the maestro of the evening, personally vouches for this, which should make it sufficient, for who other than the doctor is better qualified to speak on matters of sport, particularly on that manliest of them all, wrestling?

The doctor reports that he has assembled a nine which combines some of the greatest talents in the grand old game of grappling and guarantees that they will hit and field like champions. As a matter of fact, there are ten on the team, and therein lies the real reason for the presentation.

Londos, Garibaldi to Pitch.

There will be two pitchers on the Krone team, neither of them strangers to Chicago devotees of the mat game, and both of them well versed in all departments. One of them, James Landos, who claims at least 51 per cent of the world's wrestling championship, has been the team's starting pitcher for some seasons, but the other, Gino Garibaldi, has been doing so well of late that Dr. Krone has decided to let him try to take the job away from James Thursday night. The doctor likens Londos to Burleigh Grimes and Garibaldi to Lon Warneke, with his usual genius for simile. There is a similarity, at that, for James, at 34, has been a grunt and groan artist for nearly a score of years, while Gino is a mere rookie and only 26.

Londos and Garibaldi will struggle with might and main for James' portion of the world's championship and the $7,500 diamond belt which the admiring millionaire's club of Madison Square Garden presented to him a couple of years ago, after he had revived wrestling with his own peculiar artistry. Their battle will be the first wrestling extravaganza staged in a Chicago ball park since George Hackenschmidt and Frank Gotch clashed at Comiskey park in 1911.

Infielders Get Together.

The remainder of the team is no less gifted in moaning and whinnying than the two pitchers, Dr. Krone states. He is particularly proud of the semi-windup, which brings together Rudy Dusek, the shortstop, and Hans Steinke, the first baseman.

James McMillen, the center fielder, who played football with Red Grange, will try to put out Milo Steinborn, the German strong man, who is in left field. George Zaharias, the catcher, will attempt to stop Pat O'Shocker, the third baseman, from reaching home, while Paul Harper, the Texas collegian who is on second base, will match moans with Jim Clinkstock, the big Indian, who is in right field.

U. S. OPEN TRIALS TOMORROW AT OLYMPIA FIELDS

134 Chicagoland Golfers Seek 16 Places.

One hundred and thirty-four of Chicagoland's leading amateurs and professionals will march over the No. 1 and 4 courses of the Olympia Fields Country club tomorrow seeking the sixteen places allotted to this district in the United States open golf tournament. The sixteen low scorers at the end of the thirty-six holes of medal play will enter the tournament proper, which will be decided at the Fresh Meadow Country club, Flushing, N. Y., on June 23, 24, and 25.

Only three Chicago district players are exempt from competing in the qualifying trials at Olympia Fields tomorrow, and all of them are professionals. The trio, who will not have to qualify because of their performances in last year's meet at Toledo, are Harry Cooper of Glen Oak, Frank Walsh of Bryn Mawr, and Horton Smith of Oak Park.

19 Other Districts.

While the Chicagoland field is trooping over the greens and fairways of Olympia Fields, other golfers will be doing likewise in nineteen other district centers throughout the country, including New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Atlanta, Dallas, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Ore., Omaha, Cincinnati, and Buffalo.

One hundred and fifty players are eligible for the tournament at Fresh Meadow, but there will not be qualifying places to that number. The first thirty scorers and ties in the 1931 open at Inverness qualified automatically for this year's tournament. MacDonald Smith, Gene Sarazen, and Tommy Armour, who begin playing in the British open at Sandwich Wednesday, also are exempt, as are foreign professionals who are visiting the United States now.

Evans Last Chicago Champion.

Chicago has not had an open champion since Chick Evans won at Minikhada in 1916, although Al Espinosa, now competing from Akron, O., battled Bobby Jones to a playoff in 1929. There will be a good field representing this district in the fight to take Billy Burke's crown away from him, particularly among the amateurs.

The local qualifying trial will be conducted by the Chicago District Golf association.

ANDERSON BEATS OLYMPIC RECORD IN DISCUS THROW

New York, June 4.—(AP)—John F. Anderson, former Cornell athlete, and Leo Sexton, former national weight throwing titleholder, turned in the best performances at the 128th annual games of the New York Athletic club at Travers Island today.

Anderson, who had been out of competition since he placed fourth in the Olympic games in 1928, captured the discus throw with a toss of 161 feet 7 inches, exceeding the Olympic mark of 155 feet 2 15-16 inches. The world record is 163 feet 8¾ inches. Sexton tossed the shot 51 feet 11 inches.

Percy Beard, the Alabama world's record holder of the hurdles, made his first appearance in the campaign preliminary to the Olympics by winning the 120 yard hurdles in :14 3-5. A new world's record in the 1¾ miles medley relay was almost created by Manhattan college's team when Frank Crowley ran an anchor mile of 4:17 2-5 to complete the team time of 7:18 4-5. However, the quarter milers had not run full distance and the record was disallowed.

Gene Venzke, who was to have tried again to beat Tommy Conneff's 37 year old mark of 3:02 4-5 in the ¾ mile special, was out with an injury.

ARMOUR DEFENDS TITLE IN BRITISH OPEN WEDNESDAY

Sarazen, Mac Smith Other U. S. Contenders.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Three of America's golfing sharpshooters, Tommy Armour, MacDonald Smith and Gene Sarazen, are going to be doing considerable trans-Atlantic commuting during the next few weeks. The trio are now in England, leading the American players competing in the British open tournament, which opens on the Princes' course at Sandwich Wednesday, and continues Thursday and Friday. They probably will have to keep their swings in tune on shipboard, for after the British meet ends Friday night, they will have less than two weeks to hop back to the French Meadow club, at Flushing, N. Y., where the United States open tournament will be held on June 23, 24 and 25.

Armour has the best reason of any of the three for making the trip to Sandwich, since he will be defending the British open crown which he won last year at Carnoustie, Scotland. The slender war hero, who was born in Edinburgh but has since become an American citizen, won the title last year after he had finished playing.

Gets Title When Jurado Blows.

He played an indifferent game in the first three rounds, turning in respective scores of 73, 75 and 77 for them. Tommy equaled the course record with a 71 on his final eighteen holes, but he was still far from being the winner. The little Argentinian, Jose Jurado, who had entered the tournament unheralded, was burning up the Carnoustie links after Armour had finished and gone into the clubhouse. Tommy came out to find Jose needing only par on the seventeenth and eighteenth to win, but something happened to the South American and he finished with a 297 to run second to Armour's 296.

Last year's British open at Carnoustie was a heartbreaker to Mac Smith, for he was born and raised within a mashie shot of the course there. Mac started well, but came to grief in the closing round and could do no better than tie for fifth with Johnny Farrell. Mac is now an American citizen, and ever since the day in 1910, when he tied his brother Alex and J. J. McDermott for the American open championship, only to lose to Alex in the playoff, he has been the most consistent seeker after major championships in the game, turning up for open meets on both continents year after year.

Sarazen Knows Course.

He has won scores of important tournaments, but when it comes to the American or British opens, the forty year old star can't seem to make the grade. He was third in the British opens of 1923-'24, and 1925 and in 1930, he was only two strokes back of Bobby Jones at the end of the United States open.

Sandwich will not be strange to Sarazen, the third member of the trio, for it was there that he made his best effort in the British open, a second to Walter Hagen. The chunky Italian, who has been a leader in the game since he won the open at Stokie in 1922 at the age of 21, has been playing some of the best golf of his career during the last six months, having led the money winners at the winter tournaments this year, and the open at Sandwich may give him the opportunity to win another major championship.

Who's Who in Women's Golf

By Betty Eckersall

MRS. V. S. COOPER.

The Lincoln Park Golf club has many good women players and one of the best is Mrs. V. S. Cooper, the present Illinois state women's champion, who has never taken a golf lesson.

MRS. V. S. COOPER.

Mrs. Cooper won the Lincoln park title in 1929, and had been runner-up in that event two years prior to her victory.

Mrs. Cooper has had a diversified athletic career. She came to America ten years ago from Southampton, England. While living abroad she was a member of the All England International Hockey eleven. She was also a tennis player, competing at Wimbledon.

Although golf is one of the most popular sports in England, Mrs. Cooper did not take up the sport until she came to this country.

She was chairman of the Lincoln Park [illegible] club for five years, finally resigning this position because it interferred with her career as a piano student and teacher. Mrs. Cooper intends to compete in the majority of the Chicago district events and the local western tournaments.

MOTORS·TRAFFIC·HIGHWAYS

Road Markers to Guide World Fair Visitors

BY HAL FOUST.

A subcommittee on arrangements for the World's Fair is laying out a system of highways and streets to be marked for a distance of fifty or a hundred miles from Chicago to guide motorists to the exposition next year.

World's Fair visitors will be saved from the bewilderment and annoyance experienced by drivers at other times in trying to decipher the normal confusion of federal, state and municipal traffic signs, or lack of signs.

A state commission, authorized by the 1931 legislature to recommend a highway program to the 1933 general assembly, might simplify and rationalize our marking system for the benefit of motorists through the years.

Signs Misleading.

Most of the Illinois highway signs outside of Chicago follow the numbers by which they were designated for construction in the scramble of politicians for spoils and graft in planning the state highway system. In many places the numbers mislead or fail to lead traffic to its designation.

For example, North avenue, the forty foot road to St. Charles, is Ill. 64 west of Elmhurst and Ill. 54 east of the Du Page county suburb. Ill. 46 comes into Cook county on the Northwest highway, turns south on the Mannheim road, has a mile spur on Washington boulevard, and finally turns east on 79th street.

In Chicago, the state numbers did not designate routes for construction. The bond issue system, costing nearly a half billion dollars to build and to finance, did not provide a penny for the streets of Chicago, although motorists of this city have paid, are paying and will continue to pay almost half the total bill.

Bunched on Boulevards.

In Chicago, the Illinois numbers have been bunched on the boulevards or routed down bumpy carline streets, such as Ill. 19 and 21 on Lawrence avenue. This year the state is distributing its numbers, sending some of them over pavements that would not be recommended by a friend and sending others over routes that will be followed by only the occasional car.

North avenue from the city limits to Lake Shore drive is to carry the Ill. 54 marker. It is an example of one of the new state routes that will not be followed except by strangers who will be misguided over the narrow, rough and dangerous carline street by the state highway department.

The Ill. 42A signs that come from the north on Waukegan road formerly took strangers to the loop, even if not over the best pavements. Now the 42A markers leave Waukegan road at Touhy avenue and go south on Harlem avenue and thence southwest on the Joliet road. It's a safe guess that little Waukegan road traffic is headed for Joliet.

Confusing Duplication.

About six years ago the American Association of State Highway Officials, under the supervision of the bureau of public roads, designated certain through routes and federal highways. They were marked with U. S. shields bearing numbers that do not change at state lines.

Many states, Indiana and Michigan, for example, have dropped the state markers on the roads bearing the federal shield. Illinois, however, retains the local numbers with the U. S. signs, a duplication confusing to drivers.

The Cook county highway department two years ago marked its roads and their city continuations with combinations of two letters. The "Voice of Traffic" is still receiving letters asking the meaning of "BG", "PI" and so forth, found posted about the city. The county doesn't tell the passing motorist where these routes lead.

Streets Poorly Marked.

As for Chicago's streets, they are for the large part without names that can be read from an automobile. There are thousands of corners without any signs. Most of the old signs still standing are illegible even from the sidewalk. Ornamental signs mounted on iron standards may be too expensive to erect before the World's Fair, but there are cities such as New Orleans that have done fairly well by stencilling names on the curb.

State Highway Engineer Sheets last year asked the legislature to authorize him to move the numbers on the bond issue system. The general assembly adjourned without acting on the measure.

The state engineer is proud of his elaborate scheme of marking the roads. The cast iron Illinois numbers, resembling a map of the state, cost 30 cents each. Wisconsin, pioneer in road marking, stencils its numbers on culvert walls or on the rear of warning signs.

Mileage Listed.

One of the flourishes of the Illinois system is the sign boards on leaving municipalities, listing villages and crossroads as well as cities ahead of the driver and giving the mileage to these various points.

Politics demands that all possible names be carried on these highway department billboards, even if only one driver in a thousand cares how many miles to Mud Wallow. The Chamber of Commerce of Danville once made a formal protest at Springfield because the name of Urbana appeared on these sign boards more often than the name of Danville.

With so many names on these boards, the passing driver has difficulty in reading whether he's on the right road and how far it is to his destination.

Neater, Cheaper Sign.

A neater sign, cheaper and more valuable to the motoring public, would carry but two names, or three at the most. En route to Chicago, the exit board at city limits could carry the name and distance to the next town and the name and distance to the terminal for a bulk of the traffic on the road, Chicago. If there were two termini of large volumes of traffic, the sign might carry the name and distance to the next town and then the name and distance to both termini.

The twenty-four by forty-two inch distance signs now used by the state cost 91 cents each plus 49 cents for the creosote post. This does not include the labor of stencilling the billboards.

The Chicago Tribune new 1932 Chicagoland Map shows in red all four-lane pavements throughout the Chicago area. The map is on sale at Chicago Tribune Public Service Offices, 1 South Dearborn, Tribune Tower Lobby, 1101 East 63d Street. Price: 25 cents; 30 cents by mail.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

REPORTS SPEED TRAP.

Chicago, June 1.—Crawford avenue is a two lane concrete highway in both northerly and southerly directions and connects at the south end with Lincoln avenue highway and on the north end with Ridge road. There are no buildings, houses or speed law signs of any kind on Crawford avenue, so that automobile drivers are fully justified in assuming that Crawford avenue is a highway subject to Illinois highway speed laws. There are no pedestrians on Crawford avenue.

Illinois state police officer No. 271 has formed the habit of patrolling this territory in a coupe and is generous in issuing arrest slips to drivers who exceed the village of Evanston speed law of 25 miles per hour. One has no means of knowing that Crawford avenue is in the village of Evanston and the village does not have the decency to inform the public by means of signs that a speed limit of 25 miles per hour prevails.

Officer No. 271 meets the victim in the office of Justice of the Peace Barber in Evanston. There is every indication his honor has not heard of the depression and officer No. 271 is daily creating considerable business in the form of arrest slips.

WAUKEGAN ROAD.

Highland Park, Ill., May 25.—Being somewhat incensed by the parade of trucks on Sheridan road past my home, I found this a result of a detour from Waukegan road. I went out there yesterday to investigate. The state is widening Waukegan road from Deerfield to Knollwood corner at the north edge of Lake Forest and the contracts have been let in three parts for the whole nine mile stretch.

Have they closed up the whole nine miles to pave it at once? They have not. They are barricading one part at a time, the three contractors apparently having different ideas of the time of the year when they can get labor cheapest.

Now Waukegan is barricaded from Everett north and it will be closed for three months, I was told. Then they will close it south for a ways and pave that. Then there will be an additional closing. Three months for each of the three closings, or a total of nine months. The foreman told me they could have closed the whole road and paved it in one three months period.

Meanwhile we get enough vibration from parades of ten ton trucks to knock the vases off the buffet. Also I would assume that the many residents along Waukegan road would be inconvenienced three times as long as necessary. Is this the best the state highway department can do?

ALBERT J. HANSER.

LIKES BRICK PAVEMENT.

Chicago Heights, Ill., May 24.—This letter is in reference to your article regarding the proposed resurfacing of worn out concrete highways in Illinois with paving brick.

Knowing the unfair and biased attitude of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE to the brick industry, I do not really expect that you will publish this letter.

In the first place, if the concrete roads are so wonderful, why is it necessary to resurface them in any manner, when they have only been in service approximately eleven or twelve years and when they were sold as "permanent" roads? The bonds which built them are only about half paid.

You speak of extravagance. Where can you find a more marked example than in Illinois' investment in concrete roads? It certainly seems to me as a taxpayer that it is real economy to at least salvage whatever can be saved from these original high priced concrete roads.

I further feel that the engineers in charge of the Illinois highway department are much more competent to pass upon the requirements of the Illinois hard road system than is Mr. Charles M. Hayes, president of the self-admitted great Chicago Motor club, who is more interested in selling insurance to Illinois motorists than he is in any other activity. Further, I would like to have the names of the engineering staff of the Chicago Motor club, together with their experience and standing in the engineering profession.

It is also ridiculous to make an assertion that brick pavements are dangerous. The accidents on the Lincoln highway which are referred to by Mr. Hayes and which I am familiar with, inasmuch as I drive over this stretch frequently, were due to the very material which Mr. Hayes is boosting, namely asphalt. A thin coating of asphalt was left on top of the brick during construction, however, this was immediately corrected, and there have been no accidents since.

22D STREET BOTTLENECK.

Chicago, May 31.—Will somebody please advise how much longer the Rock Island and New York Central railroads are going to be permitted to delay traffic on 22d street at their La Salle street viaduct?

This wide street narrows down from a street on each side of the viaduct of nearly 110 feet to a crossover width of barely 25 feet. To make matters worse, north bound Clark-Wentworth street cars turn at this same spot, making a tieup of traffic continual from early morning to late at night.

Also, in view of the coming World Fair, 22d street will be perhaps the main entrance to the outer drive, and if this nuisance is allowed to continue there will be continual traffic jams at this point.

J. H. JENSEN.

CHICAGO TRAFFIC.

Chicago, May 25.—I have driven from Phoenix, Ariz. and also in the east and Canada, and have seen more hazards in one mile on Chicago streets any time of the day than I have in 5,000 miles driving anywhere else.

The first thing that impresses one coming into Chicago is the absolute disregard for law and order in traffic in every way. Big trucks backed up against the curb and reaching out to the car tracks on wide streets, trucks parked in the street five to ten feet from the curb, autos parked nosed in and projecting out into the street, and parked two or three deep, and boob drivers on the inner lanes instead of the outer lane on wide street; also stop lights disregarded. Stop signs do not mean a thing.

What an opinion people driving in Chicago will have of it during the convention and during the fair in 1933!

Byways Near City Charming in Quietude

These forty foot concrete roads, radiating from Chicago, constructed by the state in the last biennium, after a decade of TRIBUNE editorial campaigning, now accommodate a rapid exit from the city for week-end crowds seeking a holiday in the country.

These main routes get the city dweller into the country quickly, but for leisurely recreational driving the gravel byways must be visited. THE TRIBUNE roadster ran out the Northwest highway last week to Fox River Grove, a village of 641 population, 42 miles from Chicago.

Hit Trail to Top of Hill.

From the highway, at its intersection with route 22, may be seen the Cary ski jump. It's worth a close-up. Turn east from the pavement on a village street bearing the name plate Cary road, thence north after passing a rabbitry, thence in first or second gear up a trail to the top of a hill at the foot of the scaffold.

With the engine turned off, the songs of birds far and near greet the ears. From this altitude there is a vista of miles of wooded knolls and green valleys. Below was the winding Fox river, with a couple of fishermen sitting in row boats.

Back on the main highway in the river side village, a gravel road with a sign Algonquin carried the roadster across the North Western railroad tracks into a quiet countryside away from the hurry of the arterial traffic.

Farm yards were passed, flowers blooming around the houses and fat cows idling beside large barns with stone masonry foundations. There were also farm houses with shutters nailed, the type of abandoned places that young city housewives long to buy and remodel.

A Tiny Church and Tombstones.

At a crossroads was a small frame church with a yard of tombstones shaded by small trees and flowering shrubs, imploring "the passing tribute of a sigh." Parked for a moment with the engine dead, a thousand sounds drifted into the car. The country is not quiet; it is quieting. There were a dozen different bird calls, the coo of doves, the caw of crows, chirp of crickets and croak of frogs; even the distant whistle of a locomotive was musical.

The wandering road returned to the river bank. Rushes and pads grow from still water under willow branches. There are many summer cottages, modest country homes. Flat bottomed row boats are drawn up on the bank. Across the river is a long hill green with trees.

Algonquin, population 866, was entered by crossing a narrow, rattling bridge. The river was clear, a translucent amber. Below the bridge was a rock dam. The water dropped two or three feet, leaving foam on the surface. Men were sitting on the bank with long cane poles. In an idle blacksmith shop four rustic townsmen were playing cards.

Visits Algonquin Camp.

The roadster entered Ill. 22 and turned north, leaving the pavement just outside the village to visit Algonquin camp, a summer home of needy city mothers and children in the shaded bluffs of the river bank. THE TRIBUNE gives editorial support to the camp's campaign for funds. Astrid Save, the superintendent, said that for the sake of the 400 of 500 mothers and children, idle visits are not encouraged.

Back to the east side of the river again, a gravel road was followed south, sometimes in hills and sometimes near the water. On farm gates were signs advertising eggs or honey for sale. On a knoll, silhouetted against the sky, were a team of grey horses and a team of sorrels, grazing.

Carpentersville and East Dundee were entered. There are vegetable as well as flower gardens with most of the homes. Housewives and a few men were hoeing weeds.

Through Woods and Meadows.

The roadster continued south on gravel through rolling country with woods and meadows. A ground hog ran across the road in front of the car. Small herds of dairy cows stood in luxurious pasture.

Pavement was reached on the outskirts of Elgin. Liberty street was traveled to avoid the business district in reaching the Lake street highway for a fast drive back to Chicago, on a 40 foot road with the exception of a paved detour—York road, Grand avenue, and Mannheim road—around the construction of a grade separation at the intersection of Lake street and North avenue in Elmhurst.

The round trip was 120 miles. Taking time for walks in the woods and along the river, and for a roadhouse lunch, it was a restful seven hour excursion.

PUBLIC CLAMOR BRINGING SLOW CUTS IN TAXES

Here and There in U. S. Officials Act.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON

"Cut taxes."

This demand upon public servants in office is being heard throughout the length and breadth of the land in a tone that each day grows more insistent. It is heard in New York and it echoes in California. Taxpayers in the Dakotas are demanding economy in government to relieve the burden on their purses; their fellow citizens in Louisiana are doing likewise.

Possibly the sentiment of all the taxpayers in the nation found crystallization in the national demonstration held in Chicago last week to demand sharp curtailment in the cost of government—national, state and local. Leaders of taxpayers' associations and business organizations are united in holding extravagances in government in a large measure responsible for the length and severity of the current depression. It is estimated that one-fifth of the national income goes to pay the expenses of government.

New York's Heavy Burden.

New York City is bearing an onerous tax load. Possibly the fact that its official directory for 1932 listed an army of 148,557 pay rollers may have some bearing on the situation. The active national military forces in 1930 included only 137,472. At any rate the executive committee of the chamber of commerce of the state of New York pointed out to Mayor Walker and the board of estimate five major steps which it recommended be taken in the interest of economy.

These proposals included the following: Immediate unification of the transit lines of the city; abandonment of short term financing for subway construction; equalization of assessed valuation of real estate; an immediate general reduction in city costs which are not covered by mandatory legislation and the inception of the proper procedure for charter revision to bring about a comprehensive program of economy in municipal affairs.

Demands of Californians.

Out in California taxpayers of the city of Oakland and Alameda county are demanding reductions in salaries of city and county officials, saying "a critical situation exists by reason of the diminished ability of taxpayers to meet their taxes," and the necessity of raising money for unemployment relief.

They point out that besides reducing salaries, there are other ways by which expenses can be cut. Further south, the Santa Barbara County Taxpayers' association appears to be one of the most active associations of its kind in the country. It is making constant demands for reduction of government costs, and recently it has been concentrating its efforts on reducing the cost of education.

In North Dakota the taxpayers' association has been holding a series of meetings in the interest of economy, while the members of one county taxpayers' groups are demanding that its president resign because he is not "serving their best interests."

Down in New Orleans the legislative committee of the Association of Commerce is waging a fight on state tax proposals. Rudolph J. Weinmann, chairman, warns business men that they must not sit by and see their business and homes overburdened with taxes.

Vigilance Easily Relaxed.

In a recent talk he stated: "The trouble is that most business men who pay taxes are tax conscious only during the terms of the legislature. Public opinion can do much in forcing reductions in public expense. The Association of Commerce will sponsor an administrative survey which we believe will reveal ways whereby state money may be saved."

Incidentally the Louisiana Taxpayers' association recently reported that the state's taxes have increased from $5,408,238 in 1912, when the state government's expenditures were $6,436,580, to $31,060,167 in 1931, when the state spent $79,398,111. C. C. Sheppard, president of the association, states that the figures "will be a stop, look and listen sign to all thoughtful men."

Closer home Milwaukee is the center of demands for economy. For instance, a committee on governmental consolidation representing the Milwaukee Real Estate board, Milwaukee County Medical society, and the Academy of Medicine last week reported that through elimination of duplicated and unnecessary services the health department should save at least 25 per cent on its $792,000 budget. And here are some excerpts from an editorial in the Milwaukee Journal, headed "Job Killing Taxes."

Milwaukee's Record Taxes.

"Residents of Milwaukee county are receiving their state tax bills. They prove to be the highest in the history of Wisconsin, these taxes imposed by the legislature under the whip of the La Follette administration. As one taxpayer after another opens his mail he gasps, then seriously sits down to consider what he now can do. There is, of course, nothing he can do about the taxes. Ultimately he must pay them since the state can take his real estate, his automobile, his radio, or almost anything else he may have if he fails.

"The mere fact that he has lost income, that his business is losing money, or that his salary has dwindled does not help him now. He must pay, whatever his present condition. So he says, 'Well, I planned to repaint my house and remodel my porch. That's out, of course.' Thereby a number of painters and carpenters do not get jobs that otherwise they would have had."

Wheat Lower; Follows Cue of Winnipeg

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

The feeling that the grain situation was hopeless and that lower prices were inevitable was more pronounced yesterday than at any time recently.

A drastic decline in Winnipeg wheat which carried the Canadian market off 4⅛@4⅜c from Thursday's finish completely upset the trade here. It started a selling movement which carried the active deliveries down to the lowest level since March 28, with the December breaking below 60c for the first time this season.

Stop loss orders were uncovered in all grains during the day, with September corn and all deliveries of oats and rye dropping to a new low for the season.

Winnipeg Leads Market Here.

Action of the Winnipeg wheat market toward the last was the dominating influence in all grains, although a distinctly heavy undertone was in evidence from the start. The pronounced strength in securities had little effect and toward the last selling became general and disclosed a lack of support except such as was furnished by week-end evening up and buying against bids.

According to Winnipeg messages the spill out in that market was due to hedging sales against purchases of cash wheat in the country. The Canadian government bonus of 5c per bu which is paid to the producer expires on June 15, and the outlook for the new crop is sufficiently favorable to cause farmers to sell freely. There was also selling there by brokers, who were presumably acting for the pool. Stop loss orders were uncovered and the July at the last was 57⅛c in Canadian funds, or about 49c per bu on a gold basis. Chicago at the last yesterday was off 1¾@2c from Thursday's finish.

Wheat Lacks Support.

Lack of support rather than aggressive selling was regarded as one of the main causes for the break in wheat futures here. The finish was at the bottom with net losses of ⅞@1⅛c for the day, with July 54@54¼c; September, 56½@56⅝c, and December, 59⅜@59⅝c.

With Winnipeg July selling at a relative discount of around 5c per bu as compared with Chicago the trade was not hopeful as to export business in domestic grain. However, Buenos Aires has gained about 5c on Chicago in about two weeks, the July in the Argentine market closing yesterday at 50¼c, or ⅛c under the close of May 24, while Chicago has declined 6c during that period.

Foreigners After Wheat.

In addition to the lack of speculative interest in the market traders are now struggling with reports of better conditions in the winter wheat belt. Paul Uhlmann, who was at Hutchinson, Kas., yesterday, wired that the trade on the grain exchange there was now looking for 90,000,000 bu for Kansas, or about 15,000,000 bu in excess of recent expectations, due to improvement brought about by the recent rains. The Winnipeg Free Press report on the three Canadian provinces was construed as bullish, claiming considerable soil drifting had occurred in Saskatchewan and that further rains were needed over a large area.

A fair export demand was in evidence at the seaboard with foreigners taking around 600,000 bu in all positions, largely Manitobas. Liverpool finished ⅛c per bu lower, with July at 58⅞c.

Corn at Season's Low.

Action of wheat was the main influence in corn, with the July selling down to 28¾c, equaling the inside figure of the season. Trade in the aggregate was not large. Closing trades were ⅜@⅝c lower, with July, 28⅞c; September, 31⅝c, and December, 32⅝@32¾c. Crop reports were generally favorable. At the close Chicago June was 2⅜c under the same delivery in Buenos Aires, but there were no intimations of export demand.

July and September oats sold off around 1c from Friday's finish and touched 21⅛c on the break, the lowest figure since June, 1900, and came within ⅛c of the inside figure of that season. In June, 1896, July oats sold as low as 14⅞c. Closing trades were ¾@⅞c lower, with July, 21⅜c; September, 21¼c, and December, 22⅞c. Liquidation developed in rye in sympathy with wheat and the close was ⅝@¾c lower. July finished at 32¼c; September, 34⅝c, and December, 37¾c.

BONDS HIGHER; SOME RAILS GAIN 10 POINTS

Action of Bankers Affects Prices.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 4.—The jump in railroad bond prices on the stock exchange today pointed the way to the strongest bond market in recent years. Net declines for the day were so few throughout the entire list as to be negligible. In domestic corporation bonds the rise was from 1 to 10 points, with the majority of the active foreign issues up 1 to nearly 5 points, and United States government issues up 1-32d to 1-32ds point.

The greatest gain of the entire list was that of 16¾ points in Bush Terminal Building 5s, due 1960, on a single transaction. The company's 5s, due 1955, jumped 12 points on but few more sales. Among the issues to gain ten points were Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis 5s, due 1975, series B; St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern railway 4s, due 1933, and New Haven convertible 6s, due 1948; Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh 4½s, due 1957, jumped 11⅛ points.

Foreign Bonds Improve.

The rise in corporation bonds following in the wake of the formal announcement of the new investment association of leading bankers, coupled with the gains on Thursday and Friday, erased the average losses of the three previous weeks. Of considerable importance also was the fact that the spread between bid and offering prices was narrowed considerably.

In the foreign group, some of the best gains for the day were established by Argentine government loans, some of which climbed from 2¼ to 4⅞ points. German bonds, as a group, showed considerable strength, one of the exceptions, however, being the government 5½s which declined half a point. Fractional gains accrued to French government loans, and kingdom of Italy 7s were up a point. United Kingdom 5½s, due 1937, moved up ⅛ of a point. Japanese government loans advanced fractionally, with the Government-Guaranteed Oriental Development company 5½s, due 1958, recording the major gain in the Japanese group, that of 3 points.

U. S. Bonds Also Rise.

All but one of the bond issues of the United States government list joined in the upward movement, the First Liberty 4¼s which sold off 2-32ds point. The gains for the balance of the group ranged from 1-32d point for the Liberty 3½s and the Fourth Liberty 4¼s, to 15-32ds point for the Treasury 3⅜s.

Of the heaviest traded issues of the entire market, American Telephone and Telegraph 5s, due 1960, jumped 1¼ points; Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit 6s, 2 points; Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, and Pacific 5s, due 1975, 3½ points, and the road's adjustment 5s, due 2000, 1½ points, and Utilities Power and Light 5s, due 1959, 6½ points.

Week's New Offerings.

Despite the fact that only three new issues of bonds were placed on the market this week, that financing, totaling $35,240,000, was the largest since the week ended April 22. The bulk of this week's new financing was accounte dfor by the issue of $30,000,000 Federal Intermediate Credit bank's 3 per cent collateral debentures, due in three, six, nine, and twelve months. They were oversubscribed.

The balance of the new financing consisted of $3,440,000 state of Virginia 3¾ and 4 per cent refunding bonds, and $1,800,000 Albany Port district, N. Y., 5 per cent bonds.

Offerings of bonds in the new market, by groups, for this and last week, follow:

	This week.	Last week.
Fed. int. credit bks.	$30,000,000	....
State and municipal	5,240,000	$18,226,950
Total	$35,240,000	$18,226,950

Bond Pool Seeks Charter.

Albany, N. Y., June 4.—(AP)—Plans for the formation of the $150,000,000 American Securities Investment corporation were laid before the division of corporations of the secretary of state's office today by a representative of the Morgan, Rockefeller, and other large Wall street banking interests. Articles of incorporation are expected to be issued Monday.

The "bond pool" can function as soon as the secretary of state grants a charter. It was understood there was nothing to interfere with the state issuing the articles of incorporation as soon as the secretary's office opens Monday morning.

Treasury Head Approves.

Washington, D. C., June 4.—(AP)—Formation of the American Securities Investment corporation by New York financial interests under the sponsorship of the Young committee of New York financial and industrial leaders was characterized by Secretary Mills today as a "highly encouraging step."

Mr. Mills said the action was carrying out plans of New York bankers to do all they could to bring about improvement of the economic condition of the country.

"It is a single constructive step in a very large picture," the secretary said.

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Chicago Federal Reserve bank for the week ended June 1, 1932, by 161 banks in 36 leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $706,253,000, a decrease of 0.6 per cent, compared with a week ago [$710,820,000]. Compared with the corresponding week of last year [$1,318,721,000], a decrease of 46.4 per cent was shown.

DURANT CONTEST MIRRORS FALL OF STOCK PRICES

Freehold, N. J., June 4.—(AP)—The suit of W. C. Durant, automobile manufacturer, to recover $378,000 from Benjamin Block & Co., was continued until June 17 today by Judge R. V. Lawrence. Durant alleges he lost the money when the brokerage firm sold out his account without notice in October, 1930.

Under cross-examination, Block testified his firm had made as much as $2,000 a day handling Durant's account over a period of ten years.

Earlier he testified he made an effort to reach Durant on Sept. 29, 1930, for money to cover marginal shortages.

Albert F. Straight, office manager for Block & Co., testified that for several years when Durant's account ran short he notified Miss Anna E. Weiler, a clerk in Durant's office, and the shortages were covered.

William J. Malone, a clerk for Block & Co., told how Durant's account shrank in value from $3,214,210 on Sept. 29, 1930, to $1,977,707 on Oct. 10. He said on Sept. 29 Durant's account was carried on a 12½ per cent margin, whereas the firm required 25 per cent.

The rapid shrinkage in stock values, Malone said, created a debit of $2,209,440, which placed Durant more than $231,000 "in the red."

Judge Lawrence asked counsel to submit a complete statement of the manufacturer's stock transactions on June 17.

DAY'S GOLD EXPORT DEALS CALLING FOR $20,354,900 FROM U. S.

New York, June 4.—(AP)—Today's gold transactions resulted in a net loss of $20,354,900 in the country's monetary stock. A total of $8,164,200 was withdrawn for export to France and the stock of gold held under earmark for foreign account increased $12,200,500. There was an import of $9,800 from Mexico.

The strength of Dutch guilders was the feature of a quiet foreign exchange market today. The Holland currency advanced to 40.61 cents for cables, or just under the year's high mark. The Swiss franc also firmed substantially to 40.61 cents, well above the gold export point and the French franc was also slightly higher at 3.95 cents.

The British pound sterling was steady at $3.69¾. The Japanese yen eased and the Mexican peso was under pressure, dropping to another new low for the year at 28.40 cents. Most of the other rates were unchanged.

STOCK PRICES ADVANCE ON CHICAGO MARKET; SHOW GAIN FOR WEEK

Stocks on the Chicago exchange moved higher yesterday in common with securities in other markets on the news formation of a bankers' pool to support the bond market.

Closing prices were from a point to 3 points above Friday's last quotations. The shares of the Insull operating companies and the Swift stocks showed conspicuous strength. Swift & Co. crossed 10 and closed the day with a net gain of more than a point, and Swift International was bid up to 16¾, the best price it has commanded since the recent break in the issue.

Commonwealth Edison gained 2 points to 54½ on fairly active trading, while Public Service no par stock improved 2 points over its previous close. In New York Peoples Gas was bringing 55¼ at the close, a gain of 3 points.

Other conspicuous gains were made by Quaker Oats preferred, up 4 points; Perfect Circle, which added 4 points, and Associated Telephone Utilities, which sold up 6 points to 16. U. S. Radio and Vortex Cup A stock moved up 2 points each.

Thirty representative shares at the close yesterday had a market value of $341,260,114, which compared with $317,202,243 at the close of the preceding week. This represents an increase of $24,057,871, or 7.58 per cent, according to a tabulation by Paul H. Davis & Co.

NATIONAL TEA CO. CUTS DIVIDEND; REDUCES STORES

National Tea company has eliminated 90 small unprofitable stores in the last 12 months, officials disclosed yesterday in connection with announcement of the reduction in the dividend rate from 25 cents to 15 cents quarterly.

Directors declared a quarterly payment of 15 cents, placing the common stock on a 60 cents annual basis compared with $1 formerly.

Elimination of unprofitable units together with the decline in commodity prices accounts for the reduced dollar sales, F. H. Massman, vice president, said. Material reductions have been made in operating costs and merchandise turnover has been increased, he added.

UTILITIES LEAD NEW YORK CURB STOCKS' ADVANCE

New York, June 4.—(AP)—The curb market moved forward more sedately today, but accomplished a broad and substantial advance. On the whole, the final prices were at the day's best, although week-end profit taking appeared here and there.

Utilities were again in the van, although oils and miscellaneous industrials made good headway. An extreme rise of 3⅝ points in Commonwealth Edison was cut to 2½, and Consolidated Gas of Baltimore closed up 1 net after getting 2⅝ higher. American Gas and Electric and Electric Bond and Share gained a point. St. Regis Paper, which has utility interests, rose ¾. Atlas Utilities, an investment trust issue, was up ½ point to 5 in a fair turnover. Cities Service, belonging to both utility and oil categories, rose ¼ point to 2½, or double its recent low.

Standard of Indiana led the oil group with a rise of about a point. Humble and Gulf were up fractionally. Mining issues were largely neglected, although Newmont gained a major fraction.

United Shoe Machinery rose 2½ and Singer Manufacturing 3, in a few transactions. Gains of a point or so appeared in Aluminum company and Swift & Co., the latter getting up to 10 from its recent low of 7.

FEDERAL BOARD DECIDES TIME FOR USE BY RAILROADS

Washington, D. C., June 4.—(AP)—The interstate commerce commission today denied a petition asking Michigan be included in the eastern standard time zone.

It also turned down applications to permit the Pennsylvania railroad to operate its Grand Rapids division on eastern standard time and the Baltimore and Ohio to use central standard time on its lines west of Willard, O.

Previous commission orders defining limits of central and mountain time zones were modified to except portions of a Union Pacific branch line between Plainville and Oakley, Kas., from standard mountain time and include it within central standard time zone for operation purposes.

The commission ruled that, although Michigan by legislative action had voted to use eastern standard time, any change of the zone boundary to include a substantial portion of the state would be attended by grave difficulties of railroad operation.

"If the boundary is to be placed at the state line," the commission said, "it would cross a total of 19 lines of railroad." It added:

"It is clear there can never be a standard time, much less a United States standard time, if, at their pleasure, upon consideration merely of local needs or desires, municipalities in any state are free to shift from one zone to another, either permanently or for a few months in one zone and then in the other."

Railways and Farmers Both Tax Victims

BY SCRUTATOR.

High taxes and the threat of further increases have been found to be the major cause of the prolongation of the depression.

It has been gloomy business analyzing the various factors that have contributed to the decline of the trade and the evaporation of public confidence, but now there is encouragement in the realization that the course is charted and the objective is known.

Confiscatory taxation, it has been shown, has taken the profit out of business, discouraged the investment of capital, and prevented the employment of men. The logical conclusion is that, conversely, a substantial reduction in taxation would restore profit to business, encourage the investment of capital, and permit the reëmployment of idle men.

Railroads' Case Typical.

The case of the railroads is typical. Except for the emergency credit extended them by the Reconstruction Finance corporation the railroads have been unable to attract capital.

Small wonder. The combined financial results of the operations of all class 1 railroads in the country for 1932 will be a deficit of about 70 million dollars if the earnings remain throughout the rest of the year at the levels of the first quarter.

And yet the railroads will pay out something over 300 millions in federal, state, and local taxes. The federal tax at present isn't large, because it is income tax, and railroad incomes are low, but state and local taxes have been about 300 millions per year for a number of years, and such taxes do not drop when earnings decline.

Assume that the railroads continue to lose 70 millions per year. A 50 per cent cut in state and local taxes alone would take them out of the hole and put them 80 million dollars in the black, or a 25 per cent reduction in state and local taxes would enable them to break even.

Highway Building a Factor.

According to the national industrial conference board about a third of the expenditures of state governments in recent years have been for highways. Education ranks second in state expenditures. Increased expenditures for education, highways, and debt service have been the principal factors in the increasing cost of local governments, which, by the way, have been accounting for nearly 55 per cent of the combined expenditures of all governments—federal, state, and local.

Now take another type of business enterprise—the farmer. From 1922 to 1927, according to generally accepted estimates, the farmer paid on the average about 23.3 per cent of his net income in taxes. John C. Watson, Illinois farm tax expert, tells me that, considering the decline in crop values, one may double that 23.3 per cent estimate for 1932 and still err on the side of conservatism. Whitney Coombs has estimated the farmer's annual direct tax bill at approximately 800 million dollars.

Hard to Figure Exactly.

There are many ways to figure farm net income and the results vary considerably, according to the method. But if you follow the system used by the farmers' organizations themselves you cannot avoid the interesting conclusion that if state and local taxes were cut 25 per cent the average farmer would practically double his present net income.

Research in individual cases seems to substantiate this conclusion. The University of Illinois department of agriculture studies the financial results of farms in each county. In 1930, when prices of farm products were considerably higher than they are today, taxes were found to be eating heavily into income.

Typical were the 36 farms studied in McDonough county. Net income from investment and management averaged $892. Taxes averaged $345. These were the county's best farms, and profits then were a lot higher than they are today.

Other industries reveal the same story. Substantial tax reduction will do more than anything else to bring about a return to prosperity.

Banking Group Offers Michigan "Bonus" Bonds

An issue of $4,000,000 state of Michigan soldiers' bonus refunding bonds, $2,000,000 as 5s, maturing 1933 to 1934, and the remainder 4½s, due 1933 to 1936, were offered by a banking syndicate, including Bankers' Trust company, Chase, Harris, Forbes corporation, and First National Old Colony corporation. The 1933 maturities were being offered at a price to yield 3.50 per cent, the 1934s 4.10 per cent, 1935s 4.20 per cent, and the 1936s 4.25 per cent.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, N. Y., June 4.—They got the new "prosperity" rally on the stock exchange working pretty smoothly today. Formal announcement of the formation of a $150,000,000 bankers' pool to stabilize security prices stimulated the share market to fresh endeavors on the upside, and the close of the brief trading session found valuations 1 to 4 points above the previous finals.

All departments of the list shared in the improvement. Buying, while not exactly of fireworks fervor, was sufficient to boost the turnover to nearly a million shares, which is almost double the week-end total of the last two or three months.

Welcome News to Traders.

The speculative community, to judge from the comment, regarded the new move by big Wall street financiers to support the bond market as one of the most constructive bits of news to gain the bulletin board in months.

Rumors that such a syndicate was in course of organization have been going the rounds for days, and when word came yesterday that the formal announcement of the enterprise was imminent nobody found very much difficulty in lending it credence.

This expectation was the mainspring of the rally, which properly got under way in the early dealings yesterday morning.

That the share market did not respond as vigorously as the bond list to the good news was to be expected, of course, but stock traders have been subject so many times to premature enthusiasm since this depression began to play fast and loose with their pocketbooks that most of them demand proof in hand before digging, whatever the temptation.

Early Demand Light.

Something of this precautionary attitude was manifest in the earlier half of today's session. Demand was so modest in the first few minutes that brokers began to ask one another if the customary "secondary reaction" was getting under way before the rally had hardly started. There was no appreciable evidence of overnight accumulation of demand on the strength of yesterday's market at all. Substantial orders were reported around, but most of them ruled under the market, evidently on the theory that recovery was just another flash in the pan.

The forward movement gained gradual momentum during the first hour, however, and carried well into the closing half of the session when week-end realizing shaved down earlier margins to some extent.

Tobacco issues again showed the way with the railroad group trailing close behind. Utilities also improved.

American Tobacco common rose 3⅛ points and the "B" shares 2⅛. Liggett & Myers jumped nearly 7 points on a few sales, Lorillard rose a point and Reynolds about the same.

Offers Some Puzzles.

In view of the drooping tendencies which the tobaccos have been manifesting since the disappointing report on cigaret production came out recently, the sudden enthusiasm in their favor is proving something of a puzzle.

While a substantial proportion of the day's buying no doubt represented short covering by nervous bears, the strength and activity of such old line issues as American Can, Consolidated Gas, Woolworth, National Biscuit, and Union Pacific was taken to indicate that some buying was for the long pull.

Affects San Francisco.

San Francisco, Cal., June 4.—(AP)—Stocks listed on both the New York and San Francisco exchanges continued upward here today after the Wall street close. American Telephone, with a gain of 1¼ over the New York final price, was outstanding, but others gained fractionally.

Raw Silk Imports Are Larger than During April

Imports of raw silk during May were 34,233 bales, as compared with 30,953 in the preceding month, and 42,264 in May, 1931, the Silk Association of America reports. Deliveries to mills totaled 32,923 bales, compared with 35,779 in the previous month and 45,073 in May, 1931.

PUBLIC CLAMOR BRINGING SLOW CUTS IN TAXES

Here and There in U. S. Officials Act.

Commerce adopts a declaration asking economy in government. The first clause in this declaration states: "The chief hindrance to economic recovery, and altogether the most serious issue before all the people today is the excessive cost of government in our cities, counties, states, and the nation." It further says: "This cost was high even during the most prosperous times in our history, but now it is so far above the reduced economic plane upon which people are living as to be indefensible from any point of view."

In New Jersey chambers of commerce and retailers are uniting throughout the state in a campaign directed against the proposed state sales tax. Merchants assert that this tax will endanger the salaries or jobs of some 500,000 employés of 60,000 retail stores in the state. It is stated that every business in the state would be taxed an average of 1 per cent of its total sales.

The Property Owners' Tax league of Rochester, N. Y., is seeking a membership of 10,000 for its campaign to reduce real estate taxes. Throughout Oklahoma officials of the Oklahoma Tax Economy association held a series of meetings last week. In the same state the Nonpartisan Taxpayers' association is working for reductions in salaries for elected officials of the smaller counties.

Indianan's Economy Session.

That these demands of the public are not without their effect is seen in the actions and utterances of some state governors. In Indiana, Gov. Harry G. Leslie has called a special session of the legislature for July 7 to sit "until a specific emergency program of economy and tax legislation shall be completed." In explaining the call he said it was "issued at this time in order that the lawmakers may have ample time in which to prepare necessary economy and taxation bills in advance of the opening day." Further along he says "constructive results at minimum costs will gratify the taxpayers" and September budgets and levies must be in accordance with "the demand of the time for retrenchment and equitable placing of the tax load."

Commenting on the special session, Dr. James H. Green of the Indiana Association for Tax Justice, says: "Tax rates are already a burden against which the people, suffering from badly shattered earning power, are rebelling in no uncertain terms."

Then in a recent address Gov. Ruby Laffoon of Kentucky pictured the equitable and unjust tax laws, beneath the weight of which the United States as "a giant paralyzed" and attributed unemployment to "inequitable and unjust tax laws, Boston, Mass., June 4.—The Compayers of our country are groaning."

Wants Parasites Removed.

Continuing he said, "The time has come when we must change physicians because our nation is sick nigh unto death. We must discharge the quacks and quit taking patent nostrums. What we now most need is the skill of an eminent surgeon—one who is not afraid to apply the knife. The parasites upon the body politic—useless boards and commissions—must be cut off."

Gov. Olson of Minnesota is reported to be preparing plans whereby economies of $1,000,000 in state finances may be effected. Virginia is reported to be making savings of $1,025,000 through salary readjustments.

Some points where economies are reported follow: St. Louis is saving $914,000 through a 10 per cent reduction of all city employés' pay for 10 months. Jersey City hopes to save $2,000,000 through pay cuts. Oklahoma City reports that its park department budget is being reduced over $115,000.

World Trade Decreases.

GENEVA, June 4.—(AP)—The league of nations financial committee, expressing alarm at what it called the growing gravity of the world's financial, industrial and commercial situation, declared tonight that a "courageous program" of international economic coöperation was more necessary than ever.

National "restrictive and obstructive" measures rapidly were strangling international commerce, the report added.

"The purpose of most commercial treaties concluded today appears to be to sanction and advance the right of reciprocal injury," it said.

The British-American negotiations for a world economic conference were hailed hopefully by the committee. It gave the following figures on the shrinkage of international trade between 1929 and 1931: United States, 63 per cent; Germany, 49 per cent; Spain, 70 per cent; France, 51 per cent; Great Britain, 45 per cent; Italy, 46 per cent.

FARRELL WARNS AGAINST BUREAU CONTROL OF U. S.

Depicts Machine Age to Students.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 4.—The problems of American industry can not be solved by centralized control lodged in a government bureau or vested in trade groups, but must be dealt with by the men on the spot, James A. Farrell, retired president of the United States Steel corporation, declared today.

Mr. Farrell spoke at the commencement exercises of Stevens institute in Hoboken, where ninety-two students were graduated. He received the honorary degree of doctor of engineering from the institute.

Planning Is Nothing New.

"Early criticism of our industrial system gave rise to various suggestions looking to centralization of control in some form," said Mr. Farrell. "Economic planning, beyond that which every intelligently managed industry finds it necessary to undertake, is neither feasible nor desirable, either in respect of governmental interference or of organized trade group control, unless we are prepared to abandon American traditions of individual freedom which have served us so well in the past.

"Planning has long been carried out in every modernized plant. Looking out on the world today with its enormous potentialities for increase in trade in countries now on the lowest plane of existence, who will say what limits should be placed on our capacity to meet every emergency in trade expansion?

"This problem only can be dealt with by men on the spot."

Mr. Farrell asserted that our industrial system had played "a minor part" as a contributing cause to present economic stagnation.

Cites Post-war Recovery.

After declaring that it had required eighteen years and several major financial disasters "to convince the world that it is easier to destroy than to build," Mr. Farrell told the graduates that the power of man to rebuild was "not less apparent today than was his power in 1914 to destroy." Then he continued:

"This is not the place, even if time permitted, to enter upon a defense of America's industrial philosophy.

"Those who employ the term 'machine age' as a term of reproach must be altogether lacking in a sense of proportion and in power of imagination. It is difficult to think of the present age being suddenly deprived of the many aids to comfort and enjoyment of life which the products of this machine age alone make possible."

RIVALS FOR AIR TRAFFIC SPEED THEIR SERVICES

Two Seek Lion's Share of Mail Carrying.

Competition between two of the three big transcontinental air lines for mail and passenger traffic has increased proportionately with the rapid gains in volume during the last year. There seems to be every indication that the rivalry will grow more intense as new equipment is added and schedules are shortened during the current year.

Two lines are striving for the lion's share of the coast to coast air mail. They are United Air Lines and Transcontinental and Western Air Lines. So far United has held the largest volume of transcontinental passenger traffic, as well as the largest volume of air mail. The Transcontinental system made a strong bid for more air mail the first of the year by shortening its mail schedule to 24 hours between New York and Los Angeles. Recently United announced that new equipment will be placed in service Sept. 1 that will equal or better that performance.

Increases Mail Carrying.

As a result of the faster service, Transcontinental carried 453,974 pounds of mail in the first four months of this year, compared with 80,499 the first four months of last year. United carried 1,231,135 pounds the first four months of this year and 1,541,027 pounds for the period last year.

In the first quarter of this year, Transcontinental flew a total of 998,000 miles while United flew a total of 2,889,252 miles. United carried 20,586 passengers in the first four months of this year, as compared to 9,741 in the same period last year, an increase of 111 per cent. Transcontinental declined to reveal the number of passengers carried. It does not offer continuous coast to coast travel; passengers stay over night in Kansas City, completing the trip in 36 hours.

United Air Lines flies airways with a total mileage of 6,277 miles, connecting intensely populated centers. The Transcontinental route is 3,998 miles long. The ratio of miles flown per mile of airways operated in the first quarter of this year for United was 460.2 miles and for Transcontinental was 250.4 miles.

Third's Field is Different.

The third big transcontinental air line is not a direct competitor of the other two. American Airways has a more circuitous route that serves a large number of cities in the northeast, middle west, south and southwest. A total of 9,470 miles of airways are flown by that system, by far the longest single system in the United States.

In the first four months of this year American Airways carried 491,996 pounds of mail compared to 458,336 for the same period last year, 18,328 passengers, compared to 9,737 and flew 3,261,106 miles, compared to 2,153,086 miles. Further increases this year are expected since the acquisition of Century Air Lines by American Airways, and the election of E. L. Cord, and L. B. Manning, president and vice president of the Cord corporation, to the board of directors.

SEES UPTURN IN THE OUTDOOR ADVERTISING

J. E. Morrison for several years Chicago representative of the General Outdoor Advertising company, was elected a director of that organization at a special meeting yesterday. E. M. Hales, who has been connected with the organization since 1925, was elected secretary and treasurer.

"We feel a decided upturn," Mr. Morrison declared.

Take Time to Investigate.

If there is anything that the gyp stock promoter abhors it is investigation. He depends for his profits on stirring people's emotions and getting them to do on the spur of the moment things that they would not do if they were to take time to think things over.

The client who refuses to be swept off his feet by the promise of speculative gain and who defers action until he has an opportunity to check the proposition through independent channels is poor pickings for the promoter.

"Have been called over the long distance telephone several times by wildcat stock sellers and when I tell them I will find out what the Investors' Guide thinks of it I am bothered no more," writes H. B. S.

This is not hard to understand. The high pressure salesmen don't get rich on the money they take from people who look before they leap.

When H. B. S. tells the telephone salesman that he will investigate before he invests the salesman knows that the prospect of a sale is slim indeed. H. B. S. will probably learn that the proposition is either unknown or has an unfavorable reputation. He will probably discover that what was offered to him as a sure thing and a sound investment is just another shell game.

The better business bureaus have the slogan: "Before You Invest—Investigate." That is about the best advice that could be given. The individual who takes time to check up before he risks his money protects himself in two ways. He gets advice and information from an independent source and he allows himself a few days to reason the proposition out.

The depression has not driven the securities swindlers out of business. They are active in good times and bad. Inquiries are constantly coming in to this column from people who have received visits, telephone calls or telegrams from strangers urging them to buy this or that stock.

Practically all states now have blue sky laws. These laws contain almost every legislative safeguard that can be arranged to protect the savings of inexperienced investors. They cannot, however, shield people against the consequences of their own credulity.

No law can be a substitute for common sense. For the individual who is approached by the representative of a house he does not know or who is offered a security with which he is unfamiliar there is only one safe course of action. That is to investigate before—not after—he buys.

Estimated receipts at Chicago Monday: Cattle, 15,000; hogs, 37,000; sheep, 12,000.

Receipts of cattle, hogs, and sheep were extremely light on the week-end session. Prices were mostly steady considering quality of offerings.

Swine average lower because of the predominence of poorer grades and nothing of outstanding quality arrived to test the peak prices. The top sank 15c to $3.40, while the general average moved down 5c to $3.15, the latter being a new low. Practically all cattle and sheep here yesterday were billed direct to packers from other points. A few yearlings averaging 83@87 lbs. brought a 10c higher price at $5.50.

Move Toward Better Levels.

Live stock markets made good headway toward a general recovery last week. All but hogs retained the full gains up to the extreme close. The latter commenced to give ground gradually on final sessions when sellers were unable to stir up enough local interest to offset the influence of unfavorable reports from the wholesale market.

Sultry weather proved a serious handicap when it curtailed demand for pork products and caused smaller houses to restrict their buying of hogs. The pressure of live stock receipts was the lightest in recent weeks, which was not attributed entirely to the Monday holiday. Supplies were short on all sessions. Combined receipts of cattle, hogs, and sheep at the seven leading markets were 20 per cent under the average of the last six weeks.

Cattle receipts at Chicago last week at 30,200 were smallest since the Christmas week and compared with 36,919 a year ago and with 50,972 two years ago. Prices stepped up 25@50c in four days and averaged highest in a month's time. Reports that wholesale supplies had been pretty well exhausted before the holiday were substantiated when local houses swung aggressively into the buying of cattle on the rising market.

The general average for beef steers at $6.20 stood highest since week ending May 7 and within $1.15 of the corresponding week in 1931. Eastern houses evidently are also in need of supplies. They are buying a bigger proportion of Chicago receipts than at this time in 1931 and 1930. More than 33 per cent of receipts sold to shippers the last two weeks. A year ago last week order buyers took only 30 per cent and two years ago 26 per cent sold to shippers.

Lamb Supplies Low.

Lamb offerings dropped abnormally low during the last week and prices responded in a substantial rise to the highest levels since middle of last month. Part of the $1.00 advance in the week's average price, however, is attributed to the change in classification from the old crop to the new crop basis. Lambs born this year attracted the majority of buying orders and prices went up 50@75c in four days. Last year's crop showed a 10@25c gain, while more matured stock followed at a slower pace. Total offerings were smallest since June, 1930. Chicago receipts at 49,600 compared with 73,823 in 1931 and with 75,120 two years ago.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 15,000 cattle, 37,000 hogs, and 12,000 sheep, against 13,405 cattle, 43,564 hogs, and 13,209 sheep last Tuesday, last Monday being a holiday, and 12,722 cattle, 39,049 hogs, and 14,059 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 40,000 cattle, 123,000 hogs, and 60,000 sheep, against 39,763 cattle, 114,244 hogs and 60,900 sheep a year ago, and 44,866 cattle, 128,976 hogs, and 47,534 sheep two years ago.

COTTON'S GOOD RECOVERY

Saturday's session restored around $1 per bale to cotton prices at Chicago. However, the gain over the previous day's low was only 5 points. Liverpool ignored weakness in American markets and came in 5@7 points higher. Action of the cotton market is sensitive to political news and the trend of securities, the latter having a favorable influence in its upward trend.

Exports for the season to date are 1,566,991 bales in excess of a year ago at 8,007,049 bales. Supply of cotton in the United States as reported by the department of agriculture is 12,119,000 bales, against 8,584,000 bales on May 1, 1931, and 6,200,000 bales in 1930.

Spot markets advanced 20 points in New York to 5.30c, while New Orleans is only 5 points higher after a holiday Friday at 5.35c, with Houston 5.30c, and Galveston 5.35c. Prices follow:

·WORLD'S·GRAIN·MARKET·NEWS·

Wheat traders in explaining the disappointing action of the market in the last hours of trading said it was useless to try and advance prices and hold them up with a limited short interest, lack of outside buying support, uncertainty as to what congress will do on the taxing propositions, and expectation of increased farmers' deliveries and lower prices in Winnipeg.

Harvey Williams of Thomson & McKinnon, discussing the joint resolution sponsored in the United States senate by Chairman McNary of the agricultural committee providing for distribution of an additional 50,000,000 bu of farm board wheat by the Red Cross, says, "My information is that the Red Cross officials are friendly to the plan, as they anticipate urgent need for relief next winter. About 25,000,000 bu of the first appropriation of 40,000,000 bu has already been disposed of.

"On the basis of 12 per cent discount for Canadian funds, their price of 57c a bu for wheat for July delivery means that Winnipeg wheat is actually selling at around 4c under Chicago in our money," says S. C. Harris. "Considering the superior quality of the Canadian wheat, says Mr. Harris, this does not augur well for export trade in American varieties excepting as the farm board subsidiaries choose to sell it at sacrifice prices at the seaboard tremendously under a Chicago parity."

"Spring wheat prospects are at least an average and in regard to moisture are far ahead of a year ago," says Logan & Bryan. "However, plenty can still happen to the spring wheat crop as the hazardous period for the crop is between now and harvest. With ordinary conditions from now on a good crop should be raised, as the crop probably has stamina enough to overcome the seasonal troubles."

"Congress has before it many proposals for agricultural relief," says Russell's News of New York. "There is such a confusion in the sources of these bills and the nature of their objectives that it seems unlikely any of them will be passed."

HIDE FUTURES

Raw hide futures broke to the lowest level in the history of the New York hide exchange on Thursday, when the June sold at 3.50c per lb. The trend of prices was downward during the greater part of the week, although a slight rally took place during the late trading Friday. There were no sales Saturday, with the close nominally 5@20 points higher.

During the week ended June 4 the active futures registered net losses of from 9 to 35 points for the period in moderate trading. The continued restricted activity in the domestic spot hide markets, coupled with the unfavorable outside influences, were held mainly responsible for the decline on the New York hide exchange. Domestic spot hide values remained unchanged, while in the Argentine market Frigorifico hides were fractionally lower.

COTTON AREA CUT

Cotton acreage in the United States is estimated at 38,316,000 or 7.3 per cent less than the 41,189,000 acres planted last year. Condition June 1 was 74.8 per cent, the best for the last four years, as given by the J. E. Bennett-E. H. Miller report. Last year's condition was 67.3, and in 1930 it was 68.7 per cent. Approximately 39 per cent of the cotton had been chopped to June 1. Unusually heavy emergence of boll weevils is reported. Acreage planted in Texas is 14,507,000, the largest of any state, and is 92 per cent of last year's. In the other big states it is 92 to 95 per cent of last year's. The world's cotton acreage planted last year was estimated at 78,512,000 acres and compared with 83,468,000 acres in 1931 and 82,303,000 acres in 1930.

STANDARD OIL EXPORT.

Corporation's net income for 1931 amounted to $1,923,488 after expenses and taxes, against $4,142,742 in 1930.

CENTRAL STATES ELECTRIC.

Corporation and wholly owned subsidiaries had cash on hand as of May 24 of more than $2,300,000, which exceeds the cash balance at the end of 1931 and is equivalent to more than a full years' interest and sinking fund requirements on the securities in the hands of the public. There are no bank loans nor notes payable. Debentures outstanding have been reduced since Dec. 31 by the purchase of $857,000 principal amount.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Foreigners accepted fair quantities of Manitoba wheats on overnight offers and there were intimations of further business in hard winter. Aggregate sales in all positions, largely Manitobas, were estimated at 600,000 bu. Little interest was shown in other grains.

Chicago handlers sold 9,000 bu wheat, 28,000 bu corn, 56,000 bu oats, and 3,000 bu barley to the domestic trade, with no purchases of grain reported as having been made to arrive.

Milling demand for cash wheat was only fair, but there was no material pressure and the basis in the sample market was steady. No. 2 red was July price to ½c over; No. 2 hard, July to ¼ over, and No. 2 yellow hard and No. 2 mixed, ½@¾c under the future.

A firm undertone prevailed in the cash corn market. No. 2 mixed was ¼@½c over and yellow and white, 1c over the July, while No. 3 mixed was July price to ¼c over, and yellow and white, ½@¾c over.

Cash oats basis was steady, with No. 2 white, ½@1c over July, and No. 3 white, ⅜c over to ⅜c under the future. No. 2 rye was nominally 2c over July.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 11 cars; corn, 52 cars; oats, 35 cars; barley, 3 cars.

OCTOBER EGGS HIGHER

Continued improvement in support carried October eggs up ⅜c on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange yesterday. November gained ¼c. The steady advance in eggs has moved up prices $120 per car for the week. Early storage reports showed another light inward movement of stocks, the four market total storage being 9,500 cases less than last year. Receipts in Chicago and New York also were lighter. Butter news was also better, the four market shortage being increased 296,000 lbs and receipts falling under last year. However, buying was only moderate. Sales: Butter, 16 cars; eggs, 87 cars. Deliveries: Butter, 2 cars. Prices follow:

LONDON STOCKS HIGHER AFTER HOOVER'S TALK

U. S. Budget Prospects Aid Market There.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 4.—American influences were responsible for a decided tonic in stock market conditions and outlook this week. President Hoover's speech in the senate and the acceptance by the senate of tax provisions for balancing the federal budget brought immediate relief to the tension on the stock exchange, which appeared to be approaching a crucial point Tuesday.

The immediate effect was a calming feeling in the foreign exchange market, where since the end of last week there had been an atmosphere of feverish uncertainty, as the flight from the dollar was not confined to the removal of foreign owned balances from New York. But with the easing of the situation leading foreign currencies apparently held with little or no difficulty. The New York rate became steadier and the discount on forward dollars narrowed.

More American Tonic.

Later city sentiment received additional benefit from America's agreement to join the proposal for a new international conference to discuss methods designed to stabilize world commodity prices.

Strong continental buying of international counters followed these two items of news and the markets closed for the week in a more buoyant mood than in many days past, with Wall street and the continental bourses influencing the better atmosphere.

Favorite international dollar securities, such as United States Steel, Brazil Tractions, Nickels, and Canadian Pacific quickly reflected a more confident feeling, while the home group of stocks and industrials trailed along more hopefuly.

Gilt edged securities, responding to the weight of money, continued to rise, the sentiment being assisted additionally by a further fall in the discount rate, the recent treasury bill tenders, and the announcement by the Bank of England of further substantial purchases of bar gold, bringing the total influx of bullion since the middle of May to slightly more than $38,750,000.

Stock Market Easily Affected.

The trend of this week's markets indicates that stock exchange prices are likely to move up substantially on receipt of good news and the slightest spasm of buying. Generally, prices are artificially low. They have remained low because there was always some liquidation, with at times no buying to offset it. The intrinsic merits of industrial securities and shares listed on the stock exchange are not at present the chief factor in determining prices.

The rises following good news such as the ready response to the balancing of the American budget indicate that when international conditions eventually give even faint signs of a definite improvement the effect on the stock markets will be very rapidly shown in substantial and probably spectacular price boosting.

Foreign Bonds Better.

The improved sentiment spread to the foreign bond market, where most government securities rallied sharply, notably Czech 8 per cents, Prague 7½ per cents, Bulgarian sevens, and some German loans. Austrians and Greeks were also steadier, but Rumanians were dull on the resignation of the cabinet.

An outstanding section not sharing in the general recovery was the oil market. The failure of the New York conference, combined with the disappointing Anglo-Persian company figures and reduced dividend from 15 to 5 per cent, was responsible for the dropping tendency. The British government suffers a loss of $3,750,000 income from its shares in the Anglo-Persian Oil company. Out of $67,145,000 ordinary capital of the company, the government holds $37,500,000 at nominal value.

WEEK IN PARIS

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, June 4.—The trading on the Paris bourse at the end of May was very low, but picked up in the first days of this month as a result of the political situation here and particularly by the speeches of Edouard Herriot, premier designate, making it practically impossible for the coöperation of the Socialist party in the new government.

French financiers are favorable to more intimate relations between Paris and London as the latter city seems to be regaining some of its former financial importance.

The French national securities rose. The resignation of Chancellor Heinrich Bruening of Germany did not seem to affect the bourse. Sterling, which rose at the beginning of the week, fell again. The dollar showed improvement on Thursday at the opening of the exchange, but was low at the close.

Big Gold Holdings.

The foreign exchange holdings of the Bank of France total $384,000,000. The present dollar balances do not exceed three hundred million. The gold holdings are $3,000,160,000.

The new cabinet is expected to get busy on the immediate reduction of budgetary expenses with a view to voting a well balanced budget for 1933 at the end of this year.

The money market was very quiet. The railroad receipts for the twentieth week this year were $1,793,000, or 9.82 per cent less than for the corresponding period last year.

Bippus Heads Central Security Commissioners

Robert F. Bippus was elected president of the central states division of the National Association of Security Commissioners, meeting at the Palmer house. Mr. Bippus is the Illinois security commissioner. Other officers elected at the meeting were: George Matthews, Wisconsin, first vice president; F. C. Knudson, Iowa, second vice president, and Miss Gladys Pyle, secretary of state and state security commissioner of South Dakota.

Develop a Background That Reflects Culture.

All successful people have that elusive something called background or culture. General impression to the contrary, one does not come by it naturally. Rather, it is a characteristic resulting from conscientious development. Mastering French, Spanish, German, or Italian will help you acquire this invaluable attribute. The Berlitz CONVERSATIONAL Method provides the mental stimulant that gives you a bounding vitality and personality. As mastery is acquired you will find yourself with a rich, cultured background that sets you apart from others. Try a FREE DEMONSTRATION LESSON and see!

NEW "CHAIN STORE SYSTEM"

Opening Local Branches Everywhere.

CHANCE FOR AMBITIOUS MEN AND WOMEN to Make

$35 A WEEK

No Capital or Investment Required

I need ambitious men and women to operate Home Service Branches of my new kind of national "Chain Store System." My company now has thousands of these branches in operation all over the country and our local Owner-Managers are earning from $35 to $60 a week. If you are out of a job, willing to follow instructions, and will be satisfied to make about $27.50 weekly at the start, I can use you. I haven't space to give you full particulars of this unusual opportunity, but here are the important facts:

1. Absolutely new! This is not like anything you've ever heard of before. It is a brand new idea and plan.
2. I supply groceries and other household products to people direct from my mammoth factory. Your work will be calling on steady customers, handling the money and assisting by distributing the goods.
3. I furnish capital. You don't need to invest a penny in stock or fixtures. You run no financial risk whatever.
4. Wholesale prices. Not only do I share my profits with you, up to $75 weekly, but you get wholesale prices on groceries and other products you want for yourself.
5. Experience unnecessary. This is brand new way of doing business and I prefer to take inexperienced men and women and train them my way. All you need is ambition and willingness to do an honest day's work for an honest day's pay.
6. This business is absolutely "depression proof" and pays as well in hard times as in good times. That is why it offers you such a wonderful opportunity now.

If you think you would like a position that will be just like running your own business, send me your name and address. I'll give you all the facts. Then if you are still interested I'll arrange to get you started, with pay to commence immediately. Act quickly.

THIS FARM WANT AD PULLED 1,000 INQUIRIES!

420 acres, 280 Jersey cows, up to date bldgs., machinery and equipment. 50 mi. N. W. Good milk base. Can produce from milk alone $50,000 per yr. Will sell or trade for Chicago property at immense sac. Mr. Roth, 1520 Devon. Sheldrake 8600.

"A well-known Chicagoan commissioned my organization to sell or exchange his farm estate.

"I placed a want ad in the Tribune. More than 1,000 inquiries were received by telephone. Of this number, from forty to fifty were from prominent Chicagoans. One of them offered $75,000 cash for the farm. The farm was sold for more than that.

"Enough live leads were obtained from this want ad to keep my staff of sixteen men busy for the next four months."

JOHN J. KERN,
1520 Devon Ave.

Each Tribune Want Ad reprinted here has done a successful selling job. It is easy to understand the reasons.

Buying is always more active in the market that presents more reasons for more buyers to frequent it.

The larger the volume of real estate offers, the larger the number of prospects attracted and the greater the assurance to the advertiser of more opportunities to sell.

The Tribune not only carries more Real Estate-for-Sale want advertising than all other Chicago newspapers combined, but it also reaches far more families in Chicago and suburbs, daily and Sunday, than any other Chicago newspaper.

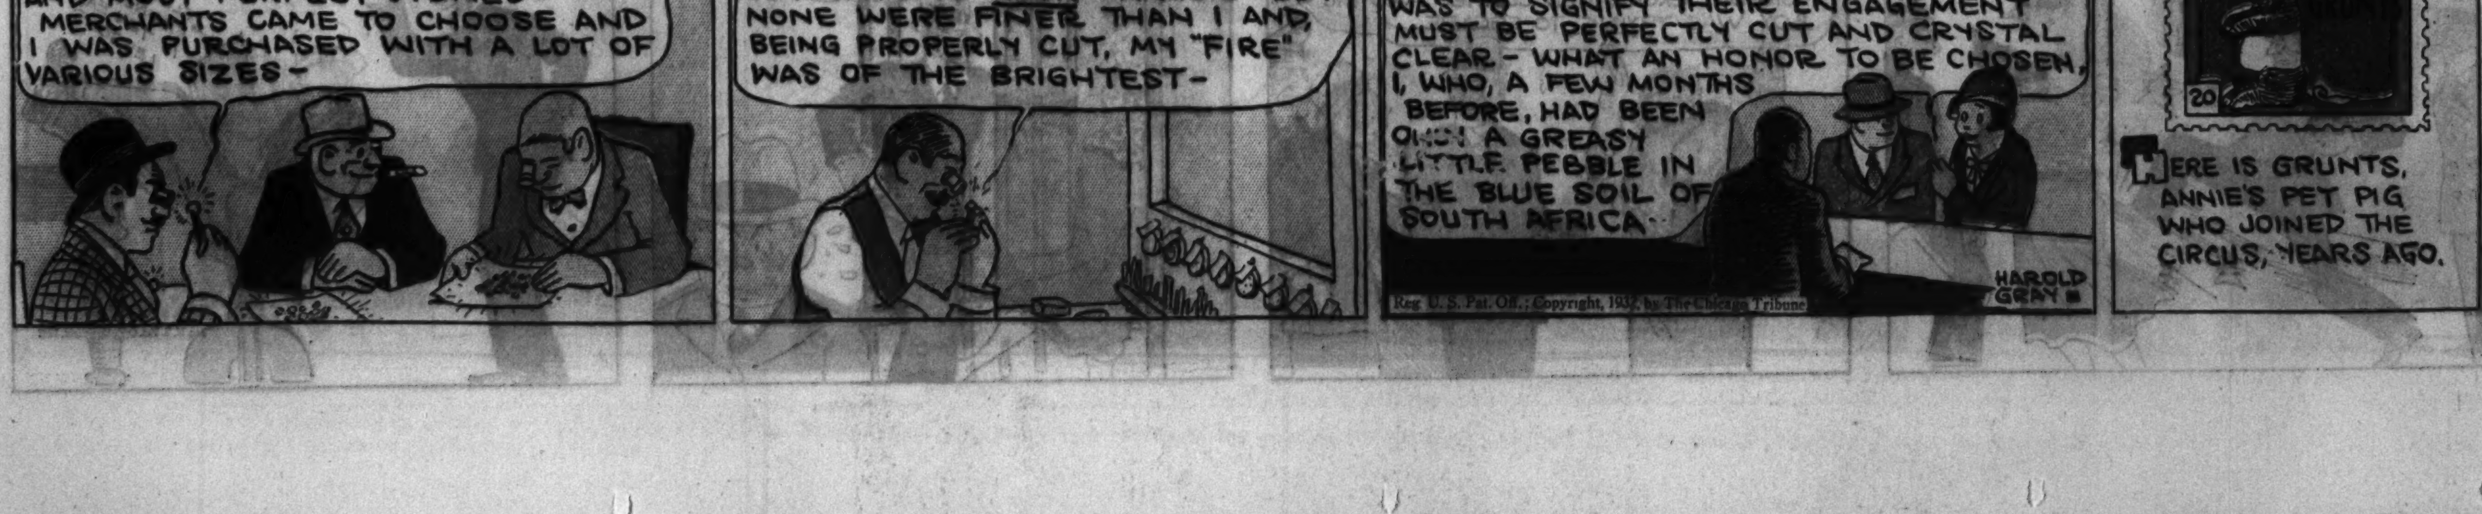
Private Life of a Diamond



I FIRST SAW THE LIGHT OF DAY IN SOUTH AFRICA- NO ONE TOLD ME I WAS VALUABLE- THERE WERE THOUSANDS OF US MUCH ALIKE-JUST UN-INTERESTING, HARD LITTLE STONES, SOME LARGER THAN OTHERS- MOST WERE LARGER THAN I-
BUT VERY SOON I CAME TO LEARN THAT I MEANT MORE THAN JUST ANY PEBBLE-WE DIAMONDS ARE THE HARDEST OBJECTS KNOWN- THEY HAD SEARCHED THROUGH TONS OF BLUE GROUND JUST FOR ME- THAT SHOWS HOW MUCH THEY THOUGHT OF ME, EVEN THEN-
WITH THOUSANDS OF OTHERS LIKE ME, WE TRAVELED THOUSANDS OF MILES BY SEA- THEN WE WERE UNPACKED IN A GREAT WORK-SHOP- FIRST WE WERE SORTED, SO NOW I WAS AMONG OTHERS OF MY OWN WEIGHT- THEN THE CUTTING AND POLISHING BEGAN-
IT WAS WONDERFUL TO SEE THE WAY WE SOON CHANGED FROM LITTLE, GREASY, LOP-SIDED STONES INTO GORGEOUS, SPARKLING GEMS, REFLECTING THE SPECTRAL COLORS IN ALL THEIR BRILLIANCE- THE CUTTING REDUCED MY WEIGHT, BUT IT CHANGED ME FROM A DULL LUMP INTO A PERFECT GEM-
AGAIN WE WERE SORTED, THIS TIME FOR COLOR AND BRILLIANCE- I WAS PLACED AMONG THE CLEAREST WHITE AND MOST PERFECT STONES- MERCHANTS CAME TO CHOOSE AND I WAS PURCHASED WITH A LOT OF VARIOUS SIZES-
THE JEWELER SET ME IN A RING OF PLATINUM- OTHER STONES WERE LARGER- LIGHTER STONES WERE CUT THIN TO LOOK LARGER- BUT NONE WERE FINER THAN I AND, BEING PROPERLY CUT, MY "FIRE" WAS OF THE BRIGHTEST-
WILL I EVER FORGET THAT COUPLE? LARGER, MORE FLASHY RINGS WERE OFFERED TO THEM FOR WHAT THEY HAD TO SPEND- BUT NO- THE DIAMOND THAT WAS TO SIGNIFY THEIR ENGAGEMENT MUST BE PERFECTLY CUT AND CRYSTAL CLEAR- WHAT AN HONOR TO BE CHOSEN, I, WHO, A FEW MONTHS BEFORE, HAD BEEN ONLY A GREASY LITTLE PEBBLE IN THE BLUE SOIL OF SOUTH AFRICA.

CUSTER'S LAST STAND—Lithographed from a painting by A. Becker.

A HORSE THIEF TRIAL—From the painting by John Mulvany.

In an article printed elsewhere in today's Tribune James O'Donnell Bennett describes these two scenes in the opening of the west, the first of which marks a historic episode in the subjugation of the Indians and the second of which depicts the rude beginnings of law and order on the frontier.

FOR THE JUNE BRIDE, Marian Marsh, motion picture player, demonstrates this fragile frock of white net and lace ruffles, with square neck-line and train. Her veil of real lace and tulle is caught into a close-fitting cap of lace, and she carries an old-fashioned bouquet of white roses and valley lilies tied with satin streamers.

WALKER ON THE STAND

These eight candid camera pictures reveal the poses and expressions of Mayor James J. Walker of New York as he responded to questions by Samuel Seabury during the investigation of his stock market profits. The wise-cracking chief executive of Gotham gave a good performance for the packed courtroom, his snappy rejoinders, smart repartee and simulation of terror evoking the laughter and cheers of the pro-Walker section of the audience. PARIS MOBILIZES CHIFFONS FOR HOT WEATHER

There's More Than One Kind of Gingerbread

Adventure with New Spicy Recipes Puts Grandmother's to Shame.

By Mary Meade.

SHOW me the heart that doesn't have a soft spot for gingerbread!

From small Bill sitting on the cistern cover ecstatically munching the head off a crunchy gingerbread man, to Elizabeth Ann, subdeb, curled on the davenport nibbling crusty corners from a gingerbread-marshmallow waffle, everybody—young, old, and those who are eternally thirty-three—grows simply boisterous at the very thought of gingerbread in the offing.

Not that we have even to hint at such a prospect verbally. Even if we have taken the family off its guard, have united the happy proportions of molasses, sour milk and this and that—have even nosed our pans furtively into the oven without being suspected—that is the end of secret maneuvers. In ten minutes to the dot we must open the door to see that the spicy creation is not too warm for comfort. And then hide the facts if you can! Nostrils from basement to attic will flicker questioningly—then sniff rapturously. Gingerbread!

Tempting Varieties.

In most kitchens grandmother's recipe for sour milk gingerbread has done the honors for so many years that we are apt to forget that it is only one of the score of tempting ways to answer the family yen for something at once sweet, spicy, crusty, and soft. Meaning—why not go adventuring a bit in gingerbread specials and let variety really add spice to our meals?

And to prove to any doubters that there are gingerbreads to suit every taste and every occasion, here are some typical limbs off the gingerbread family tree: Sour cream and sour milk gingerbreads; cold water and hot water gingerbreads; sweet milk, sugar, coffee, and eggless gingerbreads; gingerbreads made with honey, with apple sauce, with bananas, with oatmeal; gingerbreads made in waffle irons and gingerbreads which are upside down cakes—no, that's not all, but they are good starters.

Having now put our most tasty foot to the fore, a few sidelights on technique are in order.

The quality of ingredients we use in gingerbread making to a large extent determines the goodness of the product. If ours is to be a sour milk treat, the milk must be truly sour, not doctored or treated with chemicals. Sour whole milk should be used in preference to buttermilk. A good grade of molasses made from pure cane sugar with no adulterants is important. Either the dark brown or the lighter variety may be used, taste in color and flavor determining our choice.

A Spicy Touch of Mystery.

While ginger is our first thought in the line of spices and will stay our foremost flavoring, other spices may be used with pleasant effect. Cinnamon, cloves, mace, nutmeg, allspice—any or all, if added with discretion, will lend zest and a touch of mystery to our cake. But be certain your flavorings are fresh and peppy. Heaven protect us from languid gingerbread!

You may have found yourself suddenly insulting your family with gingerbread a bit less light than usual and disfigured with bitter black speckles. These are undissolved particles of soda, and show that your method of mixing was at fault. While it is possible satisfactorily to mix the soda with the other dry ingredients and get a healthy looking product, the old method of stirring the dissolved soda into the molasses still seems most successful.

Burnt gingerbread corners have gone out of many a kitchen by the back door, mainly because we fail to allow for the nature of the food. Molasses products burn much more readily than those sweetened wholly with sugar. A moderate oven (350 degrees F.) gives as much heat as any gingerbread will stand without getting decidedly crusty about it.

Now for a special Sunday night favorite:

TUTTI FRUTTI GINGERBREAD.

⅓ cup brown sugar.
2½ cups flour.
⅓ teaspoon baking powder.
1 teaspoon soda.
½ teaspoon each of cinnamon and ginger.
⅔ cup sour milk.
1 cup molasses.
⅓ cup melted butter.
1 cup seeded raisins.
2 eggs, well beaten.

Mix all the dry ingredients except the soda. Dissolve the soda in a tablespoon of hot water and add to the molasses. Add this mixture, the sour milk, eggs, butter, and raisins to the dry ingredients. Beat for two minutes and turn into two shallow buttered layer tins. Bake in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.] about thirty minutes. Cool and fill with the following mixture:

FILLING.

1 cup sugar.
1 tablespoon butter, melted.
1 tablespoon cocoa.
½ cup milk.
½ cup chopped nuts and raisins.
1 teaspoon lemon juice.

Or, here are two other thoughts for fruit gingerbreads. The first is an apple upside down gingerbread. You'll notice that it is based on a simple sour cream recipe, which may be used in many other ways—right side up.

APPLE UPSIDE DOWN GINGERBREAD.

1-3 cup butter.
1 cup sugar.
2 eggs, well beaten.
1½ teaspoons soda.
1 cup molasses.
1 cup sour cream.
1½ teaspoons ginger.
1 teaspoon cinnamon.
½ teaspoon cloves.
3½ cups flour.

Cream the sugar and butter together and add the eggs. Dissolve the soda

Paris Snapshots

Chanel gives stripes a new twist—wide sashes of two or more colors are wound around the waist, looking like narrow, striped girdles.

Afternoon ensembles that have elbow length sleeves or cape sleeves are the smartest seen at the southern resorts.

The latest beach ensemble from Paris has a practical, tailored outfit in linen or cotton over its bathing suit.

Beaded evening bags with zipper fastenings, from Chanel, are being carried by chic Parisiennes.

Cool Clothes for the Summer Are the Vogue; Sailor Hats of Straw Rout Smaller Chapeaux

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The upset in Paris fashions that began early this spring keeps on turning dress tradition inside out as the hot weather styles come in. The dressmakers have finally mobilized all their forces to make clothes for wearing, abandoning the eyeful standard for once. And the women, including the Parisienne—that great little traditionalist—are doing sartorial things unheard of before, like wearing red for breakfast in the Bois, and suits in the cabarets.

The arrival of Old King Sol and his torrid temperatures causes another smash in the clothes litany. Spineless wisps of chiffon dresses, without a wraith of a wrap, are worn into the Ritz at midday and their extravagant sleeves are designed to display plenty of arm, be they long or be they short. Small hats are routed out of the style picture for the first time in years and years, and sailor hats top the smart head. When I say top, I mean Top, for most of these hats are worn well above the ear line and impudently tilted. The chic scene certainly looks different.

The chiffon of hot weather, 1932, can bear some explaining. Chiffon comes in cotton this season and in silk, and in wool, though there's precious little of the last on view at the moment. Chiffon, be it silk or cotton, is crêped, and is as washable as a handkerchief. Some of the smartest women like their chiffon plain and others just as chic like it printed.

In prints dots, stripes, daisies and other field flowers reign supreme for daytime. Stencil, two color prints are smarter than those in several tones. Blue and white, red and white, and black and white are the three printed silk color schemes seen most frequently in Paris.

Tailored Chiffon.

The French couturiers, led by Madeleine Vionnet, have gotten on to the trick of tailoring chiffon, and this is one big, virile cause of the present hot weather styles. One of Vionnet's most stunning ensembles consists of a bright red tailored chiffon frock with a cotton velvet coat, and women are wearing the frock alone in these high temperature times.

Chiffon blouses make a practical part, too, of these styles. Silk and even cotton suits with chiffon blouses are genuinely chic. Where chiffon dresses are worn in daytime, they are generally tailored and extremely simple, with all of the fluffy-diddle details generally associated with such frocks carefully suppressed. Those worn for the now famous five-to-midnight occasions are softer in line and more feminine in cut, but never, never frilly.

The size of the sailor hat worn by fashionable Parisiennes has no limit. Any size brim goes, from the Merry Widow size of around 1910 to a bit of a brim about two inches wide. It's very chic to wear a printed silk band around your sailor when you wear a printed dress, and sailors of printed material with printed scarfs are worn with plain frocks or suits.

Another new mixture of printed-and-plain ensemble is the printed coat with the plain frock. The latter is usually belted, or sashed, or scarfed with printed silk when this kind of ensemble is worn.

Cotton Crochet Gloves.

The new idea of style has broken the glove tradition, too. The Paris style parade is gloved in cotton crochet, and in linen. In the morning the smartest women wear Chanut's linen slip-on gloves and linen oxfords or pumps, and they wear Bruyere's cotton crochet gloves and boutonnieres with their dark blue frocks and suits. As I have explained before, these gloves are crocheted in the filet patterns of Victorian tidies. They are always white, while the linen gloves are often natural or pastel colored.

Suits of silk or cotton seldom have long sleeves this summer, and the gloves worn with them aren't supposed to meet the sleeves, but to leave a hiatus of arm between. The Bernard suit, at the extreme left in the drawing, is worn with white linen gloves that are correctly short. This suit is made of black crinkly crêpe and the jacket is a short bolero with just-below-elbow sleeves belled at the bottom. The jacket buttons below its widish revers and is trimmed with tucks.

The skirt is plaited with knife plaits stitched part way down. Under the jacket of this suit is worn a white chiffon blouse shown in the background. This blouse has a plaited peplum that shows below the extremely brief jacket, and the sleeves are edged with plaited frills. The neckline is draped cowl-like, and there are tiny tuck motifs on the blouse body. The sailor hat is of white linen with a patterned ribbon band.

A masterly example of the tailored chiffon frock to wear without a coat on the street is shown second from the left. The dress is a cornflower blue in color and has a jabot down the front closing which is white plaited chiffon. The fitted bodice of this frock is made of stitched bands below the bust, and the bands serve to fasten the buttons of crystal. The short sleeves are also buttoned and banded in the same way. They are set into the blouse raglan fashion.

The skirt is slightly flared, with a plait hidden under the seam at the left side front. The hat of checked taffeta is Suzanne Talbot's new sailor, and it has a rose tucked into the ribbon band. The scarf is blue and white taffeta. The dress is from Callot Soeurs.

For Warm Days.

A printed chiffon frock from Lucile Paray is shown next on the right. Red flowers are scattered over a black ground. The bodice is softly draped in front and the sleeves are plaited from the dropped shoulder line. These sleeves are slit, as you see, so that the arm is cool and visible.

The skirt is plaited, as are the sleeves. A sash of red velvet ribbon is draped about the waistline and tied in a big bow toward the left side. The hat is of black picot straw with a red velvet ribbon draped around the crown. Parisiennes wear frocks like this until all hours during hot weather.

At the extreme right is shown a printed coat from Bruyere. This coat is made of crêpe printed in clear, cool black and white, and the sleeves are elbow length kimono sleeves that are ideal on torrid days. The frock beneath is plain white and strictly tailored. The gloves are of cotton crochet and the belt is black leather. Agnes' smart new high crowned sailor of Milan straw is shown with this coat. It's trimmed with white ribbon.

Two Methods of Developing the Abilities of the Talented Child

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

"WHO says so?"

To a great many people the value of a statement depends almost entirely upon who makes it. It matters a lot "who says so."

This is quite natural. So, when I feel keenly about a subject connected with children, I think to myself, "I'll say what I know to be true as a result of my own experience and study. Then I'll quote other authorities and perhaps I'll end by convincing the unbelievers."

So, in this matter of gifted children about which I receive an increasing number of letters. Having expressed myself and Prof. Hollingworth and others at various times, today I'd like to add some quotations from the reports of the White House conference on child health and protection.

An Impressive Number.

How many children wih exceptional intelligence do you think there are in the United States today? One million five hundred thousand according to Dr. Henry Goddard of Ohio university. There must be many more that we do not know about. And the many also who are gifted artistically are not counted in with this total. Quite an impressive number, isn't it?

So, those who are especially interested in the future of these gifted children ask: "How may the gifted children of today be educated so that tomorrow, instead of leading criminal gangs or pursuing only selfish interests, they may lead the nation to greater achievements?"

At the present time two methods are being used in the special education of gifted children. One method is the rapid advancement method. The other is the enrichment method. But both of these methods are very recent.

In the past probably no group of children has been more badly managed than the gifted children, the talented children, and the geniuses. To be sure, they may have excelled in one field, but too often they have suffered in other ways. Their characters have not developed well or they have not had the full, rounded life of a child. The gifted child, like the gifted man or woman, is often described as lopsided when judged as a human being. That is only the fault of their training.

According to psychologists, superior children are usually gifted all around. We find that special ability in only one field is rare. If a child seems to be outstanding only in music or mathematics, it is usually because his parents or his teachers have overemphasized his development along that line. The general ability, the capacity for all round achievement, will show itself if it is given a chance.

Versatility Proved.

A White House conference report on gifted children says: "Such children, when they are educated in the 'enrichment' or 'opportunity' classes described in the report, show that they can excel also in activities in which they have been apparently weak.

"A young musical prodigy, for instance, who had never gone to gym and was both awkward and frail looking, when tutored until he was up with the other children, proved capable of surpassing many of them in games. A 'literary' little girl

Girls Champion the Homely Men

By Doris Blake.

IT'S a common failing for girls not born to beauty to believe they operate under a great handicap where popularity with the opposite sex is concerned. Of recent days we note that boys are using the same alibi to explain their failure to make good with girls. We thought perhaps the movie influence might be at work on the girls. That the male screen favorites might be the standard by which girls measured the boy friend's eligibility.

However, we put the subject up to the girls, the ones who in the last analysis should be in the best position to judge since they are the ones upon whom decisions ultimately rest. And we find in the response of mail that no boy need eliminate himself from the popularity race on beauty counts—providing he can bring to the feet of the modern young goddess other gifts that appear to please her more.

But we'd better let you boys read for yourself these authentic pieces of girl testimony, as follows:

"Dear Miss Blake: Martin thinks that girls fall for a fellow's looks. This is not true. I think girls are of two types—with one it's good looks and popularity that count; with the other it's personality. I am one of those who look for personality. I think any fellow as well as a girl can develop a personality. Any fellow can read a good book on every day manners and try to follow them. Also neatness in dressing is a thing girls admire.

If a man follows these three rules, there is no reason for him to be without a girl's companionship, but if he cannot follow them, then he is a social 'flop.' Sincerely,

"BEULAH J."

Sweetness Not Amiss.

"Dear Miss Blake: I'd like nothing better this minute than to take that Martin Hill person and give him a good shaking.

"He's so unreasonable, so unfair,

The Appeal of Personal Daintiness

A Captivating Sweet Freshness in Girl or Woman Blots Out All Ordinary Beauty Defects.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

IN one of our current periodicals an anonymous husband voices a protest on woman's clothes that I'll guarantee gets a deafening round of applause from every male eye that sees it. Claiming his protest to be utter heresy, Mr. Anonymous, nevertheless, expresses the wish that women would put less emphasis on sophistication and smartness of dress and more on clothes that make them look sweet.

There is no intention to go into this subject today of sweetness as clothes make the woman, so I introduce the theme of sweetness as the dominating note in woman appeal. 'Twas ever thus—with men—and ever will be. Anything that a woman can do with and for herself to make her "sweeter" is just so much ground gained with men. And, of course, we're not fooling ourselves that all of this beauty pursuit is being practiced for women. Just to appease the feminist element, we'll allow maybe 10 per cent of the beautifying work is done to please other women. And that's allowing a generous percentage.

For centuries and centuries women have been plying the perfume wile that has unquestioned male appeal. An appeal to male emotions, that is, which, if you ask us again, is at least 90 per cent of man's appraisal of female beauty. Emotional appeal! That's why the smart, sophisticated woman may get admiration from men, but why the "sweet" sister gets loving admiration.

Approved by Both Sexes.

Now, if that little dab of well placed and tantalizing scent can do for woman what its record shows it can do, and if sweetness in dress strikes a homer every time, it's pretty reasonable to assume that sweetness of person in the personal hygiene sense must have a terrific pull with the sex we aim to please. On this count, our own sex's approval is not without a telling reward.

Generally speaking, the relief products for body odor and tainted breath are local remedies. And it must be recognized that these conditions frequently arise from internal conditions and until such internal irregularities are corrected there is small hope of permanent relief.

There are conditions peculiar to the nervous system that promote and exaggerate body odors. The flow of perspiration is exaggerated where one's nerves are affected. Faulty elimination is another well known and commonly noted cause of body odor. The kind of food one eats may exaggerate the unesthetic state of body. In gross eaters the perspiration is likely to be noticeably unpleasant. Many women have reported relief from perspiration odor after following a good wholesome reducing diet. In fact, women have reported the three day liquid preface commonly recommended as a reducing start to have the gratifying effect of dissipating odor.

Purifying Effect of Water.

And this brings up a most important point in combating odors. Women are notoriously lax on taking water into the system. Yet the regular and consistent daily water consumer is freer of taint than her "dry" sister.

So, to insure that sweetness of person of favorable appeal one must consider for corrective work more than the local astringent, soap, or other purifier. Cleanliness on the outside is good, of course—but not much use unless the inside can boast a similar state of cleanliness.

Locally, nothing will wage so helpful a battle as soap and water—more and more soap and water. A warm, sudsy bath at night. Every night. A cold water shower in the morning to correct the abnormal activity of the sweat glands. For the unstable nerved there is nothing better than to stand under the shower and let the spray play up and down the spine, the water cooler and cooler, colder and colder until you can take it without a shiver. Salt water added to the tub will sweeten the skin. If used with the shower, rub the body with wet salt first before you turn on the taps. Common coarse salt will do, or use sea salt if convenient.

The overactive area of the body must be treated locally. Solutions containing alum, tannin, alcohol, boracic acid powder, and boracic acid solutions are relieving. But the market has excellent astringent products that close the pores where the perspiration is most excessive and today these are put up so cleverly that quick relief is promised with ease of application.

A Simple Formula.

A simple formula that has had many, many enthusiasts is compounded of a 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water. It is daubed on the affected part gently and allowed to dry. An application every other night for a week and once a week thereafter will bring relief. But you must be careful not to overdo. Apply the lotion before retiring. If you find the preparation a bit strong for your skin, douse water on the part first to dilute its strength.

Keep a box of dusting powder to use after your bath or use one of the well known deodorants.

The soles of the feet are sometimes painfully affected. These will respond to astringent treatment. In extreme cases, a salicylic soap should be used. The feet may be soaked for ten minutes nightly in a 1 per cent solution of formalin in water. Dust boracic acid powder into the shoes when you remove them. And the salt baths will be found of especial benefit to the feet. Better to soak the feet in a salt water solution daily.

About the breath taint—stomach or liver derangement may be the cause. Throat, nose, and teeth may have to be searched for the reason. Digestive disorders and constipation inflict an unpleasant odor on the breath. Tooth decay or badly fitting bridges that permit food to lodge and putrefy may be at fault. Anyway, possible internal contributors have to be investigated before hope of correction can be put into mouth washes or purely local measures. The mouth washes are fine and should be used daily.

Paraphrasing, in effect, the old maxim, Mr. Anonymous warns, "Be sweet, fair maid, and let who will be sophisticated." But Anita Page, Madge Evans, and Joan Marsh charmingly demonstrate that sweetness and sophistication need not be strangers.

The Tribune Cook Book

There Are Ginger Breads—Sweet, Spicy, Crusty, and Soft—to Appeal to Every Taste and to Flatter Every Occasion.

in a tablespoon of hot water and stir into the molasses. Add this mixture to the first, then stir in the sour cream alternately with the sifted flour and spices. Spread this batter over two cups of sliced tart apples, which have been arranged in the bottom of a greased baking dish. Bake in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.] about forty minutes. Serve in squares with whipped cream or hard sauce. Slices of pineapple sprinkled with brown sugar may be substituted for the apples.

Gingerbread waffles have quite a different way of arriving at crisp brownness. They're an excellent summer dish, by the way, as they save the bother of heating an oven. Any good gingerbread recipe will do. Turn the batter into a waffle iron and bake as usual. Serve cold with whipped cream as a special treat for a hot day.

Coffee gingerbread is another pleasant surprise. It may be made by substituting strong black coffee for the milk in the following recipe:

SPLIT GINGERBREAD WITH CHEESE FILLING.

½ cup sugar.
2 eggs, beaten slightly.
1 teaspoon soda.
¾ cup molasses.
½ cup water.
2 cups flour.
½ teaspoon salt.
1½ teaspoons ginger.
1 teaspoon cinnamon.
1 cup grated cocoanut.

Beat together the butter, sugar and eggs. Dissolve the soda in a tablespoon of hot water and stir into the molasses. Add the remaining water. Sift the dry ingredients together and add the creamed mixture alternately with the molasses and water mixture. Stir in the cocoanut and turn into a buttered tin. Bake in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.] about twenty-five minutes. When done, split and fill with cheese filling.

SWEET MILK GINGERBREAD.

1-3 cup milk.
1 cup molasses.
1 egg, well beaten.
2 cups flour.
2 teaspoons baking powder.
2 teaspoons ginger.
¼ teaspoon cinnamon.

Mix together the moist ingredients and add to the sifted flour, baking powder, and seasoning. Beat two minutes, turn into shallow greased pans, and bake in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.] about twenty-five minutes.

Another variation of the above recipe makes an apple sauce gingerbread. Simply substitute sauce for the half cup of milk indicated. It gives the cake an interesting texture and an illusively pleasant flavor.

A good sour milk recipe is the basis for oatmeal gingerbread. But instead of using the full quantity of wheat flour, substitute oatmeal for half the amount. It's tastily different from any gingerbread I've ever eaten.

Then there's a cheese gingerbread and also a cheese filled one. This last ranks among the best. For the simple cheese gingerbread, simply substitute soft cream cheese for the fat indicated, using the recipe for sweet milk gingerbread.

But that cheese filled gingerbread!

CHEESE FILLING.

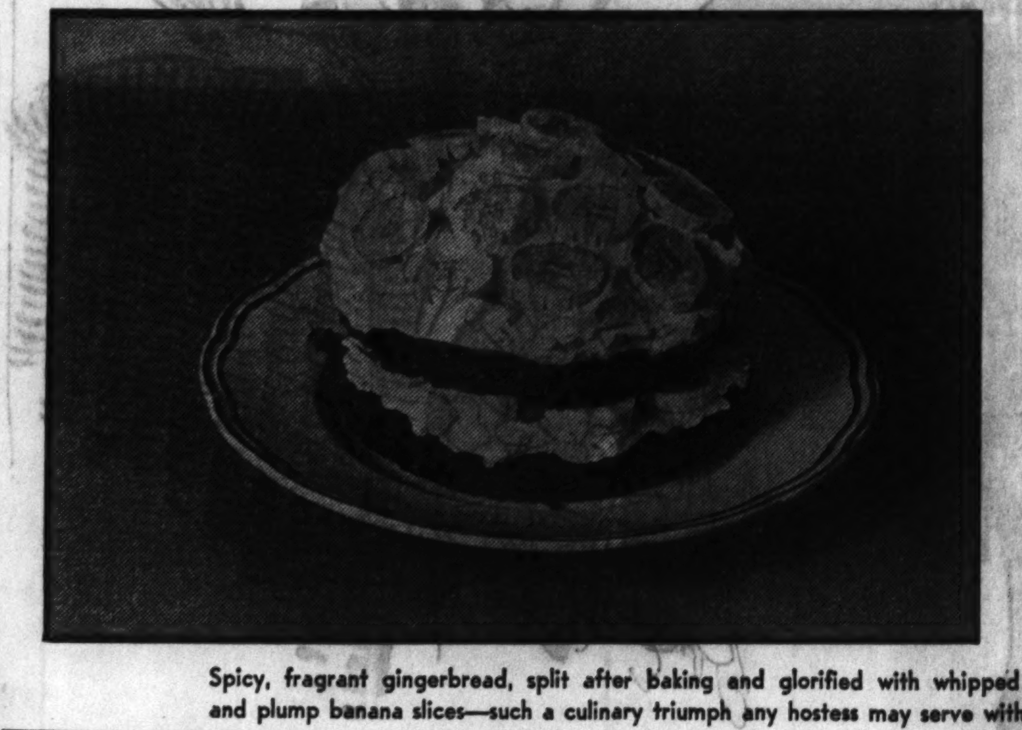
Blend one package of cream cheese, worked till soft and smooth, with one-fourth cup of orange marmalade. Fold in a cup of whipped cream.

Honey gingerbread served hot, fragrant and feathery with cups of your best brew of coffee! Truly mouth-watering! It's easily made, too. Simply adopt the recipe for sweet milk gingerbread, and instead of the whole cup of molasses give it half and half molasses and strained honey. Or, some day when in an adventurous mood, replace half the milk, in this same recipe, with orange juice. Then listen to the family bet on just what that delectable new flavor might be!

Gingerbread becomes something different again when we add a one ounce square of chocolate, melted, to the batter just before baking. Perhaps you can't just imagine chocolate and spices together, but just try it and be converted.

And now two more bits, the first in the form of partifying gingerbread for our next bridge tea. Any recipe that gives a feathery dark cake will fill the bill. When baked it should stand from two and one-half to three inches deep. With open cookie cutters, made in the four playing card symbols, cut gingerbread hearts, diamonds, clubs, and spades, about three inches long. Split these and fill with soft cream cheese. Around the edge of the top layer pipe a rim of whipped cream. If they don't make a grand slam at your bridge—but they will!

A last gingerbread glorification? Make it a two layer gingerbread as per today's attractive illustration. In between layers spread a generous filling of whipped cream. On top pile with "studied carelessness" more of the same, and for a triumphant finish, pillow fat ripe slices of freshly cut banana at just the right intervals on the cream. Cut in wedges, pie fashion. This gingerbread cannot be kept more than a few hours—not if the family knows where to find it!



Spicy, fragrant gingerbread, split after baking and glorified with whipped cream and plump banana slices—such a culinary triumph any hostess may serve with pride.

Rich biscuit dough
Grated Parmesan cheese

Wash, scrape, and cut into inch long pieces the desired amount of young and tender asparagus. Cook until tender in slightly salted water. Roll out your biscuit dough—that made with baking powder is best—and bake in a shallow pan. When done, split and butter. Drain the asparagus and add to a thin white sauce, seasoned to taste, with pepper, salt, and mace. Simmer in the sauce for a bit, then spread on the bottom layer of the cake. Cover top layer with the sauce and sprinkle thickly with grated Parmesan cheese. This is an unusual and tasty way to serve asparagus. Any left over vegetables may be served in the same way. N. T. W.

Embarrassing Moments

Might Have Been Worse.

I am employed in the stenographic department of a large corporation. One evening the phone on my desk rang and I was asked if I would see to it that some one in my department stayed long enough to send a wire. Thinking I recognized the voice as belonging to one of the clerks who makes a practice of coming up with last minute work and who had just left the department with some rush work, I replied, after hesitating a trifle, while I looked over the girls to decide which one hadn't been asked to stay for a while, "O, all right, hurry up."

Much to my consternation and embarrassment, I recognized the voice of our vice president, who answered, "Never mind, my secretary will take care of it."

The clerk mentioned above had offered to drive me home some time in appreciation for some last minute work I had helped get out for him, and I thank my lucky stars I didn't add, as I ws on the point of doing, "if you will drive me home tonight." G. M.

Taking Bread Home.

Just at lunch time I discovered I had no bread in the house, so I hurried down the street about a block to a neighborhood grocery store and purchased a loaf of sliced bread. Tucking it under my arm I hurried home. Suddenly I heard some one calling, "Lady, you're losing your bread!"

I looked in the package under my arm and maybe I didn't feel foolish when I found I had been dropping slices of bread all the way home and that it was nearly all gone! J. D.

Presented with the Check.

My most embarrassing moment happened this noon while dining at a restaurant. A young lady came in at the same moment that I did and sat down opposite me at the same table. After she had selected her lunch from the menu, she handed it to me, to which I responded that I had already made my selection. I followed this remark with another about the weather to which she replied. At this moment the waitress came to our table and took our orders. The waitress must have got the impression that we came in together, for imagine my predicament when at the close of my lunch, she handed me not only my check but the young lady's. S. C.

Etiquette Editor Gives Helpful Aid on Church Wedding Procedure

By Helen Bartlett.

THIS first Sunday in June seems an appropriate day on which to wind up our series of articles on weddings. The June bride or the bride of later in the summer will have her plans well formulated by this time, and these last minute instructions should just about settle things.

Last week we talked about home weddings which, as we said, have been unusually popular this season for more reasons than one. Church weddings, however, are by no means excluded from the social calendar. Those who believe that marriage should be invested with all dignity and sacredness claim that no other ceremony is as fitting, and, of course, those with certain religious affiliations are obliged to have the wedding performed within the precincts of their church.

Must Bow to Convention.

At any but the most informal church wedding, certain conventions must be observed. One of the most important of these is the order of processional and recessional. The little diagrams shown with this article outline the order and the positions at the altar quite clearly.

At no church wedding of any degree of fashion and correctness do ushers walk in with bridesmaids, the best man with the maid of honor, or the bride with the groom. There is a special order to be observed always. The best man comes in from the sacristy, with the groom and the clergyman. He exits the same way; the groom walks out with the bride, of course.

One side of the church, the left as one faces the altar, is reserved for the bride's family and friends; the right is reserved for the other family and friends, wedding guests arriving at the door of the church tell the usher on which side they wish to sit.

A few moments before the ceremony begins the groom's family enters and is seated in the front pews on the right. Immediately afterwards the bride's family is seated; then the bride's mother is ushered to the first pew on the left. She is the last person seated in the center aisle. The ribbons, if used, are stretched down either side over the entrance to the pews. The wedding march is played and the wedding party enters in the order outlined in the diagrams.

On Father's Arm.

The bride is on her father's right arm. If the service requires that she be definitely given in marriage by some one, her father answers the clergyman's question. If it does not [the Roman Catholic service does not], the father simply steps back, after the groom has greeted the bride, and takes his place beside his wife in the first pew on the left.

Before the ceremony the bride should transfer her engagement ring from her left to her right hand. If her gown is long sleeved, as it should be, she wears no gloves. If she does wear them, the left glove is handed to her maid of honor a moment before the ring is put on.

If the wedding is celebrated, as it often is in the Episcopal or Roman Catholic churches, at mass, the affianced with the maid of honor and best man pass through the altar rail to kneeling benches arranged for them in the sanctuary. Bridesmaids and ushers usually kneel outside the altar rail.

The wedding ceremony precedes the mass. During the mass those of other faiths, out of courtesy, should stand or kneel whenever the Catholics or Episcopalians do.

Order of Processional.

The processional is always in the same order, with bride and groom leading. At home weddings and at a great many church weddings the groom kisses the bride, at the altar, as soon as the ceremony is ended. At other church weddings the bride and groom prefer to do this in the somewhat less public vestibule of the church.

The best man goes back into the sacristy after the clergyman, rescues the groom's coat, hat, and gloves, and his own and dashes around to the vestibule where the bride and groom and bridesmaids are preparing to depart. The ushers stay for a while, removing the ribbons and going up front to escort first the bride's mother and then the groom's mother from their front pews.

Guests should not leave their pews until the two families are in the vestibule; to crowd out is vulgar. And while we're on the subject, let us say that in any church of any denomination chatter in the body of the church is extremely vulgar. No house of God should be made to sound by thoughless persons like the zoo at feeding time. The business of greeting friends and discussing how lovely the bride looked is done in whispers, if at all, before reaching the vestibule.

Breakfast or Reception.

Following the wedding there is usually a breakfast [if it takes place up to or at noon], or a reception [if it takes place in the afternoon]. All the wedding guests, some of them, or none, may be invited to this festivity; or it might be entirely private, for the two immediate families and the bridal party. This is at the bride's discretion.

If guests are invited, the bride's mother, the groom's mother, and the bride and groom receive them as they come in. The bride's mother acts as hostess; the groom's mother and the bride and groom are special guests of honor. The two fathers stand close by but are not "in line."

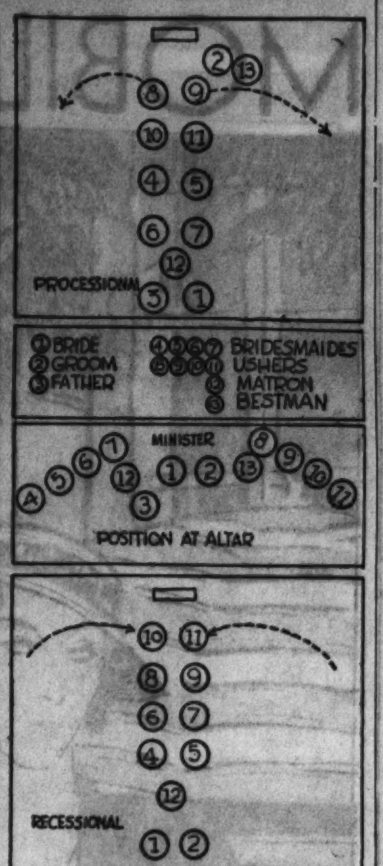
Refreshments are usually served buffet style at receptions, but there are tables at breakfasts or dinners. It is customary to have two special, decorated tables—one for the bridal party, and one for the parents. At her table, the bride is at her husband's right, the best man at her other side, the maid of honor at the groom's left, and others of the party in any balanced order.

Seating at Parents' Table.

At the parents' table the bride's mother is hostess, her father host. The latter sits at the head of the table, the groom's mother at his right, the clergyman's wife, if present, at his left. [If she is not present, some important woman member of the groom's family is given this place.] At the other end of the table is the bride's mother, the groom's father at her right, the clergyman at her left. This order is sometimes reversed. A bishop, for instance, or a clergyman who is an old and revered friend would be given the place of honor at the hostess' right, with the groom's father at the left. Others present are seated in any convenient or balanced order.

The bride and groom may leave when they wish, but it is ungracious not to speak at least a few words to all present before dashing off, and no matter in what great flurry the young people should always give their families the happiness of a special and somewhat private "good-by."

The diagram shown today is incorporated in a leaflet, "Correct Wedding Procedure," which may be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to this department.



Bright Sayings

My six year old son received a puppy, his first one, for his birthday. After a romp, boy and puppy stopped for a rest, the dog panting, of course. Junior gave him one horrified look, and said, "Shut your mouth and breathe through your nose, Pal. Do you want folks to think you have adenoids?" B. L.

Our 3 year old daughter, Thelma Ruth, said, "Daddy, my sister Grace gives me anything."

"That's fine, Thelma, but do you mean that she will give you anything she has?"

"O, no, Daddy! I mean she gives me anything she doesn't want." F. P.

Betty noticed everything at the hospital when her father took her to visit her mother, even the rosy gas light in the corridor indicating the fire escape. On their way home she looked at her father in a puzzled way, "Do cars go inside the hospital?"

"Why, no, Betty," he answered. "Why?"

"Well, why did they have that stop light in the hall?" P. R.

My niece visited me while I was getting the turkey ready for Sunday. I asked her to go to the sewing box and get me some thread and a needle to sew up the turkey. She looked at all the thread then came back to me and said, "Aunt Mary, do you want a thread to match the turkey?" M. J. L.

Rapid Advancement System Not so Good as the Enrichment Courses.

who was a regular bookworm and did not know how to play with other children, soon developed ability to get along happily with them and even to lead them in their play."

Do you know the difference between these two ways of educating gifted children—the enrichment classes and the rapid progress classes?

Those parents who have exceptionally intelligent children, as well as teachers, will be interested in the education of gifted children as described by the special committee of the White House conference. I will give you their words:

"Practically all efforts to provide for gifted children an education which will be more suited to their powers than the classroom work for the average child fall under two headings, the enrichment method and the rapid progress method."

First, as the rapid progress method:

"The practice of giving double promotion to the brighest individuals was begun sixty years ago. Thirty years later groups of these children began to be taught together, covering three years' work in two. Such efforts are now regarded with dissatisfaction by school principals and teachers, and in many cities they have been abandoned altogether. These children get into high school and college when they are too young. Though they can keep up in their academic work, in everything else they are misfits."

This last is a vital point. Now, for the enrichment method:

The Enrichment Method.

"In cities where the enrichment method has been tried for more than ten years, as in Cleveland and Los Angeles, the enthusiasm in favor of it has been steadily growing, not only among authorities but among the children and their parents. Such a class covers the regular curriculum for the grade plus one extra subject. In the time that is left over each child undertakes a special piece of work, either by himself or in coöperation with two or three others, chosen after consultation with the teacher."

"Table and chairs take the place of fixed desks and seats. The room has a reference library of its own, and the children move about with great freedom, look up information and prepare reports and the accompanying illustrative material. Children who learn so much faster than their classmates, when they are in the ordinary classroom that they are in danger of developing into behavior problems, become so interested and occupied in the enrichment class that the question of poor behavior does not arise."

"Several studies have been made comparing exceptional children who have been in such a class with equally bright children who have remained in the regular grade. In those who have had the advantages of the enrichment method the desire to show off is less highly developed and there is greater evidence of the qualities of leadership."

In my personal experience I have seen the enrichment method proven most successful. And an interesting fact is that it makes children very capable in high school and college, where more independent study is required.

English Girl Is Tallest Mannequin in the World

Spectator Sports Costumes Choose Cool, Interesting Fabrics

Vacation Wanderers Find Big Variety of Styles at the Stores

Two Piece Linen Suits, Clever White Chalk Crepe Dresses with Scarfs of Printed Silk, Gay and Debonair Flannel Coats Seen These Early Summer Days.

By Rhea Seeger.

ONE never stagnates in Chicago, what with sights to see, a couple of conventions to hear about, horse races that lure hidden shekels from the padlocked reserves of the most prudent souls, miles of beaches and lots of good cold, refreshing lake water to swim in, to say nothing of yacht races, tennis tournaments, and polo matches. Summer life in Chicago becomes the most thrilling existence in the world.

Since all the official population, together with visiting travelers that roam around our best corners looking for pineapples and a few picturesque gentlemen with firearms, plan to spend the summer far out of doors, and from the four walls of their winter time habitation, their first concern is suitable and distinctive new summer apparel. There is no gender about appreciative clothes collectors or shop hounds. Just as many windows in Chicago shops are filled with masculine trappings as hold alluring arrays of feminine fripperies and frills. Just as many new gadgets for men, as tricky little snares for women. Both sexes would seem to get the same sort of shopping thrill, to judge by the window displays.

Everything Is Here.

There isn't anything you can't buy in Chicago, no matter what season you decide to shop; but the town beams a bit more expansively during summer vacation months, with splendidly large and most interesting collections of summer clothes, and gayly and gallantly proceeds to play to the feminine shoppers with clever French things, more than clever American adaptations, and literally cases and cases full of the latest ideas for costume accessories.

You can leave home with the solitary toothbrush and an empty suitcase, spend an hour among the shops, and in that short and merry time collect a summer wardrobe that will make the stay-at-homes you left behind pale green with awe and envy. Smart people who know enough to live and stay in Chicago even get a thrill out of the summer clothes collections.

Shopping nowadays has lost all its old time sky high price tags shocks. The faithful budgeteer who has superhuman strength in the matter of sticking within any modest boundaries, can smilingly relax and begin to buy with good enthusiasm, for even though you have heard it whispered before, you may now prove the fact that summer price marks are mercifully inclined to make everything as easy to own as possible.

For Spectator Sports.

Daytime clothes for the next two or three months are well displayed in all the shops, and while evening dresses are perhaps the most unusual creations you will have seen for many nights, the greatest and best thinking undoubtedly has been squandered on clothes for street and daytime and spectator sports wear. Smart Chicagoans live in spectator sports costumes. Any good clothes hound buys them in sixes and sevens. Good looking brilliant contrasted creations of silk, cotton, linen, lace and all the gorgeously flowered prints that bloom each year.

Spectator sports costumes are so ingeniously designed that you can wear them from dewy dawn till dusk, shop in them, lunch in them, watch the races, and everything else that fills a happy, long summer day. Designers have been exceedingly shrewd this year and have concocted some styles that can't be equalled for distinctive charm and wearableness. They are still sold on the jacket to go with each and every frock, and just this sympathetic understanding of present financial dullness and apathy should earn the lasting gratitude of clothes hounds who refuse to leave any roof without the protection of a coat. Feeling somewhat like a circus barker, you speak gloatingly, even do a little bragging about the good low price tag of these costumes that include and are inseparable from the jacket.

But other summer clothes are priced likewise, clothes as illustrated in the nearby columns today. Beginning at the left, a beautifully tailored yellow linen suit consists of two pieces. The skirt is made with narrow inverted plaits in front and back, the high waistline is achieved with a wide fitted separate belt enabling you to wear either slipover blouses or the models that slip under the skirt. The form fitting jacket is very new with wider lapels and a double row of shining brass buttons. Linen, cotton lace, tucked net, and contrastingly striped blouses are particularly ideal for this model.

New Fabric Popular.

The seated spectator wears a stunning one piece frock of white chalk crêpe, a fabric which is rough and pebbly in texture, and shadow proof. An inverted godet plait-like motif in the right side of the skirt is a contrast with delft blue and white printed silk that matches the scarf tie.

One of the newest combination affairs is similar to the third figure sketched. The long white flannel coat worn with a white crêpe silk sleeveless frock color is cleverly introduced with the emerald green and white fringed scarf attached to the coat. The simple smart dress has inverted kick plaits in front and back with emerald green edged with bone buttons to match the same sort of buttons on the coat. The fashionable high wrapped neckline is noticeable in the coat with its round yoke and narrow standing collar. Tailored patch pockets complete the practical aspect of the costume.

Printed silk frocks are not new, but they are just as colorfully correct this summer as ever before, particularly if the printed designs are distinctive, different, and not a rehash of old time stuff. The one sketched shows a garden model with tiny flower motifs. The wrapped high waistline is made with a tied sash of contrasting plain colors. The sleeves are unusual in that they are almost plaited elbow length capes. Any or all of these smart summer dresses can be added to your wardrobe for the lowest prices you have ever been asked to pay.

Bias Hip Seam, Long V-Bodice Effect Slimness

THE appearance of overweight has been beautifully disguised in the dress made by pattern No. 2644.

It has the long V bodice arrangement, unusually attractive sleeves, and a cleverly cut skirt with bias hip seaming.

The dress is cut in two parts—waist and skirt—and joined under a removable tie belt. The skirt is cut in three pieces and is circular. Lines of small perforations show where the plaits are to be laid. First pin each plait in place, always working from the top towards the bottom. Before basting, see if the folds on the under side are perfectly smooth. If there is even a slight twist, release necessary pins and shift slightly until perfectly smooth.

If plaits do not hang perfectly it is because there is a twist on the under side, and no amount of pressing and tacking will remedy it. After the plaits are basted, stitch down from the top as far as you wish. Then press well.

The skirt, when finished, is basted to the lower edge of the yoke and stitched twice. Once close to the edge, then about ¼ inch above. Directions that come with the pattern show how far down the skirt is left open on the left side. The bodice is easy to make, and it will be pretty if the vest is made of a contrasting color. The three-quarter length sleeves are both attractive looking and comfortable, but if short ones are preferred, the sleeve pattern has perforations showing where to cut them.

In making the tie belt, pin the seam together at intervals on the wrong side, then sew in a narrow seam by hand. First, though, turn in a seam's width at both ends and baste, slip a tape needle in one end, and sew it to one edge. You can then easily pull the belt right side out. Slip stitch the edges together and press flat.

Printed and plain silk crêpe will make up well, and so will one of the lightweight woolens. A black diagonal sheer woolen, with the vest of beige wool crêpe will be smart.

A lovely deep blue silk crêpe having a sapphire cast made the original of the frock made by pattern No. 2622, and it's an adorable affair. It's an easy dress to make and shouldn't be expensive. The simple waist is cut in two pieces, and the neckline is round and a little low. A two piece collar finishes it becomingly, and the short puffed sleeves are gathered into narrow bands at the bottom, fitting the arms closely.

The front and back of the skirt form panels, extending into a hip yoke at the sides. The sides are circular, making a graceful skirt. The waist is closed on the left shoulder and under the left arm. If the tiniest snaps are used, and set ⅛ inch in from the edge and ¾ inch apart, the opening will be invisible.

Vivid red crêpe de chine will make up beautifully, and so will any of the lovely cotton dress materials. One of the cotton tweeds in a brown and red mixture will be smart, particularly if you cut the collar on the bias and finish the edge with a piping of plain red.

Pattern No. 3050 is for a chic frock that can easily be made at home. It consists of a two piece circular skirt that is joined to a two piece yoke. This yoke is quite deep, should fit perfectly around the hips, and is prettily shaped in a scalloped outline at the bottom.

The bodice is perfectly plain, fitted with darts at the underarm seams on the front, and slashed down from the neck at the center front to make putting on and off easier. This slashed opening should be bound and tiny snaps used to fasten it.

An unusually pretty capelet collar that comes over the tops of the arms in such a way as to make short sleeves unnecessary is seamed on the shoulders and is fastened at the front by one button. The belt is a little wider than some and has both edges scalloped. As you can see, the collar and skirt edges are also scalloped, and if a contrasting color is used, the effect will be good.

Gay Summer Frocks for the Lookers-On

Summer Suits Omit Tailored Spring Effect

PARIS.—(AP)—"The suit's the thing for hot weather clothes," says fashion's edict for summer.

The summer suit is a far cry from the tailored affair of the spring, however. It can be made of anything from dark foulard to white washable silk, and its jacket is brief, scanty, and unlined.

For hot days in town a simple suit of dark figured foulard is the smartest offering. Lanvin makes one of dark blue spattered with small white squares; another printed in chocolate, cocoa, and cream triangles, and a third of raspberry red stamped with cream rings.

Straight Jackets for All.

Some of them have one piece frocks, others are fashioned with skirts appliqued to white crêpe blouses. All are accompanied by straight cut jackets which fall no lower than the hipbones.

A crisp white straw hat and kidskin gloves or a broad brimmed sailor and suede gauntlets to match the predominating color are the most popular accessories.

Shantung is another favorite of fashion for the hot weather suit. One model of brown shantung has a one piece dress and a waist length jacket which laces up the front with a beige cord instead of buttoning.

Sleeveless Sports Frocks.

For hot days in the country the designers' universal offering is the sleeveless sports frock of cotton piqué in colors as varied as a box of bonbons. Powder blue, daffodil yellow, water green, shell pink, and saffron are included in the selections.

White frocks splashed with brilliant color in belts, scarfs, or jackets will be much worn.

Many Young Episcopalians to Meet Here

By the Rev. John Evans.

HUNDREDS of Episcopal young people representing all sections of the country will hold a convention in connection with the 1933 World's Fair if plans now in the making are carried out. Such plans will be advanced at a meeting of young Episcopalians from five central western states to be held at Brent house, 5540 Woodlawn avenue, next Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. The sessions will be led by Arthur F. With of Milwaukee, president of the Episcopal Young People's association of the province of the midwest.

Among the speakers for the coming meeting will be Bishop Campbell Gray of the diocese of northern Indiana, Bishop Harwood Sturtevant of Fond du Lac, Wis.; the Rev. Alden Kelly, student chaplain of the University of Wisconsin; the Rev. Charles Scovill, chaplain of the University of Minnesota, and Miss Sallie Phillips of New York, secretary of that national Episcopal young people's work.

The proposed action of the Episcopal young people is in line with the program now under the development of a committee on religion at the World's Fair. George W. Dixon is the chairman of that committee. On his return from Atlantic City last week, where he attended the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, Mr. Dixon pointed to the action of that church which approved Chicago as a center for religious conventions in 1933.

Last week the Luther league began to lay plans for an international convention here in connection with the fair. Mr. Dixon cited these organizations as leaders among the many religious societies of the country that are preparing to march to Chicago during the Century of Progress year.

The week of prayer ordered by Pope Pius XI. began last Friday evening at a special service in the Holy Name cathedral. The week began at the Feast of the Sacred Heart. Devotions for the week of prayer are being conducted by the cathedral clergy each evening at 8 o'clock.

Girls Swift to Defend Homely Men They Like

Dancing Ability, Sartorial Dignity and Sweetness Virtue Enough.

and so very wrong. Is the man blind, or does he feel so sorry for himself that he doesn't even want to see things differently?

"There are girls, and girls, and still more girls who actually prefer men who aren't handsome to those who are. And they're nice girls too—pretty, charming and intelligent. Perhaps he's just met the wrong kind, and whose fault is that?.

"And then again, perhaps it's only his ideas that are all wrong. He really shouldn't expect just any girl he takes out to throw her arms around his neck and tell him he's wonderful.

"I've gone with men who were handsome, and I've also gone with men who were homely. My experiences have taught me this—the most interesting, amusing, considerate, and really worthwhile men are never the handsome fellows.

"And here's another thought: Girls like to be seen with men who are clean and neat, who are conservative in dress, and who carry themselves well and have bright, clear eyes.

"And last of all tell Martin to be sweet. If a man is sweet, and knows how to be especially so at just the right time, well—he should be able to make any girl love him.

"BROWN EYES."

A Word of Comfort.

"Dear Miss Blake: I do not agree with Martin and of course, there are some girls who go out with fellows only for their good looks, so they can show them off before their friends. I'm telling you Martin, if I had a decent boy friend, I wouldn't care whether he looked like Robert Montgomery, or if he looked like Wallace Beery.

"It's hard to meet a nice man and one who will treat you decently, because there are more of the other kind. You're not the only one who sits home. I do, too. I'm not bad looking [so my friends say], but I don't go in for 'petting,' and that's why I don't get many chances to go out.

"Stop worrying, Martin. When the right girl comes along, she won't care about your looks, if she's any good.

"ELSA."

Appearance No Drawback.

"Dear Miss Blake: This letter is in answer to Joseph's and Martin's complaints.

"What's the matter with these boys? They certainly do not have to look like Clark Gable or Apollo Belvidere, at least not to me. I never judge a boy just by his looks. A boy with a good character who is just ordinarily attractive is O. K. Any boy can make himself charming if he believes in his power and ability to do so. Most of my girl friends' beaus aren't handsome.

"I hope they wake up and look around for there are millions of girls in these U. S. A. who would just fall head over heels in love with them.

"JUST 19."

Dress and Dance Well.

"Dear Miss Blake: Martin wrote you about girls caring for good looking fellows only. Well, let me tell him something.

"I am considered very good looking and have a lot of boy friends, but not one of them is good looking. They have personality and know how to dress. I don't see how any girl could like a fellow who had good looks only. I'd rather have one boy friend that respects me, and thinks I'm everything than ten good looking fellows who can't see beyond their own noses. A good looking fellow takes a girl home from a dance, and wants her to pet him the rest of the night. A fellow that hasn't any looks, thinks the girl he is escorting home is the whole world and she is treated like a queen.

"I don't think looks have anything to do with a man's popularity. All my girl friends are good looking, and they all agree with me. So change your technique, and I'm sure it will work. If you are a good dresser, and a keen dancer, you're it. V. C. K."

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

DO you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty. Powdered Saxolite reduces wrinkles and age signs. Simply dissolve one ounce Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel and use daily as an astringent. It overcomes oiliness and enlarged pores. It tightens and tones the underlying tissues, improves facial contour and stimulates and refreshes the skin.

SAVARAN the DEVOTED SPHINX

By Douglas Newton

Savaran Dashes into the Jaws of a Living Hell to Rescue a Man Held Captive by Savages, Risking His Own Life Daily Because of a Promise to a Woman.

THE tall, lean shape that was but a shadow in the shadows flicked a hand. Another shadow leapt like a panther and the armed Tarbashi at the door went down without a sound. The lean shape slid over him and through the door like an eddy of smoke, two lamp-black Buckra at his heels. The Protector of the Faithful within got one glimpse of an eagle-fierce face and swiped largely at it with his scimitar. The face grinned, ducked the blade, and two steel arms caught the man and tossed him into a corner where one of the Buckra with blunt knees and a sharp knife knelt on him, commanding silence.

A vast Nubian eunuch, leaving a chamber of the inner court, gasped at the sight of the lean man and made motions of war. A hard foot took him where he bulged most and by the time he had recovered enough to sit up the lean one had vanished into the chamber and the other Buckra stood at its door grinning at him—over pistol sights. Whereat the eunuch began to sweat cold. He had been ordered to guard what was in that chamber with his life.

The lean man had paused just long enough to straighten his turban and expose the glories of an orange kraftan—he had a neat taste in dramatic flourishes—then, with his hand on the jeweled hilt of a pistol, he swept aside the leather door curtain and entered the room.

The woman pouring out tea looked up with a certain amount of interest. Just that.

A bizarre and dangerous gentleman with the air of a highly accomplished pirate and the look of a laughing Lucifer had just wiped out such guards as stood between her and one of the most notorious murder communities of Africa in order to invade her presence, pistol in hand, and she merely tilted her teapot just enough not to spill it as she looked at him. On his part he stared open mouthed at some one that had given a new thrill even to a life where the amazing was an every-day habit. He had made a call in a town where throat cutting was the local entertainment, only to find that he had dropped in for Mrs. Stuyvesant-Higgs' bridge "afternoon."

He blinked, but not even the tropic stench and heat of Tauri Massi prevented the woman's homeric absurdity from being real. There she stood: the small, smooth, neat, earnestly "refeened" working model of all that was strictly proper in the "best" suburban wives. She even had a crochet-edged teacloth on the kerosene case that made her table. The white teeth flashed sardonically in the gypsy face as the lean man bowed.

"Your hired girl forgot to announce me," he said. "I am Savaran."

It was a name to make all Africa blench. She did not blench. She put down her teapot and gently foraged in a basket on the mud diwan beside her.

"I thought it might be you," she said in her best party voice.

"And you," he said, "are the lady who went to Port Sudan in search of me?"

"Yes. Do sit down."

"You also followed me to Korfri on the Congo and on to Tirsherifen seven hundred miles north, and, O yes, you inquired for me at Mottomari on the Atlantic in between."

"I just missed you at Jallon, you see," she murmured.

"A little trouble there, I believe?" he grinned.

"It was too annoying!"

"Such trifles are. I understand you had some difficulty in convincing the coroner that you knew enough about pistols to get your guide through the head first shot when he tried to kill and rob you."

"Yes," she nodded and hesitated, looking at him with appealing eyes.

"What is it?" he asked.

"Do you take milk—or none?" she murmured, jug poised over a second cup she had produced from her basket.

He collapsed on the diwan with a crack of laughter: "You are unique. You stagger even Savaran."

HE gazed at her, baffled, as the race of men since Adam has gazed at Mona Lisa, their wives, and the sphinx. What was she—tremendous or trivial, a marvel or a mutt? No man could tell merely from her face. It was that smooth, unflawed oval that meets the world so enigmatically from so many early Italian paintings and across so much early morning grapefruit. Had it, even, that loveliness that had launched a thousand ships against old Troy, or merely that soufflé insipidity that makes the morning paper the world's greatest refuge for husbands?

Was there behind that prim and stilly impersonality a mind and passions, or merely a mass production instinct for turning georgette into dress shapes and Sunday's beef into hash? Even Savaran, expert in women as in war, was helpless before her preternatural negation and could only demand: "What is behind you?"

"I don't quite follow. Sugar? One or two lumps?"

"Four hundred," his fierce lips mocked. "I am asking why you hunt me? Why you have done this miracle, trailed Savaran through several thousand miles of jungle and swamp, shot a man or two and outfaced experiences that would give your nice, residential home circle community hysterics? What is the mainspring of you—love or hate?"

"O—my husband?" she whispered.

"Is that really an answer or only an added complication to the riddle of the ages?" he demanded sardonically.

"I mean—I want you to rescue my husband, Mr. Savaran."

"You have dared five thousand miles of assorted hell just for—a husband?" he asked, his eagle glance kindling at a spirit so akin to his own.

"I had to. From what I've learned you are the only man who can save him. He is in a desperate position, Mr. Savaran."

"He must be if even a woman like you cannot help him," he said largely.

"He is," she breathed. "He is a prisoner of the Ja-gna-gnana."

Even Savaran gaped at her then. The Ja-gna-gnana had that effect. If she had said, "My husband is held prisoner on the seventh floor down of hell," she could not have been more disturbing. Indeed, it was held that that remote and deadly tribe exceeded hell in vileness. The Bantu, and they knew, had a saying that the Ja-gna-gnana were demons that Satan had banished from his domain because their viciousness horrified him. And this meek little nobody talked of her husband being their prisoner! Savaran shook his head.

"I am sorry, madam, but if your husband ever got into the hands of the Ja-gna-gnana he is already dead."

"No," she said huskily. "He is not dead. He got a letter out to me by a salt caravan six months ago. He was alive and being kept alive. They have never had a white captive before and they treat him as a trophy."

That might be true. These terrible Negroes, being practically ungettable by whites, might gloat over such a prisoner. Yet it was a point that made the spider-lean man frown.

"I've never heard of a white getting among them. How did they take your husband?"

"He was exploring that district," she told him.

"An explorer?" he asked, surprised, for he thought he knew all the breed. "What is his name?"

"O!" she was taken aback. "I thought you knew. My name is Judith Marrion—Mrs. Charles Marrion."

"Charles Marrion? Never heard of him," he scowled. "What's he like?"

"O, O, a big man. Not so tall as you, but very strong. And—and blue eyes," she said.

"That's a drawback—I know of at least three blue-eyed big men in Africa," he said sardonically.

"Don't be funny," she shuddered, please!"

"You're right." His face became harsh. "The Ja-gna-gnana can be no joking matter for him—or even Savaran."

"Yet, who but Savaran can get him away from them?"

"I can't help sharing your views," he said with a flash of white teeth. "And yet even Savaran may hesitate before the impossible."

"If you do not go," she said blankly, "I must."

"And by the living heaven," he said, his eyes shining admiration, "I believe you'd try."

"Something must be done. He's there, among those fiends, suffering and—and I am the only one he can turn to."

"To let you go would be signing your death warrant," he scowled. "And for nothing. He must be dead by now."

"I feel he isn't—in my bones," she answered. "He's strong and very—very tough. And even if he isn't alive I must know. Must! I have seven hundred pounds English, all I have in the world. If it isn't enough, if you won't go, then I must, myself. I can't—can't rest until I know. I'm asking too much, perhaps."

"That is how you conquer Savaran," he said with his large gesture. "Such a devotion, daring the very stars, is what makes such great natures as yours and mine akin. I will go to the Ja-gna-gnana and if your husband is alive I, Savaran, will bring him back to you."

THE spider-spare adventurer's journey through jungle, swamp and fever belt to that remote fastness of iron-flanked hills where the race of carbon-black, stork-shanked demons dwelt matters little. It was merely infernal. He lost half his carriers from bushman arrows before he had gone a third of the day, and the remainder of his men bolted one night at the sound of an attacking tribe's war drums, leaving him half dead with fever.

It was only by staggering in on the drummers and cowing them with his fierce eyes and more terrible pistol that he escaped from the would-be murderers. He did it by forcing their king and his cabinet to act as bearers of the carrying chair in which he rested until he was strong enough again to be really dangerous. But the journey was full of trifles like that, and such incidentals were, after all, merely everyday to a man like Savaran. Besides, the real unpleasantness of the trip began when he got among the Ja-gna-gnana.

He would not have lived among them five hours, for they have a prompt and fearful resentment of all strangers, had he not adopted the only two rôles that make a man reasonably safe among such fiends. He went among them as a madman and a fakir.

The more primitive a people are, the more awed they are by insanity. A lunatic is one who has been touched by the finger of Allah, and whose mind is what it is through constantly hobnobbing with spirits. There never was so mad a madman as Savaran, and added to it he clothed his lean, dark figure in a tattered jibba, plus all the wondrous filth of sacred bones, snake skins, monkey tails, and amulets proper to a holy seer. The very sight of him was an awe.

After he had extracted, by sleight of hand, three devils of indigestion in the shape of three live scorpions, from the belly of the overgorged headman of the first village he entered, and with gibberings and the thunder of Koranic texts against evildoers and infidels, brought further comfort to the brute with a bull-dose of castor oil, his reputation for saintliness and traffic in demons became so soundly established that he was free to live and wander in the land.

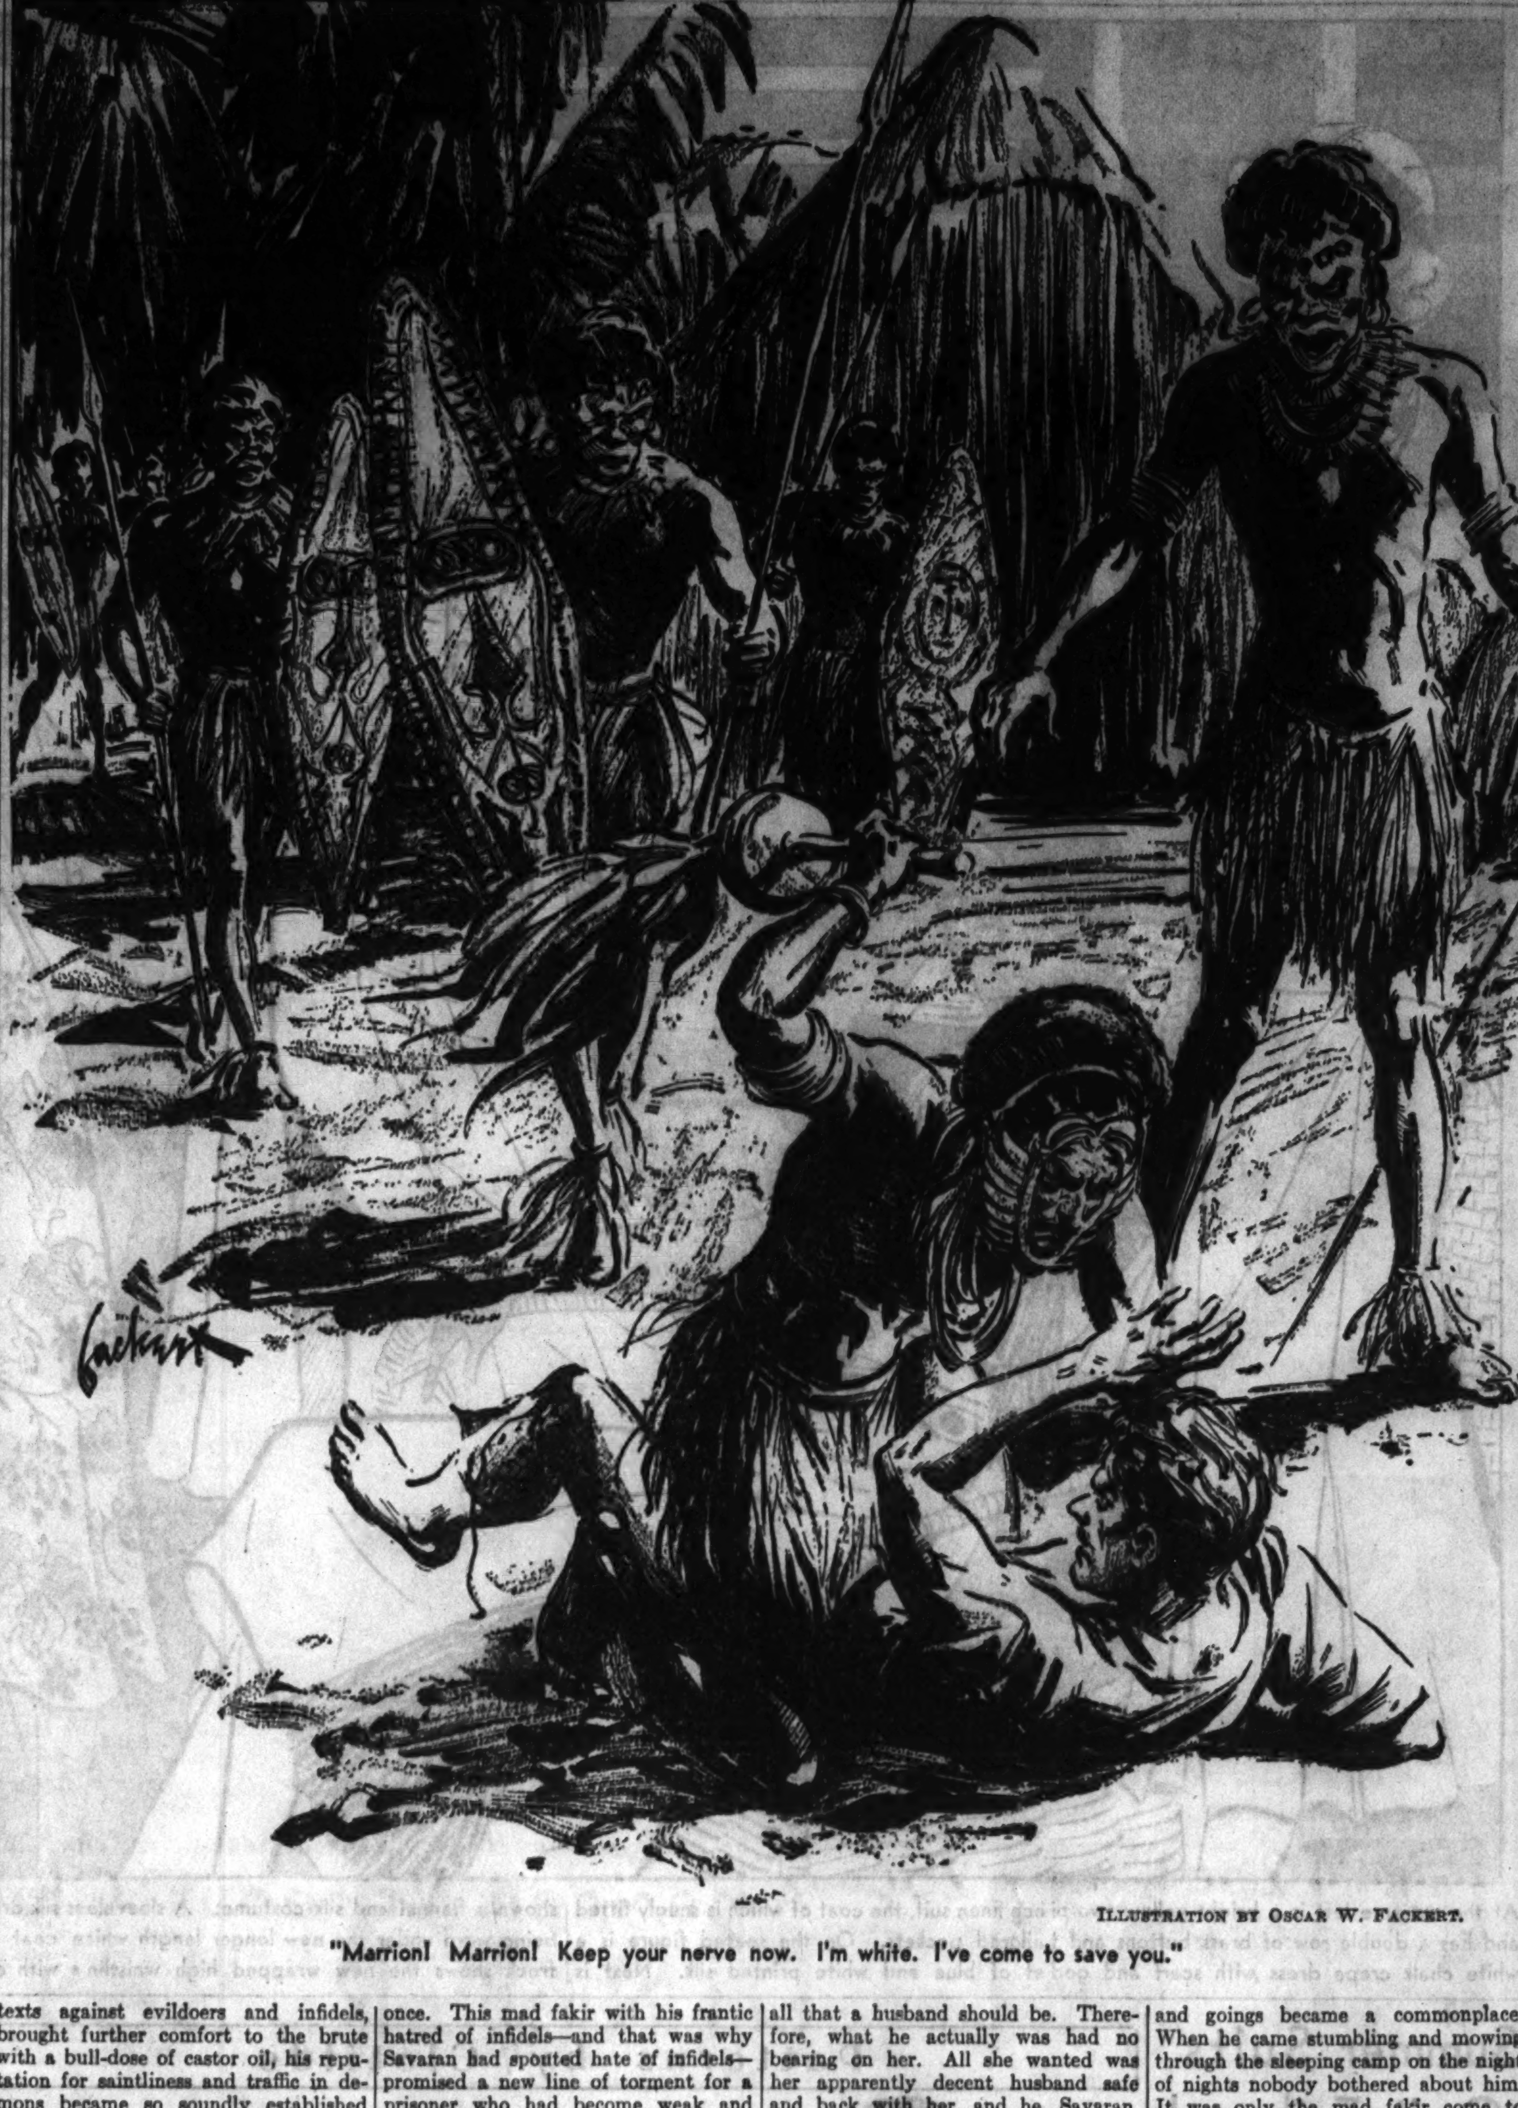

ILLUSTRATION BY OSCAR W. FACKERT.

"Marrion! Marrion! Keep your nerve now. I'm white. I've come to save you."

It was not the prettiest form of living. If the Ja-gna-gnana let him live for fear of the demons he might loose on them, they saw no reason why he should not pay for it by amusing them. They therefore made him court jester to hell. When there was lack of people to torture and life was dull they would drag him forward to mow and gibber and dance. If his fulminations against infidels or his caperings lacked the true abandon, they would prod him with their shovel-headed spears or whack his ankles with flaming brands plucked from their fires. They also encouraged their children to use him as a target for their practice arrows and in every other way that their warped minds were capable of turned all his days and most of his nights into living horror.

Savaran being Savaran, lived through it all, but at times it was only the memory of Judith Marrion's great love and sublime devotion that saved him from becoming suddenly sane and, plucking his automatic from its hiding place among the amulets, wiping out as many of these fiends as possible in one grand Savaranesque attempt to level up their cruelty.

BEING Savaran, however, he never did forget the woman who was waiting so loyally on his pledged word. Not for a moment did he cease to hunt for Charles Marrion, and the mowing and fanatic figure that seemed to drift aimlessly about the iron valleys was following a set plan. And in time his genius and the woman's devotion had their reward. He found Charles Marrion—alive and in the salt gangs.

High up in the hills of Ja-gna-gnana was a big saline lake that was the chief wealth of the tribe. Its water was carried bucket by bucket into the pans on the ledges above and evaporated out into paving-stone slabs of raw salt by the fierce heat of the tropic sun. Once a year tribes from a thousand miles around came to a certain border town in "Salt Caravans" that have been famous since Solomon's day.

The one defect of this source of riches is that to keep pace with the demand is killing work. The lake is remote, the conditions of life ghastly, and the harsh, bare mountains trap the sun so ferociously that no man can work there continuously and live for more than a few years. The Ja-gna-gnana overcome these defects by using their prisoners on the work, its deadliness giving it an additional charm for this purpose in their eyes.

Savaran, learning in the plains that the famous white roumi captive was a member of the salt gang, set out for the lake. He was led to the man at once. This mad fakir with his frantic hatred of infidels—and that was why Savaran had spouted hate of infidels—promised a new line of torment for a prisoner who had become weak and unresponsive to the usual tortures.

Charles Marrion, because of his white skin, was a pampered prisoner. That is, when the horrible work brought him close to death he was taken off it and allowed to lie up in the sleeping camp until he was strong enough to be slowly killed again. He was undergoing such a spell of rest now and Savaran, in the midst of a mob of his tormentors, found him lying under the tattered rag that was the only protection the slaves had against the elements.

He lay so limp and ill that not even the kicks of the Ja-gna-gnana could stir him and presently Savaran had to pretend to give way to a frenzy of rage, bending over him and cursing him in a score of languages. But one of the languages was English and he said: "Marrion! Marrion! Keep your nerve. O, stench of infidel sin. Marrion, do you hear? I'm white. Keep your nerve now. O, spawn of Iblis. I've come to save you."

The man heard. He rolled over groaning as though to confront a new tormentor, blinked at Savaran with dazed eyes—then opened them wide.

"Savaran!" he screamed. "God in heaven—Savaran!"

But Savaran was already on top of him, clawing and mowing in crazy fury. And as the Ja-gna-gnana screeched in brutish laughter at such sport, he was snarling ferociously:

"Keep your mouth shut, Rod Barstow! Do you hear! Give nothing away! Your very life depends on it."

His own did, too. Something queer had happened to his knight errant search. He knew Judith Marrion's husband after all—but not as Marrion.

He was Rod Barstow, a crook whom Savaran had most solemnly promised to shoot on sight at their next meeting.

THE Ja-gna-gnana, fearing for the life of their show captive, dragged him off the swooning Barstow at last and Savaran spent an evening being baited by the salt guards and asking himself whether the discovery absolved him from further heroic folly or whether his word to Judith Marrion was still binding.

Charles Marrion or Rod Barstow was the last man he wished to save from anything. He was one of the world's meanest efforts; a big, genial man who would stop at no filth to steal a dollar. It was for rotting a tribe Savaran had been interested in with dope that the bizarre adventurer had sworn to kill him.

He was, in fact, better dead. On the other hand, there was Judith Marrion. Obviously, she did not know what her husband was. How could so sweet and simple a creature even guess? And then, hadn't the brute married her under another name? No, he was probably at his best with her, all that a husband should be. Therefore, what he actually was had no bearing on her. All she wanted was her apparently decent husband safe and back with her, and he, Savaran, who never broke his promise, had given his word to restore that husband. That clinched it. He would be as magnificent as Judith Marrion herself, kill his own feelings for the man and save him.

BARSTOW might have altered things by betraying him. He was quite capable of it, but he didn't. He clutched at the slender chance of freedom despite his fear of Savaran. When the mad fakir came to revile him the next day he snarled: "What's your game, Savaran?"

"How mere truth puzzles a crook," the lean man mocked amid curses in seven languages for the benefit of the Ja-gna-gnana. "The game is precisely as stated yesterday. I'm here to get you away."

"Don't lie to me," the man quavered. "Is this some trick of revenge?"

"Would Savaran risk his neck on such a trick, knowing that the Ja-gna-gnana were doing all that was needed?"

"No, that's what I've been thinking," mumbled the man. "But—but you swore to shoot me?"

"The pleasure is postponed. Perhaps indefinitely. I have also sworn to rescue you."

"Sworn! Some one paid you?" Barstow gasped. "Who? The Trevarter gang?"

"Do I work in the sewers?" spat the eagle-fierce man. "Would mere money sway Savaran to dare so much? It was something nobler than you'll ever understand, Barstow—your wife?"

"God! Of course—you called me Marrion!" the man said, and lay still, watching Savaran with queer, questioning eyes. Savaran asked, guessing the man might be playing fox: "Are you too weak to walk?"

"How far? I'm pretty weak."

"To the hill road above the workings. It's the nearest I can hide mules."

"I might—if you could get me food," the man shuddered. "And a shot of millet spirit—and give me a day or two."

"I meant to," Savaran said. "You've got to watch me, Barstow, pick up my tricks. I'll be coming here all hours. Study my antics so that you can mimic me."

He leapt up with the abruptness of the madman, aimed a fanatic kick at Barstow, and then shambled gibbering away. But he kept his word. He came back at all hours. Even during the night, to the anger of the other slaves whose sleep he disturbed. It was as though the mad fakir was drawn by a very magnetism of hate for this infidel. But there was cunning in his method. Not only was he able to slip food he had stolen to the weakened man. His irresponsible comings and goings became a commonplace. When he came stumbling and mowing through the sleeping camp on the night of nights nobody bothered about him. It was only the mad fakir come to torment the roumi again.

But as he leant over to curse the infidel, Savaran dropped his jibba and turban with fierce injunctions to Barstow to get into them. Then he passed a stiff shot of native spirit, and when it had steadied the man's shaking nerve, he handed over his whole collection of amulets.

"Tie these about you," he hissed. "When I give you my usual farewell kick I will stumble and fall. Spring up at once and take my place. Go gibbering off through the camp like me. You'll find two mules tethered between the first two big rocks on the left of the hill path. Wait by them until I come. Keep your nerve. It will be all right once you reach the mules."

He did all as said. Barstow, in his robes and amulets and acting his mad mowings excellently, went off unchallenged. He gave the man ten minutes, then with the stealth of a woodsman slid through the camp after him. All went well. He got by the salt guards without a hint of suspicion. It was only when he was clear of immediate danger and running toward the mules that something went wrong.

He heard the clatter of hoofs ahead of him, caught a glimpse of two mules speeding up the path while the man on the back of one flailed both to a gallop. Barstow was bolting, leaving his rescuer in the lurch.

THAT was Barstow always—treacherous and cowardly in any crisis. Savaran found him two miles along the trail, lying where his mule had thrown him, snivelling in fear.

"I thought they'd got you," he whined. "You seemed so long and—and I could feel them coming after me."

"They won't even know you've gone until dawn tomorrow," Savaran said curtly and yanked him to his feet.

"That's what I've been thinking," Barstow snuffled. "You can still get me back before they know. I'll be safe then. Damn you, do you hear? I won't get on that mule. If they catch me it will be worse than ever—I'm going back."

Savaran did not argue. He hit with a terrible swing to the brute's chin and then tied the insensible body across the mule. When Savaran promised to rescue a man Savaran did it, even if he had to do it by force.

Barstow made the battle to save his life continuously deadly. They traveled by night and hid by day as only Savaran knew how. Even then Barstow was a danger. With the Ja-gna-gnana searching a valley below, fear made him capable of anything. Twice the lean adventurer had to knock him insensible to prevent him rushing out and shouting in the hope of a quick death, and always he was pleading to be left behind with a pistol to die fighting because his nerve could not stand the strain.

"Don't tempt me," the fierce man growled. "Nobody could be more willing—but there's your wife and my word to her. If you say another word I'll permanently gag you."

It was only when Savaran had once more accomplished the impossible and got them out of the Ja-gna-gnana country that Barstow began to see a ray of hope ahead and quieted down. Yet more than ever he took to studying his rescuer with that queer, speculative glance of his, and one day he asked: "Why did Judith come to you?"

"Because she is a remarkable woman," the fierce smile flashed back. "Who else in all Africa could she have gone to?"

"She might have tried bribery through some one in a salt caravan," Barstow mumbled.

"And never seen you or the man or her money again," shrugged the lean adventurer. "There are a score of ways she might have tried, but she had the instinct beyond ordinary women to know the only one that was sure."

"Ah, you were impressed by her cleverness?"

"By something bigger—her divine devotion."

"Devotion?" sniggered the man. "Devotion, eh?"

"Barstow," said Savaran grimly, "the balance between my twisting your neck, as I promised, and saving your life, as I also promised, depends on a featherweight. One sneer at that noble lady, your wife, and not even my word to her will save that neck."

BARSTOW cringed under the death in the bright eyes. Yet presently he said: "I wonder—she didn't tell you my real name was Barstow?"

"Obviously—am I not here? Would I have given my word to save a rat like you even to such a woman as your wife? Does she even know that your name is Barstow?"

"She may," he frowned. "You never do know what she knows."

"If she knew would she have withheld it from me—a woman as simple and guileless as that?"

"That's the puzzler," scowled Barstow. "That's why I'm wondering."

He became very quiet and docile after that—and dangerous. When they reached the Yanni people and Savaran was able to use the money in his body-belt to hire carriers and gather stores for a caravan, Barstow spent much time hobnobbing secretly with the local medicine man. Also, on the night before they marched he showed both a curious elation and an eagerness to press drink on Savaran by way of celebration. Or rather he did until after the third drink. Then he sprang up, swaying on his feet, his face green.

"My God!" he shouted. "What have you given me?"

"You know best," said Savaran with ferocious geniality. "What did the ju-ju man give you for me—that's what you've drunk."

Barstow fell to the floor, his limbs curiously rigid, and the spare man bent over him.

"What was it—a poison?" Barstow's lips framed a hoarse negative.

"O, I thought as much—the vine that kills a man's legs for a week—just long enough to let you get away from me, eh? Very fortunate, really; it'll prevent your being a nuisance on the march—O, and next time you plot with medicine men, make sure they haven't daughters. This one has, a pretty little thing and talkative when properly handled—which is the way Savaran invariably handles 'em."

Barstow continued the march helpless in a litter, yet Savaran overlooked one thing; that is, that years of practice under the eyes of slave drivers had made the man a master in malingering. That day, rather more than a week later, when it was imperative to hunt for the pot, the lean adventurer left him in camp, sure that he was still unable to stand upright. When he returned at nightfall he knew better. Barstow had vanished with all the carriers, arms, and stores, save for what Savaran and his two hunters had on them.

"They left an hour after we started on our hunt," said one of the hunters studying the tracks. "The other white bwana hurried them. See how his booted feet moves here and there as he drives them. And he knows where he is going. This track leads to the Ba Lee river and, reaching it, he can get canoes to take him up to Gongoda or down through the Riad country to McQuala, on the Keef coast, or even to the British Malaria colony, which would be the way a white man would go."

"Not this white man," said Savaran grimly. "He goes to Gongoda."

He knew that for certain, knowing Barstow. Gongoda would be a haven of refuge for the fellow, because, thanks to the hate of its king, death waited for Savaran there. Also, it was the nearest bolt hole by several weeks.

Once again Savaran stood and asked himself if it was worth risking a painful and protracted death for such a fellow. Reason said no, reason said that even Judith Marrion would be better rid of such a cur—but Savaran was never a creature of reason. He had a vision of that quiet, trusting woman waiting with her sublime patience in McQuala.

"We go to Gongoda," he said grimly.

ON the Ba Lee river he found that Barstow had gone upstream to hide among his deadly enemies, as he had thought. Savaran paused only long enough to buy a canoe and a Hazramut trader's outfit and went after him.

The Gongoda border line on the river was aswarm with canoes waiting to massacre him, for Barstow had passed word of his coming. Grinning fiercely, he steered slap for where they were thickest and, standing up, roared boldly:

"Way! Way for Shentun the Hazrami. I have news for the king. Zavarani is trying to creep up to the king-town disguised. Ho, let me by to warn the king of his enemy."

Such audacity could not even be questioned. The guard boats let him through, the warriors in them even cheered him on his way. And Savaran's hand-picked paddlers made record speed upstream. It had to be so. Their necks depended upon their arriving before a message of their coming reached the king-town, and dangerous inquiries made about the strange Hazramut.

Time fought against them and nearly beat them when they reached the king-town, for Barstow, having brought news of a hated enemy, was being banquetted by the king. It looked like check-mate. Savaran, with others of the public, was able to slip into the great hall and study a scene confused and barbaric with the constant come and go of servers, dancers, and musicians under the light of flickering torches. Safe in the very heart of the mob, a little removed from the king, and ringed about by armed guards, Barstow, already three parts drunk, sat secure. Secure for good, too, for the gorging would go on until dawn and long before then the hunt for the strange Hazramut would be on. The situation seemed hopeless.

The eagle-fierce face grinned. Savaran did relish impossible situations—they gave such opportunities for magnificent gestures. Walking round to the kitchens, he waylayed a serving man he had marked, and, slipping money into his hand, said: "As you serve the white bwana whisper to him to beware, since he who led him from the Yanni country is already in Gongoda town."

He knew that would be enough; Barstow would know it meant Savaran.

No native can resist a spice of intrigue with money attached. The message was delivered to Barstow with the next dish and Savaran watched the fellow shudder and go green. Then, as he had expected, the fellow's nerve cracked and, heedless of anything but his own safety, he chose a moment when a swirling mob of dancers came between him and the king to slip away—an oily and cringing Hazramut met him outside.

"It was I, bwana, who sent you news of Zavarani. Your men saw him in the town half an hour ago. Come quickly, I can take you to a good hiding place—for money."

"Yes, get me out of this quick," said the drunk and fearful Barstow. "I'll pay you well."

In his panic he suspected nothing until they reached the waterside and he saw the canoe—with its bows pointing downstream. Then he jerked alert, turned on his guide with a screeched: "Who in the devil's name are you?"

"Who else but Savaran!" grinned the lean man and flung him into the canoe.

As they shot downstream they heard the noise of a tremendous war chant from the banquetting hall. The king and his warriors were telling the world in song what little chance Savaran had against the redoubtable Gongoda. They were still unconscious that already Savaran had come and triumphed and departed.

THEY traveled downstream all night in safety, for the Gongoda prefers the darkness to devils. Barstow lay under the awning amidships, sullen and unspeaking. It was only when dawn brought a sudden tension and reaching for and a placing handy of weapons that he turned and looked ahead to where war canoes dotted the bosom of the river.

"The border?" he asked of Savaran.

"In fifteen minutes we'll be through—and safe," said the lean man. "The Gongoda dare not follow us into Riad waters."

"Will they let you by?"

"With cheers. I'm the gallant Hazramut who carried news of that terror of empires, Savaran, to their king. They won't have had time to have learnt the truth about me."

"And when we're through, what then?"

"Straight on to your wife."

"But where is she?"

"At McQuala, on the Keef coast," said Savaran, and Barstow jerked abruptly to a sitting position.

"McQuala! My God!" he gulped.

The Death of the Duchess

by COSMO HAMILTON & SIDNEY SUTHERLAND

What Has Gone Before:

At a house party at Weir castle the duchess of Devon, American-born heiress, startles her husband, her two sons, her daughter, and her guests by telling them she is about to seek a divorce from the duke, known as "Beauty," and then telling each one, with the exception of her daughter and two guests, why she despises them. She walks into the garden alone. When the guests and family assemble for dinner, her grace fails to appear. A half hour after the dinner hour the butler dashes in to announce that the duchess' lifeless body has been found in the castle grounds. The police are sent for, and Inspector Glade of Scotland Yard takes charge of the case when it is indicated that the duchess has been murdered. He questions each one in turn. He learns that the duchess was being blackmailed by two of the guests, Bombarrassi and Capt. Orozco, who knew that she was the mother of Solito, a singer. He confronts Jean Carlinrosse with the knowledge that the duchess had remembered her in her will, and had been killed before she could change that will.

INSTALLMENT VIII.

A Woman's Secret.

GLADE looked at the huddled figure. He resolved to make one more test: He would learn if Bombarrassi's suspicion that this woman might have discovered the truth about Solito was a sound one. He had reduced her to a thin bundle of misery and remorse, and with her guard down he hoped to find out if she knew of Anita's secret.

"Miss Carlinrosse!" he exclaimed sharply.

She uncovered her face and looked at him. He bent across the table and watched her eyes as he spoke:

"Miss Carlinrosse, tell me something, in utter confidence: Do you believe the maharajah or Bendage might have criminal knowledge of the murder?"

The expression in her eyes did not change.

"I don't know, Mr. Glade," she replied, her tones faltering.

"Do you think that the duke, about to be disinherited, let us call it, might have killed his wife before she could complete her plans to leave him penniless after a divorce?"

"I couldn't say, Mr. Glade. It's all too much for me."

As he put the next question, he watched her eyes even more alertly.

"Would Bombarrassi have any reason for killing her? Or Solito?"

"I really don't know."

There was absolutely no indication that this question contained a deeper significance than the others. Either this woman did not know the truth about the skeleton in Anita's past or, Glade decided, she was a consummate old actress with a mask of iron and a heart of ice. To divert her attention from the one itnerrogation he had been interested in getting an answer to, he went on:

"Could Vicary Hopkins or Enid Forbes or Captain Orozco have profited from the murder?"

"Mr. Glade, I haven't any idea why the duchess was killed——" and she began to weep, her thin shoulders rising and falling with her sobs.

The inspector arose.

"All right, Miss Carlinrosse," he said. "Please wait in the library. I might say, since you are crying, that you could have made life a bit more pleasant for the duchess if you had shown any love or gratitude toward her during the long years she befriended you. It's too late now. No matter what comes of this investigation tonight, yours is one of the consciences and one of the memories I should hate to own."

After Jane, weeping bitterly, passed him by the door he held open, Glade called to Orozco:

"Captain, please come in here."

Then he turned to Flint and spoke aloud: "When Carter returns tell him to find Hopkins and bring him to the library at once. I want to see him as soon as I finish with the captain. And I want Lady Elissa to wait for me, here in the library, too."

THE tall, slender Mexican soldier of fortune lolled easily in his chair under the tilted lampshade while Glade studied him. About 45 years of age, his hair was like black enamel under its pomade patina, his mustache was waxed and curled, his dark eyes bold and alert. One thin hand held a cigaret; the detective noticed that the climbing spiral of blue smoke betrayed no nerves a-tremble.

"Capt. Orozco," Glade began, "I'm told that when the duchess paid her respects to her family and guests this afternoon she accused you of blackmailing her. Did you blackmail her?"

"I did not. And I will answer your next question before you ask it." His English was flawless; he gave each syllable its tonal and quantitative value; he used no abbreviations and few possessives. "I did not murder her."

"One question at a time, please. If you didn't blackmail her, why did she say you did?"

"I have no idea. Could it not be, sir, that the lady was slightly demented? I am sure nobody who witnessed the exhibition could doubt it, and certainly no one ever saw such execrable taste."

"We'll leave the discussion of taste to another day. As for her mental condition, no one tonight has questioned it, or denied there was some basis for her accusations, so far as they related to them. There's been a lot of lying, and apparently we are to have more of it. I might suggest that, up to this time, every important lie has been exposed. Now, let's start all over; did you blackmail the duchess?"

"I did not."

"Once more, why did she accuse you of doing so?"

"I have no idea."

"Very well; now we understand each other. Tell me, what is the source of your income?"

"I am a wealthy man."

"What does that fortune consist of?"

"Well, my family in Mexico is immensely wealthy, and I have an allowance from my father. He gave me a fine education at Lawrenceville and Princeton."

"How long since you've been in Mexico?"

"Let me see: I left—I think it was in 1910."

"Why should there be any doubt as to when you left home?"

"Well, a great deal has happened since, and I really had not thought about it of late. I am trying to be accurate in my answers."

"That's splendid. Now, how is that allowance from your father sent to you?"

"By bank transfer. Twice a year the Banco de Mexico transfers a certain sum to my account in the Midland bank in London. My father makes the arrangements in Mexico City, I suppose."

"What allowance do you get?"

"It amounts, when translated from pesos into English money, to about ten thousand pounds a year. But do you not think, inspector, that such an excursion into my private affairs rather diverts you from your mission here, which, I take it, is to discover the murderer of Anita, if she was murdered?"

"My methods, like the question of taste, can be discussed some other time. Did you know the late duchess well enough to call her Anita?"

"O, yes. We were intimate friends."

"Did she call you Ramon when she denounced you this afternoon?"

"Well, no. She would hardly call me that while falsely accusing me."

"But when she accused the others, didn't she address them by their first names, or the names she commonly used, such as Jane, Joolep, Bombarrassi, Enid, and so on?"

"I believe she did. For some reason she merely called me Capt. Orozco."

"Did she ever call you Ramon at any time?"

"Well, now that you mention it, not in public. By Jove, that is funny: when we were alone she called me Ramon, otherwise she did usually address me as captain. I never noticed it until you called my attention to it."

"Yes, quite funny. And did you ever call her Anita when you were referring to her in the presence of others?"

"O, often, sir."

"Why not always?"

"Well, always, then."

"I WONDER why, in the light of that intimate old friendship you claim, she objected so bitterly to your wanting to marry her daughter?"

"Possibly because of the difference in our ages. Possibly because she favored Mr. Hopkins as a son-in-law. She was rather unaccountable in her actions this afternoon. I cannot explain it, really."

"How long had you known the duchess?"

"I am not very good on dates, inspector, but I am pretty sure we met some time during 1916."

"That would make the old friendship less than nine years old. How often did you see her in that period?"

"Our friendship really began in 1920, after the war."

"Well, that makes the affectionate relationship about five years old; not really an ancient bond, no matter how strong. Where did you first meet her?"

"In Rome, at a reception in the Mexican embassy. I was on my way back to my outfit in France, after spending my leave in Cairo. I had been severely wounded—I was with the Lafayette Escadrille—and had gone there on an indefinite furlough to convalesce."

"Go on. Tell me how you met her."

"As I say, I was shot down near Soissons in the fall of 1916—on Sept. 8, to be exact—and after a month or two in a hospital in Paris I was allowed to go to Egypt, where, of course, it was much warmer. There I met the duke, Joolep, and Dick Bendage, who were taking a holiday together from the western front. A pretty riotous holiday it was, too. I met them at Shepard's hotel, but I did not join them often because I had only my savings from my Escadrille pay, and because of my condition. When I——"

"Just a moment. Had your father's generous allowance been suspended?"

"N-n-no. That is right. I had received my usual allowance, but—but I had spent it in Paris."

"While you were in the hospital?"

"No, sir. I mean, on a previous leave. But, as I was saying, when I got ready to return to France—I was to sail from Alexandria on Dec. 18—I told the duke I was planning to return via Italy. He said his wife was then at her villa at Lake Como, and he gave me a note to her.

"When I reached Rome I called to pay my respects to the Mexican ambassador—he was an old friend of my family at home—and found he was giving a reception and ball that evening. He invited me—it was on Saturday, Dec. 22—and when I arrived I found that among those present were Solito Pissaro, the boy prodigy, and the duchess of Devon, his patroness. The ambassador introduced me to her, and to her daughter, Elissa, who was only a child; and to Bombarrassi, Solito's teacher before he went to the conservatory.

"I PRESENTED the duke's note, and she asked me to stop off at Como and spend two or three days at her villa before proceeding to Paris. I did. That is the way I met her, inspector."

"Did you visit her at the villa?"

"Yes, sir. I arrived there four days later—she had gone ahead—on Wednesday, the day after Christmas."

"I thought you were weak on dates? You're remarkably good as to the exact day and month you were shot, the time you left Alexandria, the reception in Rome, and the visit at Como."

"Well, of course, on dates as important as those—being wounded is not something one is likely to forget—I have to admit my memory did not fail me."

"But you are vague as to the unimportant date on which you last saw your family; even the year escaped you for a moment."

"All I can say, Mr. Glade, is that I cannot account for such a freakish memory. I hope you have encountered such lapses before, otherwise I fear you will deduce from the vagaries of that memory something that seems a lot more important than it really is. Besides, I am under a great strain tonight."

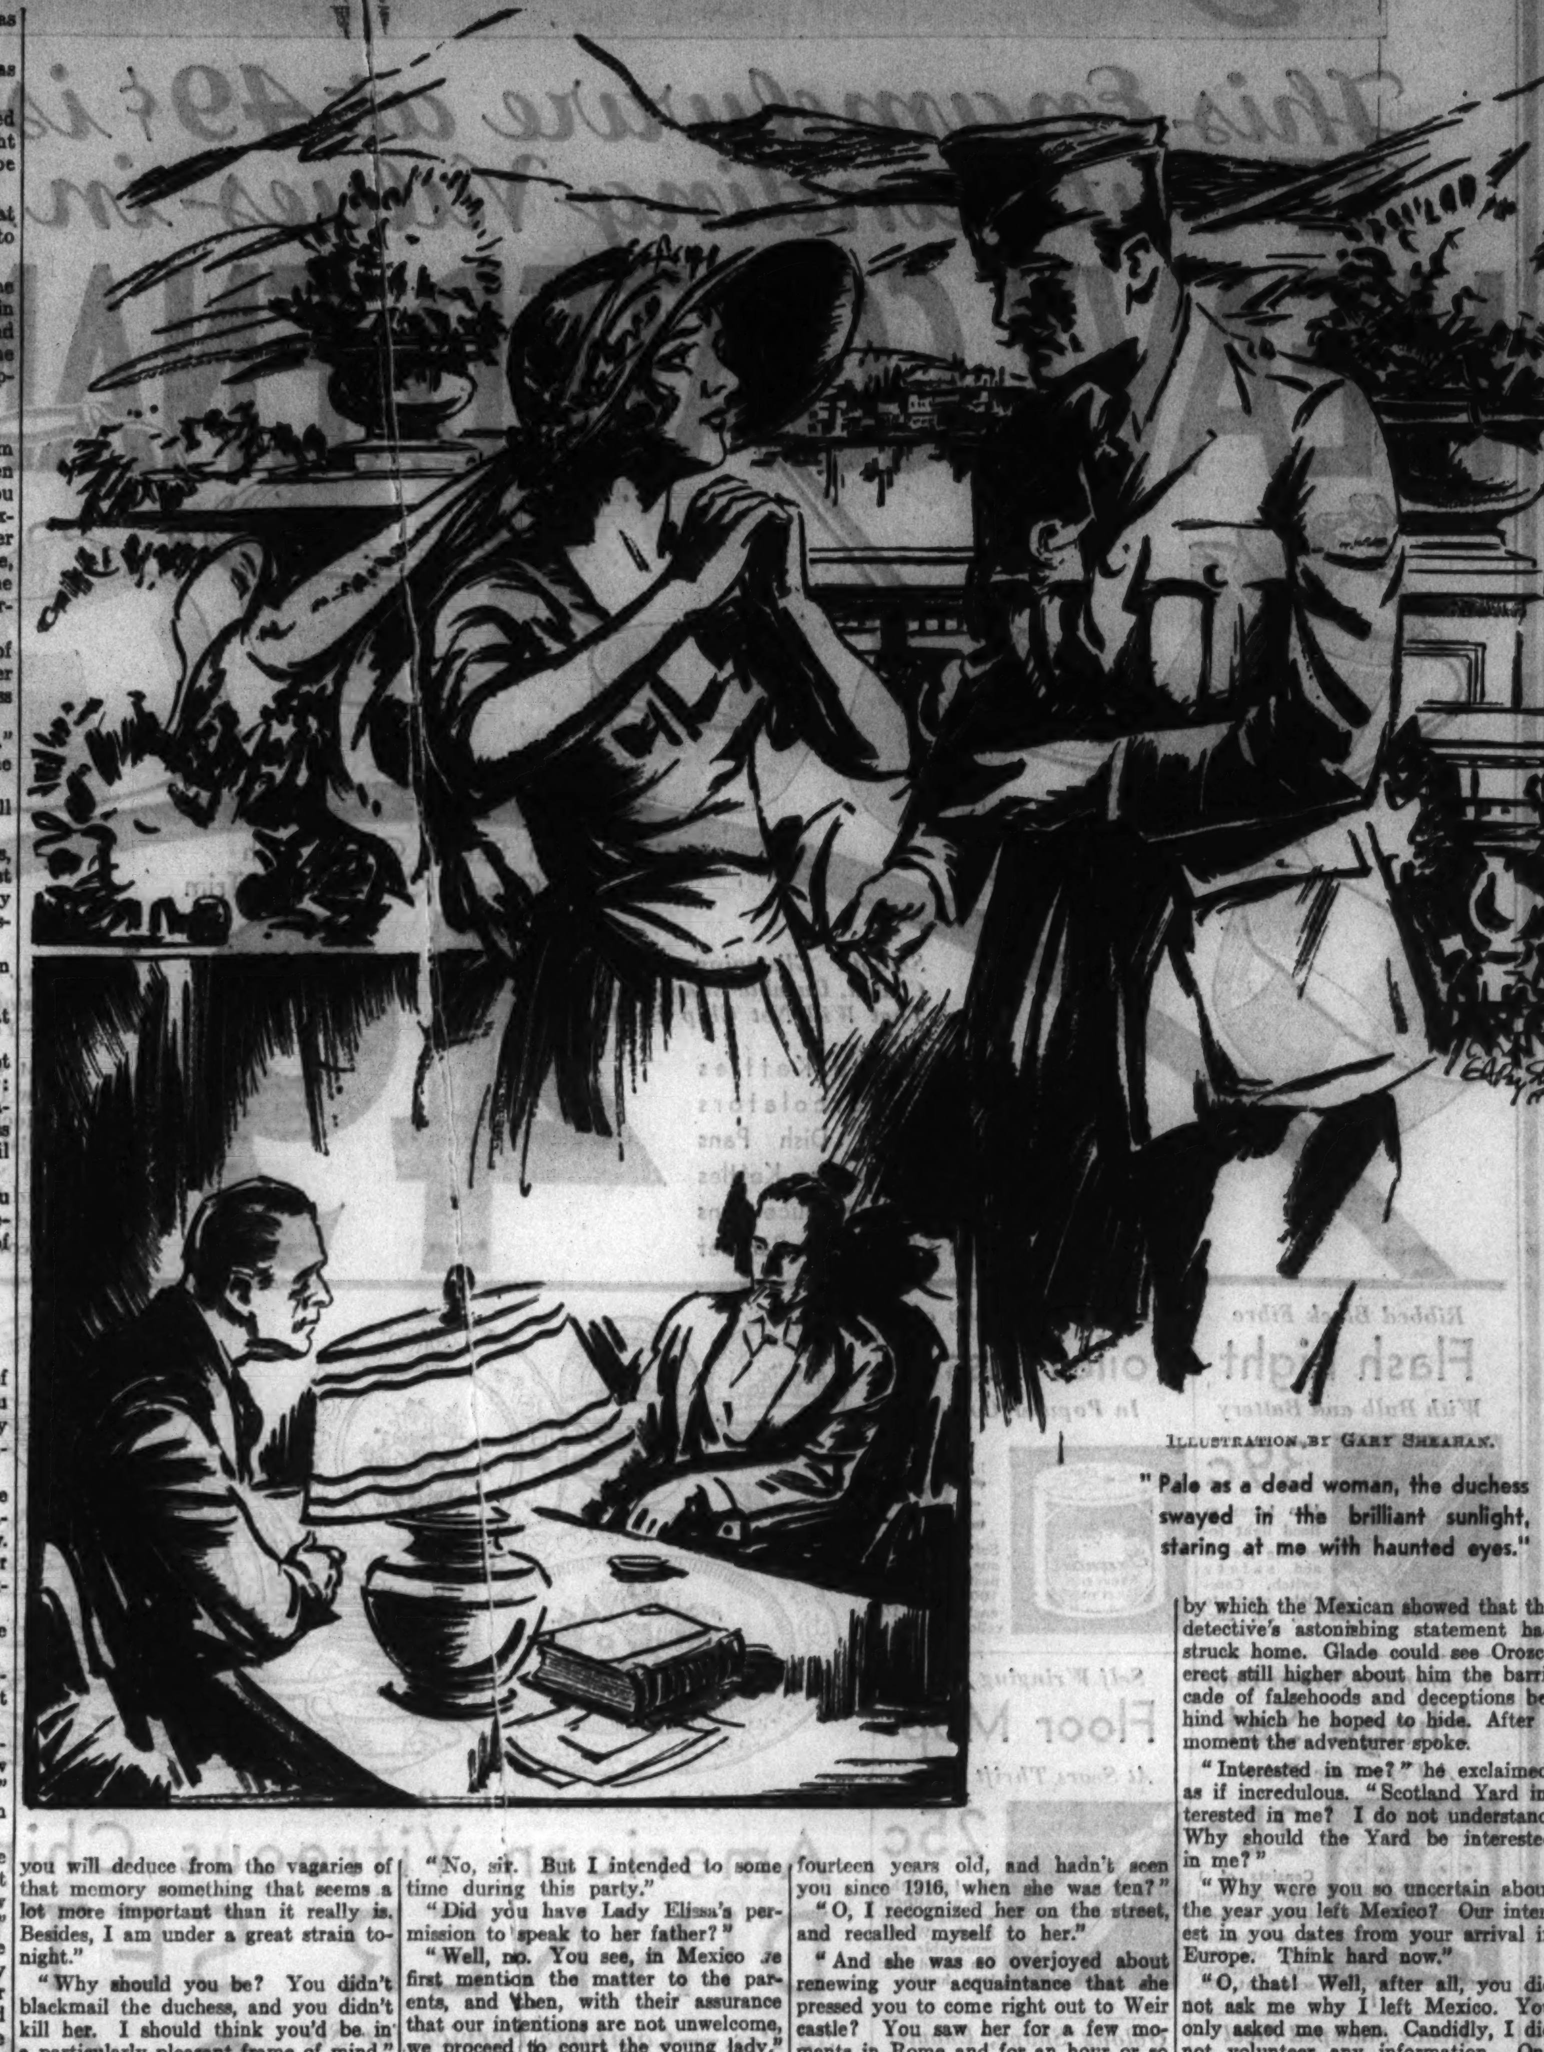

ILLUSTRATION BY GARY SHEAHAN.

"Pale as a dead woman, the duchess swayed in the brilliant sunlight, staring at me with haunted eyes."

"Why should you be? You didn't blackmail the duchess, and you didn't kill her. I should think you'd be in a particularly pleasant frame of mind."

"Well, the tragic interruption to my friendship with the duchess—I am pretty upset about it, sir."

"All right. Go on. What happened at the villa?"

"Why, nothing. Just a visit—that is the only way I can describe it."

"When did you rejoin your squadron? Their records, of course, would confirm the date."

"Yes, they would. I reported for duty on the morning of Dec. 28. I remember the date because the next day I succeeded in bringing down two German planes, for which I received a citation."

"DIDN'T you say you spent two or three days at the villa?"

"That is right."

"But if you reached Como on Dec. 26, how could you spend two or three days there and report to your outfit on Dec. 28? Were you being exact about the latter date because I suggested the squadron's records would show?"

"O, I forgot to say that I did not spend two or three days at Como. I was thinking about that fight up in the clouds—that is why I answered as I did. The truth is, I intended to stay longer at the villa, but I suddenly realized my leave was expiring in two days, so I had to hasten to Paris. I really only stayed at Anita's place one night. I left early the next morning."

"Your leave was to expire on Dec. 28? But you told me you went to Cairo to convalesce and that your furlough was an indefinite one."

"Mr. Glade, either you did not understand me or I failed to make it clear. What happened was this: my leave was indefinite, but it was understood—it was a verbal matter between the commandant and myself—that if I had fully recuperated I was to report for duty on Dec. 28. If I had not entirely recovered, I was to take my time."

"I see. Tell me, now, when you first informed the duchess you'd like to marry her daughter?"

"I never told her, in so many formal words. But she undoubtedly surmised the situation from my attitude toward Elissa."

"Is that the way you addressed her ladyship—Elissa?"

"Well, no. I have always used her title when talking with her."

"What was it, then, about your attitude toward Lady Elissa that would inform the duchess you wanted to marry her?"

"Why, just my attitude; the devotion I showed when I was with her. And I did ask the duchess one day if I might speak to the duke about her."

"What did she say to that?"

"She said it would be all right if I could convince the duke that the difference between my age and Lady Elissa's was not too great."

"Did you speak to the duke?"

"No, sir. But I intended to some time during this party."

"Did you have Lady Elissa's permission to speak to her father?"

"Well, no. You see, in Mexico we first mention the matter to the parents, and then, with their assurance that our intentions are not unwelcome, we proceed to court the young lady."

"O, all right, captain. No way to check on you there, eh? What I can't understand is this: your exact relations with this household, from what you've chosen to tell me so far. Let's see, you met the duke in Cairo, and weren't intimate with him because you couldn't afford it; and you met the duchess for a moment in Rome and a night in Como. And on that slender rope you've hung a friendship which practically made you a member of this family at any time you cared to come here, and which permitted you to conceive a plan to marry the duke's daughter."

"Mr. Glade, I never came out here without an express invitation from some member of this family."

"Did the duke ever invite you here?"

"Certainly. During the peace conference in Paris I ran into him, and he asked me to stay here the next time I was in England."

"Did you?"

"Yes."

"When was the first time you were ever in this place?"

"I do not recall the exact date, but it was late in 1919."

"Does that uncertainty mean that that isn't one of the important dates you are able to recollect so clearly? I should think the date of your first admission to Weir castle would be almost as important as the day, say, you sailed from Alexandria."

"Well, I cannot account for it, inspector. Sorry."

"Did the duke ever again invite you out here?"

"Well, not in so many words. But often when I ran into him he intimated that I was always welcome."

"HOW often have you been out here, approximately?"

"O, I should say fifty times."

"But the duke specifically invited you only once?"

"Well, if you insist on an expressly worded invitation. But I was always welcome."

"You were? Did Lady Elissa ever invite you?"

"O, yes."

"When?"

"I ran into her in London in Bond street one day, and she asked me out."

"When was that?"

"I forget exactly, but I think——"

"What! You mean you can't remember when the girl you wanted to marry first invited you to her home? Wouldn't you regard that as important as the date on which the Mexican ambassador in Rome gave a reception?"

"Surely, far more important, but you did not let me finish. I was about to say it was in the spring of 1920. I am sure I can remember the exact date if you will give me time."

"The spring of 1920? When she was fourteen years old, and hadn't seen you since 1916, when she was ten?"

"O, I recognized her on the street, and recalled myself to her."

"And she was so overjoyed about renewing your acquaintance that she pressed you to come right out to Weir castle? You saw her for a few moments in Rome and for an hour or so at Como, isn't that right?"

"Yes, but she knew I was a friend of her parents."

"Did she tell you that?"

"No, she did not, herself. But the du—I mean, the duchess told me she knew."

"I see. How often did Lady Elissa ever invite you out here?"

"O, just that once. But, of course, I spend most of my time in Paris. I come to England only for an occasional visit here. My business affairs keep me in France or elsewhere on the continent. I dislike London."

"THEN your trips to England are purely social, renewing your friendship with this family?"

"Yes, sir; purely social. My business is transacted mostly in Paris. As I say, I dislike London—the fogs, and chill winds, and so forth."

"But you don't dislike it so intensely that you have transferred your banking business to Paris?"

"I will tell you about that, Mr. Glade. I have much more confidence in English financial houses than in Paris banks."

"Yes. Now, if the duke and his daughter only invited you here on two occasions, once each, and you came out at least fifty times in less than five years, somebody must have asked you out the other forty-eight times, even if you do refer to those as only occasional visits. I feel, captain, that you're going to tell me that it was the dead duchess."

"I am frightfully sorry you put such an unfair interpretation on the situation, inspector. But the truth is, the duchess often asked me to come here. Of course, as I said, both the duke and Lady Elissa often intimated I was always welcome—at least I so construed their remarks."

"That is, you're all set to be a bit evasive, aren't you, in case I bring either of your living hosts in here to confront you? I can't confront you with the dead woman, of course. Now, isn't it the truth that you had some hold on the duchess which made it possible for you to intrude here whenever you wanted to? Knowing that she would have to explain your presence, your frequent appearances to her family in some way that wouldn't arouse their suspicions? A thing she could easily do, in view of the rather loose detachment that characterized this household, where everybody did as he pleased and accounted to no one?"

"I'm rapidly losing patience with you, captain, and I'm going to give you just one more chance to stop lying to me. To help you decide to tell the truth, I'm going to ask you if you're aware of the fact that Scotland Yard has been interested in you for about thirteen years?"

An infinitesimal, almost invisible flicker of his eyelids was the only sign by which the Mexican showed that the detective's astonishing statement had struck home. Glade could see Orozco erect still higher about him the barricade of falsehoods and deceptions behind which he hoped to hide. After a moment the adventurer spoke.

"Interested in me?" he exclaimed, as if incredulous. "Scotland Yard interested in me? I do not understand. Why should the Yard be interested in me?"

"Why were you so uncertain about the year you left Mexico? Our interest in you dates from your arrival in Europe. Think hard now."

"O, that! Well, after all, you did not ask me why I left Mexico. You only asked me when. Candidly, I did not volunteer any information. One never should. And since you intimate that you not only know the date but the reason I left that country, will you permit me to remind you that the statute of limitations removes any apprehensions I might feel?"

"True, I'm not interested in your leaving Mexico in 1912—and not in 1910, a year you mentioned to throw me off the track—but you ought to realize now that I know you've been lying steadily since you came in this room. Let me be quite clear.

"You left Mexico in 1912 because you and several companions went into Cuernavaca under the pretext of heading a revolutionary movement, and there robbed three banks and looted the cathedral. This was not only a crime that not even a genuine insurrection would justify, but you double-crossed your companions and fled to Guatemala with the stolen money and jewels.

"You then made your way to Europe, after changing your name from Manuel Rodrigues to Ramon Orozco. We first heard about you at the Yard when President Madero asked for your extradition in case you came to England. You were smart enough to hide out in the Balkan countries, living on your Cuernavaca plunder, and our interest in you became only academic, but quite active, because we believed that sooner or later, after the statute of limitations had run, you might come to this country to replenish your funds. So our agents on the continent kept track of you until the war began, when we had far more important things to do.

"Your name was still on our list, though, and we checked on you from time to time. Your war record in France, where you happened to be in 1914, wasn't a bad one, and we hoped you'd mended your ways. Not that we cared about you or your ways, but if you had reformed you'd be less trouble to us.

"WE learned, too, all about that Midland bank connection. Your father did secretly send you money for a year or so, and it was transferred to you under an assumed name. But after his property had been confiscated by one rebel leader after another and he and his family had been driven out of Mexico, his remittances ceased.

"The Yard was immensely interested when again funds began to be placed to your credit in London, for, of course, the bank notified us after we had put your name and your account there on our suspect list. Those new credits began in January of 1917 and have continued, semi-annually, ever since.

"Now, inasmuch as we know your father is a poor man and living in exile in Los Angeles, Cal., I want you to tell me where these new credits come from."

Orozco sat motionless, staring at the inspector. He was worried for the first time, Glade discerned, and he was on the verge of weakening in the light of the ominous fact that the dreaded Yard had been watching him all these years. But he lit another cigaret, and the match flame was steady. He might be desperate, but he was not quite cornered yet.

"They come from the Banco de Mexico, as I told you."

"Orozco, stop fencing with me! I know they come from Mexico City. But I also know that they reach Mexico City from the National State bank in New York City. What I want to know is, why does the National State bank regularly place ten thousand pounds a year to your credit in Mexico City? So far they've declined to tell us, partly because until tonight the Yard hasn't been really and actively interested in your affairs, and partly because unless we give them some urgent and valid reason for asking they don't like to disclose their clients' business. I can find out Monday morning, of course, by cabling to New York, but I want to know now."

"I prefer not to say anything. I have a right to consult a solicitor before I answer any further questions."

"That's right, you have. But while you're waiting to find a solicitor I'm going to call Sergt. Flint in here and have him send you down to the village jail, after I prefer against you a charge of suspicious complicity in the murder of the duchess."

"Wait a moment, inspector. You know as well as I do that you cannot make such a charge hold water for one minute."

"Maybe I can't. I'm not sure yet. But it'll serve to hold you until I learn from New York where your money comes from. I know, as well as I know you're sitting there, that you blackmailed the duchess. I know that you get no revenues from your family, and haven't since 1914, and that you've been getting an enormous sum each year since 1917.

"AND here's something else I know: before January of 1917 you traveled with a crowd on the continent that made a good living cheating at cards, acting as gigolos to ancient and foolish women, and swindling American tourists until the French forced you into service.

"The only decent thing in your life that the Yard has discovered is your record with the Lafayette Escadrille, and you probably had to fight bravely or be shot down, besides planning to make a war-time reputation that you could trade on with the police after the war.

"While we've been puzzled by you and your conduct since the armistice, we probably would never have done anything about it, especially since you seemed to be on friendly terms with the duke of Devon and his family and associates. But when I find you here tonight and involved in the mystery, because of the duchess' accusation that you've been blackmailing her for years, you can be sure that you are a pretty suspicious object in the Yard's opinion.

"Now, I'm going to prove you've been lying by calling in the duke and his daughter to tell me in your presence that they never have been your friends, and that the only reason they tolerated you in this house is because the dead woman seemed to like you.

"Then I'm going to take you up to Bombarrassi's rooms and confront you with him. He's told me about Solito, and I think I can quickly find out how you learned the truth about him and used it to blackmail his mother. You would be clever enough to try to cover your trail by making some arrangement with the duchess whereby she'd place the money in the New York bank for transfer to Mexico City and then to London. I'll know all about that before noon Monday, anyway. I'll now call in the duke and Lady Elissa."

Glade arose and started to the door, but Orozco lifted his hand.

"Never mind, inspector. You need not call them. And it will not be necessary to molest Bombarrassi. He evidently put you on the right track.

"Mr. Glade, I have been a trader all my life. I am now going to try a trade with you; that is, I will tell you the truth and in exchange I want you to believe me.

"I did blackmail the duchess, but I did not kill her. Would not that be a contradiction in lawless strategy, a betrayal of criminal sagacity? Why should I destroy the source of such revenue? With the exception of the male members of this family, I probably had more to gain by her continued existence than any one person."

"True. The old fable of the goose and her golden eggs applies, I suppose. Still, blackmail is a felony, and if she had exposed your extortion you'd have been imprisoned. It isn't unreasonable to imagine you might have killed her to stop her making charges, after what she said on the porch."

"I was never afraid that she would go to the authorities."

"Why not?"

"Because no matter what was to happen to me I would have exposed the truth about Solito. She knew that. And for all her revolt against things out here, the duchess would not have wanted the press and the public to enjoy that scandalous morsel."

"Yet Bombarrassi tells me that, toward the last, she was indifferent about the consequences of such an exposure."

"Bombarrassi is wrong, I think. It is true that she was about to precipitate a major scandal, herself, by divorcing Beauty and naming Enid Forbes. But I am positive that she would not have cared for the world to know about Arturo Benini and Solito, if only to shield her son from the stigma of illegitimacy. Personally, I fail to see why society attaches any stigma to that, but it does."

"And having learned her secret you didn't hesitate to use it?"

"That is right. I shall not try to extenuate it, but, after all, it was not as if I were bleeding some one who could not afford it. Her fortune was not greatly damaged by my inroads on it."

"Your theory, then, is the richer the victim the less the offense."

"Really, inspector, is my philosophy important in your efforts to solve the death of the duchess?"

"I'm not sure about that. Your philosophy might be quite important, so far as the future is concerned. I mean, unless I stop you, what's to prevent your blackmailing Solito, on the theory he'd pay you to protect the memory of his mother?"

"I had thought of that tonight, I confess. Especially, since I am sure his mother has provided generously for him in her will. But now that you know all about me, and I have admitted the lesser felony to clear myself of homicide, it is not likely that I shall carry on in that direction. I am afraid Solito is invulnerable now."

"Since I've got you in a revealing mood, I want to know how you learned about Solito. I've an idea Bombarrassi can tell me if you start lying again."

THE captain shrugged, but his swarthy face was a lemon hue. Glade felt he feared the Italian maestro's version, and probably would tell the truth. The Mexican went on, and his voice was low and tense.

"You know, Mr. Glade, why I left Mexico. I have told you I was in Paris when the war began and that I joined the Escadrille to avoid being drafted. And I told you how I happened to meet the duchess at the Mexican embassy in Rome.

"I am a pretty observant man, inspector, and during the reception I was struck by her unusually affectionate manner toward her protégé. It seemed to me to surpass the ordinary interest a wealthy woman would feel for a promising boy whose career she is financing. The lad was strikingly handsome, and when, on my way to Como, I stopped in Venice to attend a concert being given there by Benini, I immediately observed an extraordinary resemblance between Solito and the famous tenor. I thought that at the boy's age Benini must have been another Solito, and that when he reached the great singer's age Solito would be another Benini.

"At the villa, where I arrived the next afternoon to spend two or three days, I was even more impressed. I saw that Solito resembled the duchess in several vague ways. Moreover, while Lady Elissa and Solito in no-wise looked like each other, yet both had certain strange, indefinable resemblances to the girl's mother. I was further impressed by the less guarded devotion which the duchess, in the privacy of her home, revealed toward the lad. And I was puzzled by the peculiar relationship between her and Bombarrassi, who was living in the villa, although Solito was now a pupil in the Conservatory in Rome.

"At first, the grotesque thought came to me that the duchess and Bombarrassi might have had an affair when they were much younger, say, before she had finished school and before the Italian, world famous as a musician, had become so grossly obese. Then I recalled that Bombarrassi and Benini had been inseparable in their youth and early careers, the Damon and Pythias of the music world—and I remembered that Benini had, until recent years, been at the Metropolitan in New York every season.

"And so, there swiftly came to me the conviction that Benini and the duchess had had a romantic episode, and that Solito was the illegitimate fruit of it. In that conviction, if it could be proved, I saw for myself a future entirely relieved of all anxiety about an income that would take the place of the one my father had provided before he had to flee from Mexico.

"I resolved to take a bold step. After all, if I was wrong I need never see the family again. That night Bombarrassi and I sat on the little pier, where he had taken me to see the stars reflected in the lake. Suddenly I turned to him and said: 'Solito

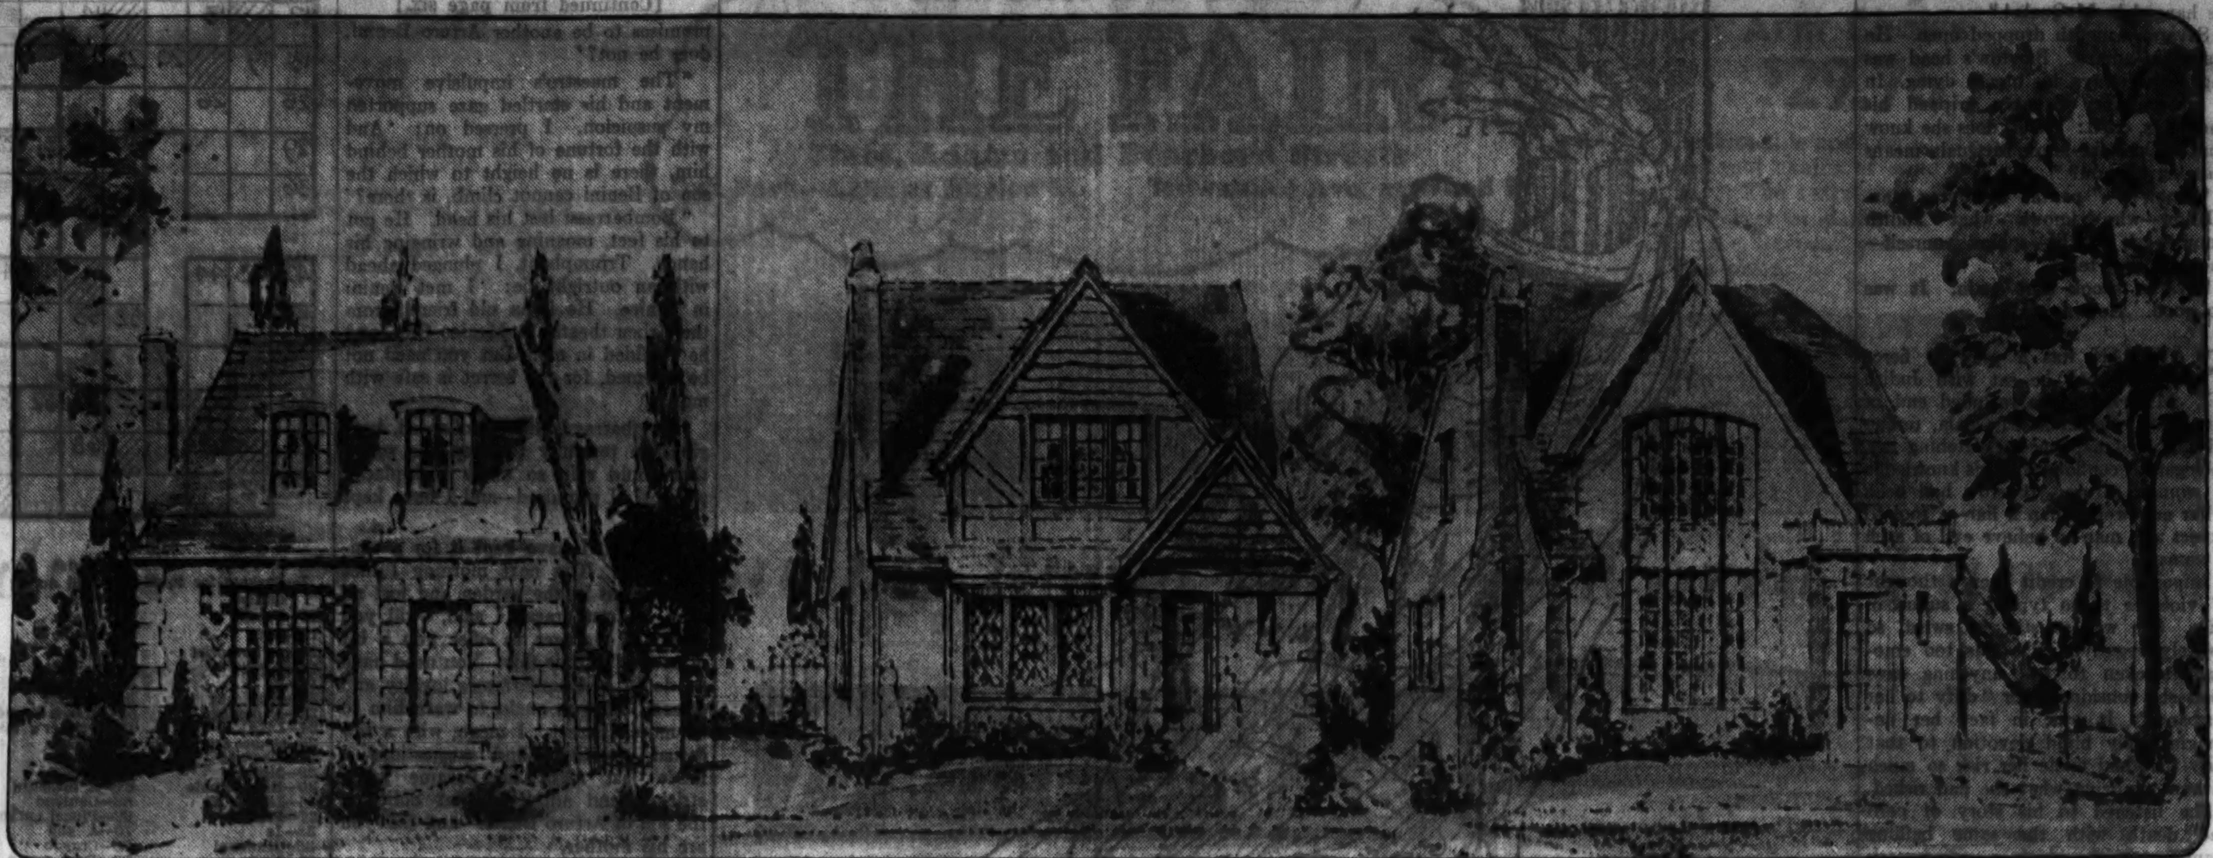
Architect Designs Three Types of Small Homes for Thirty Foot Lot

Each Dwelling Can Be Built Under $6,000

You Can Choose a French Plan, an English Cottage or a Colonial House.

(Proofs of floor plans of these houses may be secured by sending stamped, addressed envelope to Louise Bargelt, Home Builders' Editor, The Chicago Tribune.)

By Louise Bargelt.



With exterior walls of solid brick, the quaint and quiet little French type of home, shown at the extreme left, has cubic contents of 18,000 cubic feet, a general overall of 24 feet by 28 feet, and may be built for approximately $5,400. The architect of all three of these homes is Chas. A. Kristen, 5611 West Lake street, Chicago. Second, an English type of home is so designed that it may be built on a thirty foot lot, if necessary. The floor plans of these five room dwellings are identical, but the exteriors follow different architectural styles. Here the first floor walls are of solid brick with stucco, half timber and rough boards in the gables. Third, the suggested exterior construction of this colonial home is of frame with wide drop siding painted silver gray or cream. Note the large windows, two stories high, which create the effect of spacious rooms behind them. The roofs of all three dwellings are to be of asphalt shingles. Wise economies prevail throughout.

TODAY the home minded family is shown the perspectives of three different house exteriors, all with the same floor plan. Small homes, these, designed for TRIBUNE readers by a well known Chicago architect. They are of interest to the man with a narrow lot, as well as a wider one, since by skillful planning and arrangement these dwellings can be placed on lots only thirty feet wide.

Should one incline to the quiet, quaint French type—it is here. Or perhaps one prefers the ever sturdy, popular English cottage exterior, or holds strong preference for some adaptation of our American colonial. The exteriors, as seen, are conservative but varied, and each is pleasing in its own particular fashion.

The purpose back of these designs was to create a home suited to the needs of a family of three or four people; to create, besides, an interesting home with character, not a mere box, which could be built for a sum under $6,000.

This has been effectively accomplished by the architect, Charles A. Kristen, 5611 West Lake street, Chicago, who has designed these five room dwellings for lots only thirty feet wide. The cubage of each house is 18,000 cubic feet, the overall 24x28 feet, and the approximate cost of each one is $5,400.

Walls Vary.

The little French home has walls of solid brick; the English type has solid brick on the first floor and stucco, half timber and rought boards in the gables, and the colonial has suggested construction of frame with wide drop siding painted silver gray or cream. As can be seen from the perspective, this last mentioned house has a large window fully two stories high which suggests large and spacious rooms behind it. All there roofs are to be of asphalt shingles.

The floor plans are excellent for homes of such modest dimensions. There is a small vestibule in front to save direct entrance into the living room and yet of such size as not to detract space from the rest of the house. At the right is a clothes closet with outside window.

At the left is the living room, 19 feet by 12 feet, and an open stairway to the right leading to the second floor. This room has large windows at the front and small windows at each side of the fireplace at the far end of the room. Beyond, connected with an arch, is the dining room, 12 feet by 14 feet, with windows on two sides. Next to this is the kitchen, 9 feet 6 inches by 10 feet, with a large sink under window, cabinets on both sides and space for range and mechanical refrigerator specified on the plans. The living room is separated from this kitchen by a small hall with a lavatory on one side and large service closet on the other.

Two Bedrooms.

The second floor has two good sized bedrooms, the master bedroom, 14 feet by 11 feet 6 inches, and the second bedroom, 10 feet 6 inches by 12 feet. The master bedroom has an unusually large closet with outside window and the bath is carefully arranged and includes built in tub, pedestal lavatory, and linen closet.

The basement is fully excavated and contains space for the well equipped laundry, the heating plant with coal room, which latter room can be used for storage if oil or gas is employed as fuel, fruit cellar, and space for game room or children's play quarters.

Below are brief outline specifications, the same for all three houses excepting where otherwise specified.

Masonry.

The entire basement is to be excavated. Floors to be of cement, exterior foundation wall of concrete up to grade, and walls above of brick with face brick all around. Carpentry.

All joists and framing lumber to be of yellow pine or fir. All exterior lumber to be white pine, cypress. All exterior doors and frames to be of white pine. The colonial house is to be sheathed with shiplap, then covered with heavy tar paper and then 1 inch by 10 inch drop siding applied.

All fixtures to be of white enameled iron except water closets, which are to be of china. Install a 30 gallon automatic storage type gas hot water heater in basement. Laundry trays.

Heating.

The homes are to be heated with a one pipe steam system, using a standard make round type boiler as selected by the owner, and slim type radiators. Radiators to be gilded and basement piping painted. The heating plant to be designed to heat all rooms to 70 degrees when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero.

Electric Wiring.

All wiring to be done in accordance with the National Board of Fire Underwriters and local authorities. All wiring to run in enameled metal conduit. Switches are to be of the toggle type and convenience outlets and base plugs of the duplex type. Contractor to install the electric fixtures and allow $75 for the selection of same by owner.

Miscellaneous.

The following items are included in the general setup as allowance: Window shades, $35; screens and combination doors, $35; rough grading, $40. Insulation to be as owner can afford and is not included in quoted price.

As the materials of the three houses are different, the prices for each will vary slightly around the $5,400 mark. Or using this cost as a fixed basis, the finish will differ somewhat, allowing a greater sum for the colonial home.

As the basement is to be finished completely so that a game room may be had, it may be suitable to note here a very new and up-to-date use for this space. The new name for it, "cinema room," reveals its new purpose.

With many children at the present time enjoying the possession of the little, inexpensive moving picture machines, and older family members finding pleasure in the larger machines and even in television outfits, the scope of amusements within the home appears to be an ever widening one. And certainly, when the home is a small one, there is no better place for games, athletic apparatus, indoor sports of all kinds, including the ultramodern moving pictures and television, than the basement area.

Architects are beginning to include elaborate cinema rooms in their new and costly homes, with conventional small stage, heavy draw curtains, roller screen, audience seats, fountain bars—not beer bars—and even electric refrigeration, dumb waiters and storage space, all by way of providing a dramatic spot for a jolly family gathering.

In a Small Home.

But the informal, cozy, inexpensive "cinema room" is quite as possible in the basement recreation area of a small house, as well as large. Furniture can be moved back and space provided for the roller screen on a small table, and all manner of stools, small chairs and perhaps discarded sofas from "realms above" utilized for audience habitation.

Casual and jolly, one of these rooms I have seen recently. And what good times family and friends did have therein! Incidentally, since a television outfit could not be afforded, an old phonograph was used to furnish music between picture and an ingenious top on the laundry trays created the fountain bar aforementioned!

When one plans a room below grade for play purposes, its floor immediately becomes important. One thing it must be, and that is dry. Decoration comes second. It can look as well as one can afford, for the purpose for which it is to be used.

Natural earth moisture causes a certain amount of dampness and one way of avoiding this is to add to the concrete at the time of mixing integral damp proofing. This proceeding is not expensive and is well worth its cost. One inch of waterproofed granolithic finish on top of the concrete slab gives still further protection.

Where any hydrostatic pressure has to be overcome with waterproofing material, a waterproofed cement thick enough to combat the pressure exerted may be coated on the floor. If serious work of any sort has to be done to make a basement a suitable place for recreation purposes, a dependable waterproofing company should be called in and their advice taken.

Concrete may be painted and marked off like tile; not ordinary paint, however, but specially prepared paint for the concrete. Asphalt tile is a reliable standby and can be safely cemented down to an ordinary dry concrete basement floor.

Variety of Floors.

If one wishes to go to the expense of setting a wood underfloor on cleats above a concrete subfloor, one can then lay linoleum, rubber tile and various other excellent flooring materials for playroom and recreation purposes. In fact, almost ny type of floor can then be used in the basement that one uses above grade. And there are many delightful decorative possibilities in basement floors of brick, stone flagging, slate or clay tile.

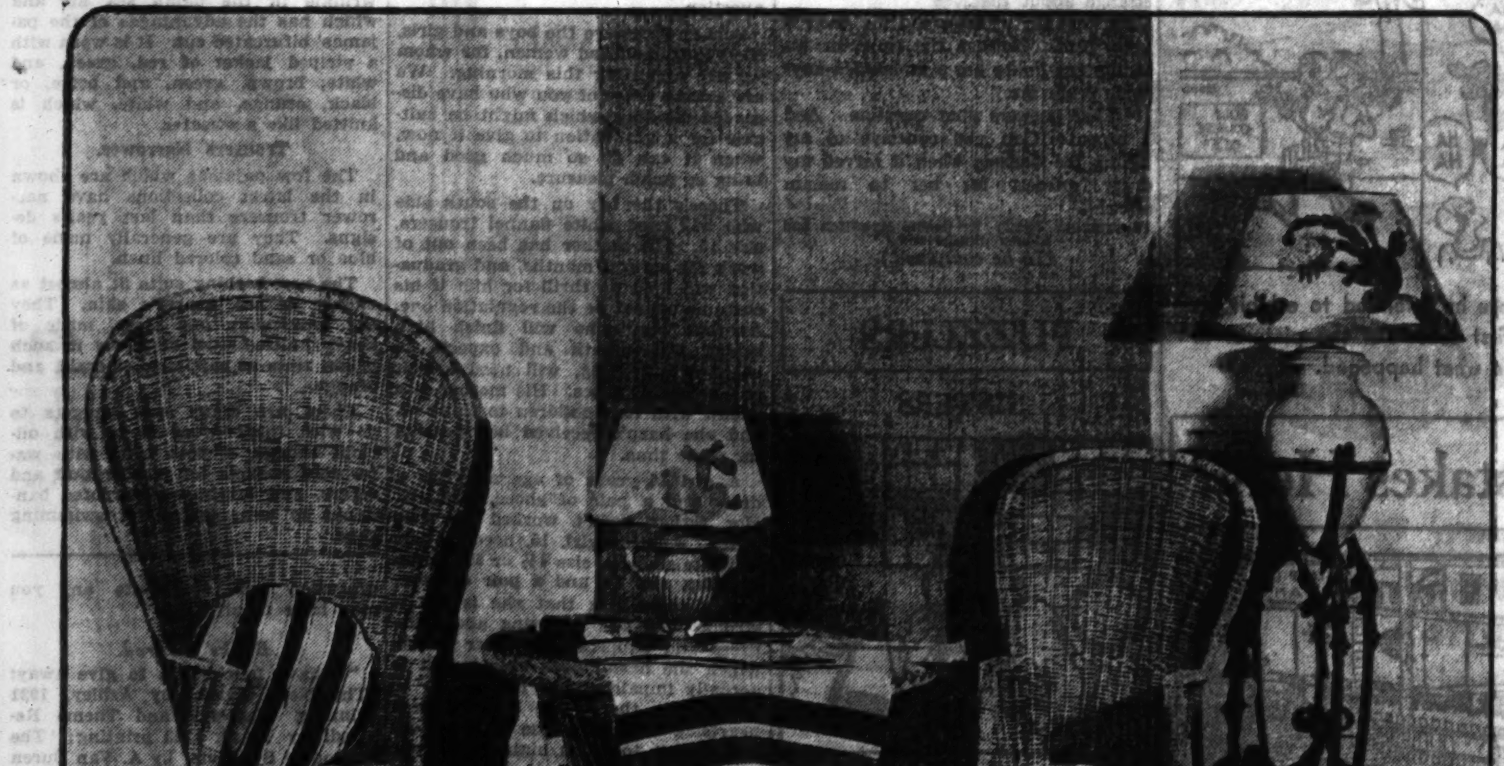
In the homes shown today certain fixed standards have been satisfied. Because they are two story homes, the living and service portion are separated from the sleeping portions and money has been saved in roofing surface, excavations and foundations.

One disadvantage some women claim to the two story house is that stairs and halls must be kept up, cleaned and serviced. In this instance, however, with economy of various sorts, and effort as well as money kept in mind, the halls are purposely small. Upstairs the hall serves bath and bed rooms.

Another point: these houses have been designed primarily as small houses. Sometimes it is not wise to imitate the beauty of a large home by reproducing it in too reduced dimensions, for the same elements that made for loveliness in the more spacious dwelling do not have the same charm, dwarfed and repeated in the smaller one. Of course, there are exceptions to all rules. Just a word of warning to any one who sees a large, effective mansion and hopes by drastic reduction of cubage to achieve the same effect. It may be done—and again a mere dwarf of a house may be the result!

Willow Furniture from England at Home in Our Gardens

Devonshire Hand Woven Chairs and Tables Are Picturesque, Practical and Weatherproof



These two Devonshire willow chairs are shown with an hour glass table of the same interesting ware and with colorful imported lamps. There is not a single nail in this furniture.

By Edith Weigle.

NOW that summer is no longer just around the corner, but in the front yard and the back yard and in every nook and cranny of the garden, one's thoughts turn to exterior decoration. Nine months in the year we think of interiors; rugs, lamps, draperies, furniture; three sunny, breezy, fragrant months we think of our outdoor living rooms, of bird pools, martin houses, trellises, and of all the comfortable summer furniture that makes lounging under a leafy tree or in the shadow of the porch a delight.

Gorgeous as are formal gardens with old stone fountains, lily pools, wrought iron gates, sculpture, and flowers growing in mathematically precise beds, nothing can possibly be more charming than a wild flower corner, a little plot of perennials, an old fashioned planting in the small, riotously colorful fashion of the informal garden. And of what good is all this loveliness if there is not a chair or bench at hand from which to admire at leisure?

We saw a perfectly delightful array of furniture, pottery, and stone sculpture, the other day, designed expressly to make outdoor living an artistic joy. At a well known importer's were chairs, tables, and settees from England [and the English do love their gardens]; terra cotta urns, old stone sculptures, bird baths, benches and colorful pottery from Italy, and tile top tables, and naive bright yellow. hand decorated chairs from Spain.

For over twenty-five years this company has been importing pieces of Devonshire willow furniture which seem almost the perfect choice for the garden. They are made of natural willow, woven by hand. There is not a nail or a joint in them and, of course, they are therefore very flexible and springy. The greenish brown bark is left on the supple twigs that create chairs and tables and we're told there is practically no "wear out" to this furniture.

It is both comfortable and light, this last quality making it ideal for outdoor use where it may be so easily transferred from one place to another. It is, also, quite impervious to rain; in fact, it thrives in a moist atmosphere.

There's an amusing story about some of this Devonshire willow furniture that found a home on Cape Cod, where it became so happy that it sprouted. During a dampish summer little green shoots started right out of the back of the chairs.

A huge willow basket mounted on a rough hewn frame makes an unusual wheelbarrow for the garden, and one that is as English as muffins and tea. Also in this same ware comes a variety of wide, shallow baskets with arched handles, ideal for the feminine gardener who goes out while the dew is on the roses to cut the choicest blooms for her flower vases. There are willow bowls for fruit, too. And an original garden aid, a wheeled garden basket which is the ideal thing to use when cutting dahlias, gladioli and other long stemmed flowers.

When used on porches braided rush rugs from Belgium are particularly suitable for use with the Devonshire furniture. And brightly colored, sunfast and waterproof pillows may be used in the chairs, while striped Italian crashes and linens are attractive on the tables.

From Seville come painted chairs and settees with woven rush seats, bright accents on the porch or lawn and smartly different from the usual sort of thing. A new feature is the simple, unpainted chair, entirely hand made in Spain, and with a typical rush seat. This can be painted or stained to follow any color scheme.

The finished Spanish furniture is decorated in our own decalcomania fashion on red, green, or yellow backgrounds and is some of the jolliest we've seen this year or any year.

For a more formal garden are the gleaming white cast iron chairs and settees in the Directoire manner, with their open back, the center splat showing a figure of Diana, the goddess, and above, four crossed arrows. The seat is straight grained ash stained a pale yellow. This chic little set comes also in apple green.

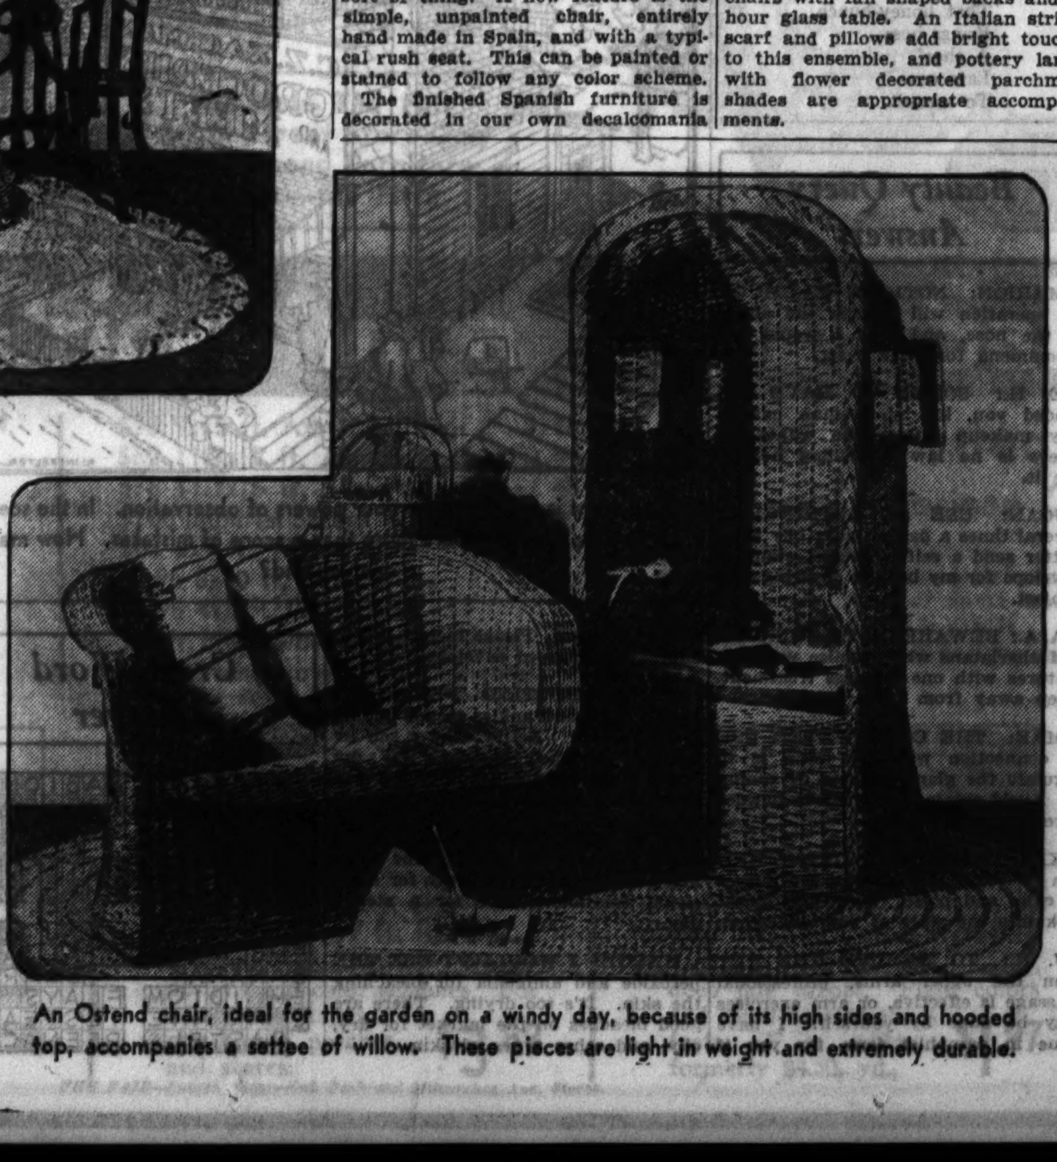
The photographs today show two groups of the Devonshire willow summer furniture. In one is the famous Ostend chair, so well known in Europe, with its high sides, back and hooded top and two little windows on either side, an ideal place to read on a windy day for you are entirely protected from the gale.

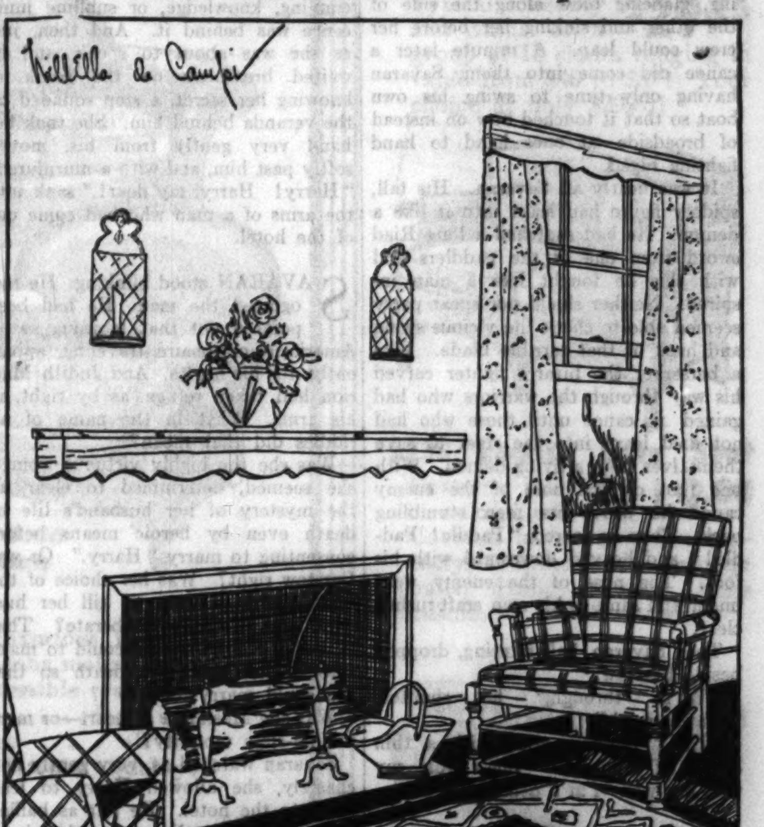
The settee shown with the Ostend chair is low and comfortable with lots of "give" in it. And one of the Belgian rugs, mentioned above, is used on the floor.

The other group shows two willow chairs with fan shaped backs and an hour glass table. An Italian striped scarf and pillows add bright touches to this ensemble, and pottery lamps with flower decorated parchment shades are appropriate accompaniments.



An Ostend chair, ideal for the garden on a windy day, because of its high sides and hooded top, accompanies a settee of willow. These pieces are light in weight and extremely durable.

Peasant Furniture and Rugs of Other Lands Used in Simple Home



In this living room a rug made in Finland is used with French Provincial furniture and with copper accessories. The effect is charming.

Informality Is the Keynote in This Country Retreat That Is the Delight of the City Dweller.

By WillElla de Campi.

INFORMAL apartments in the city or unsophisticated little country houses offer the home decorator a marvelous chance to go whimsical. Combinations of peasant styles in furniture, gay colors in fabrics, and amusing notes in decorative accessories are singularly enjoyable and suitable to unpretentious abodes. They represent a certain undefinable hominess which can hardly be duplicated in any other type of decoration. Their very naturalness allows carrying out individual ideas and unusual effects with complete ease and gratification.

Up to the present time we have seen and heard little of the development of arts and crafts in Finland. One of the most interesting exhibitions held recently in New York was the first Finnish Art Craft exhibition at the Roerich museum. In addition to paintings by distinguished Finnish artists there were fine examples of wood carvings humorously executed by Hannes Auterre, tapestries, cloth mosaics, hand woven linens and drapery fabrics, ceramics, a few examples of metal work, and a comprehensive display of the famous ryijy rugs.

These rugs, some designed by skilled peasant artisans, some by recognized contemporary artists, are entirely made by hand. The process dates from the 16th century, ryijy rugs having been used then in many of the crown manors and castles as wall hangings, covers, blankets, and tapestries.

Nearly all examples are pictorial or floral in pattern, and all are done in exquisite color blendings. Several models designed by Lyyli Anhava show themes from the "Kalevala," Finland's national epic. One by Hannes Auterre is illustrative of Kivi's book, "Seven Brothers." Another portrays a Finnish marriage scene.

Today's illustration shows one of these rugs placed before the hearth in a French provincial living room. The design is carried out in dull blues, cinnamon brown, a coppery rose tone and deep ivory. Placed at this strategic point, the rug acts as a determining factor in the room's color scheme. Walls are finished in rough plaster tinted deep ivory.

Draw curtains at the windows are of percale in a characteristic small floral pattern on a cinnamon brown ground. Wooden valance boards topping the curtains are stained walnut to match the woodwork.

A provincial arm chair at one side of the fireplace is upholstered in blue and ivory linen. Its companion piece is covered with a homespun material in cinnamon brown, ivory and blue plaid. Occasional tables conveniently placed about the room hold decorative lamps and interesting small objects.

Over the mantel shelf is a large bowl of deep ivory pottery with copper decorations. Candle sconces flanking the bowl are of copper, hand made by Finnish craftsmen. Blue candles have their light caught and reflected in the most fascinating manner in the curved and beautifully designed copper backing of these sconces. Accessories of the sort so effectively used in this French provincial room would be equally at home in an early American or any simple peasant setting.

American colonial furniture, complemented by peasant accessories, is cleverly employed in the furnishing and decorating of a boy's room. Washable wall paper is white with a widely spaced geometric pattern in red. At the windows are glass curtains of coarse meshed net in white. Draperies are colorful plaid gingham.

Red glazed chintz with a sprinkling of multi-colored flowers upholsters a comfortable arm chair. All the furniture is maple. On the low post bed there is a hand woven coverlet in yellow and white, which may be easily and most satisfactorily laundered.

Brass lamps on the night stand and on the little desk have parchment shades banded in red and black. The walls are enlivened by primitive wood carvings, and there is a large braided rug in black, yellow, red, and a little white on the dark stained floor.

and then, "Why McQuala—why not the Malaria colony?"

"It seemed to us the more likely place."

"Us!" the man said thickly. "You mean my wife. It was she who fixed on McQuala?"

"Does it matter? She's there waiting for you now."

"It matters; by God, it matters. Did she arrange it—did she?"

"Yes," shrugged Savaran. "Sensibly, she thought——"

He stopped because Rod Barstow had thrown back his head in a long yelping laugh. Savaran cursed him. The Gongoda war canoes were very close.

"Stop that, you fool," he snarled. "It's death for both of us."

"Death!" shouted Barstow and he laughed again. Then he sprang to his feet and screamed in Swahili, "Savaran is here! Savaran is the Hazramut in this canoe! Up Gongoda and slay Savaran!"

The lean adventurer's quick shot foot landed Barstow windless in the bottom of the canoe, but the damage had been done. With a roar of war cries and a flash of paddles the Gongoda canoes came at them.

SAVARAN'S eagle glance flamed as he shouted his own paddlers to furious effort. His pistol swept up and spoke and the steersman of the nearest canoe fell. The craft yawned and they were by. It spoke again twice and again helmsmen among four canoes hurling forward in a bunch died, so that the four craft crashed together and dropped astern in inextricable confusion. Then a great canoe lunged at them, meaning to ram. Savaran held his course until the last moment, then flung over his own steering oar and circled and slipped behind her before she could check way.

Arrows and hammered slugs from trade rifles came screaming over. A paddler fell forward with a shaft through his heart. Savaran tossed the corpse overboard and kicked another man to the paddle. A slug took the lean adventurer himself in the shoulder with the blow of a club, flinging him on his face. Barstow, making signs of surrender, leapt for the steering sweep, but Savaran was up, had smashed the traitor into the bottom of the canoe, and was in command again in a flash.

A canoe swerved to lay alongside. Savaran also swerved, lunging a grinding, glancing blow along the side of the other and sinking her before her crew could leap. A minute later a canoe did come into them, Savaran having only time to swing his own boat so that it touched bow on instead of broadside—at once hand to hand fighting raged.

It was nearly all Savaran. His tall, spidery figure had leapt into it like a demon. He had snatched a long Riad sword from one of the paddlers and with this he fought like a man inspired. Neither shield nor spear parry seemed able to check the vicious swing and hack of that terrible blade. Like a berserker the bizarre fighter carved his way through the warriors who had gained his canoe until those who had not died leapt into the river to save themselves from a living demon. With one foot on the nose of the enemy canoe he drove its men stumbling back. Then he roared, "Paddle! Paddle!" and heaved downward with his foot. The nose of the enemy went under and sank as his own craft rushed clear.

Then Savaran, half fainting, dropped beside Barstow.

"We're through," he shouted. "We've won!"

"No!" Barstow cried with a thin cackle of laughter. "She's won—my wife has won—I'm a dead man!"

SAVARAN steadied his reeling wits and looked at the man, saw the wound a shovel-headed spear had made in his chest—Barstow was, indeed, a dying man.

"She's won," Barstow croaked again. "Clever Judith—you'll be able to tell her I am definitely dead."

Savaran, dizzy with pain, mad with rage, cursed him.

"You mean-gutted dog! If you'd only played straight I'd have had you alive and safe with her in two weeks."

"How she would have hated that," jeered the dying man.

"You fool! Can't you even yet realize the wonder of a woman like your wife?"

"I am!" Barstow scoffed. "For the first time. I never could make head or tail of Judith before, but now I do. She's as clever as a snake. What other woman could have taken so much pains to make certain of my death?"

"She'd hardly have picked on the one man in all Africa who could save you if she wanted that," scoffed Savaran.

"She sent the man who had sworn to kill me," said Barstow.

"How was she to know I had sworn it?" the fierce man asked, narrow eyed. "Or did she?"

"Who knows what she knows or what goes on behind that smooth, sphinx face of hers?" shrugged Barstow and Savaran scowled at this echo of his own first impression. "But she didn't tell you my name was Barstow, and that's queer."

Savaran glared at that. That was queer—if Judith Marrion had told he would never have gone and she'd never have learned whether her husband was alive or dead. That is, if she had known—but even Barstow was not certain she knew his name—and even if she had for what end would she deceive, in the hope of his shooting Barstow? Unthinkable! He could see her now, calm, sweet, gentle, negative—suspicion of such a creature was absurd.

"It's your rat's mind working," he snarled. "Vicious yourself, you can only think evil of others. The devotion of that noble woman is wasted on you. You can't see that it is her very womanliness that made her risk all to save you and bring you back to her side."

"In McQuala," Barstow gasped. "Darn—queer—idea of safety—making you bring me to—McQuala."

"What's wrong with McQuala?" demanded Savaran.

"I'm—I'm—wanted for murder in McQuala," panted the man. "If you—all else—failed her—I was bound—to be hanged in McQuala!"

Savaran's mouth dropped open. He stared in amaze. Barstow's head was sagging sideways, his breath dying. In a sudden fury Savaran gripped his shoulders, cried: "But, does she know that? Does she know McQuala means hanging for you?"

"Know——" panted the dying man. "Know—who knows what Judith knows—ask of the—sphinx yourself—she—she may tell."

Savaran shook him again. It was no good. He was dead.

SAVARAN was a prey to fierce doubt until he sat with Judith Marrion at the secluded end of her hotel veranda in McQuala, telling all that had happened. Watching her, he regained confidence in his knowledge of woman nature. Barstow had been a liar and worse than a liar—a fool to expect any man to believe evil of such a woman.

Impossible to credit even a thought of violence to so typical a suburban wife. She was so still, so sweet, so entirely negative. She was too emotionless even to feel anything save what she considered her "duty to her husband." It was, in fact, her unimaginatively blind devotion to that duty that had made her risk so much without realizing what she had risked.

She listened to his story of peril and death with the same baffling blankness with which a commuter's wife hears of her husband's adventures in a subway breakdown. Only at the end did she touch her eyes with her handkerchief and say: "Terrible—terrible—so close to the end, too."

"Don't grieve too much," said Savaran. "You did all you could—and I, too—and perhaps it was for the best. Barstow was a broken man. His life, had he lived, would have been a misery."

"Yes," she said, holding out her hand. "It ends—perhaps for the best. I can't thank you enough, Mr. Savaran."

He took her hand, but he was looking at her queerly. He realized that he had called her husband Barstow and not Marrion and that she had shown no surprise.

His keen eyes frowning, he said, "Did you know that your husband's name was Barstow?"

She looked at him with her smooth, reticent glance and not even he, Savaran, could read whether surprise, fear, cunning, knowledge, or sublime innocence was behind it. And then, just as she was about to speak, and he waited breathless on the brink of knowing her secret, a step sounded on the veranda behind him. She took her hand very gently from his, moved softly past him, and with a murmured: "Harry! Harry, my dear!" sank into the arms of a man who had come out of the hotel.

SAVARAN stood blinking. He recognized the man. He had been pointed out that morning as an American millionaire traveling, apparently, for his health. And Judith Marrion had taken refuge, as by right, in his arms. What in the name of all riddles did that mean?

Was she the highly virtuous woman she seemed, determined to clear up the mystery of her husband's life or death even by heroic means before consenting to marry "Harry." Or was Barstow right? Was her choice of the man who had sworn to kill her husband and McQuala deliberate? That is, had she done all she could to make sure of her husband's death so that she could marry "Harry"?

Was she Messalina at heart—or mere middle-class morality?

Savaran watched as, very gently and chastely, she allowed Harry to lead her into the hotel. He felt as baffled by her as even ordinary men had been baffled by Mona Lisa, their wives, and the sphinx. Like Barstow, he felt that no man ever would know what passed in the mind of Judith Marrion—no, not even Harry.

Wedding Note.

(One that the society editor missed.)

She paused upon her winding way
To toss below her white bouquet.

"The girl who gets it," some one cried,
"Will be the first to be a bride."

"O, yeah?" the lovely bride exclaimed,
And carefully, it seemed, she aimed.

She wound up for a forceful throw,
And then with punch and speed let

promises to be another Arturo Benini, does he not?'

"The maestro's impulsive movement and his startled gaze supported my suspicion. I pressed on: 'And with the fortune of his mother behind him, there is no height to which the son of Benini cannot climb, is there?'

"Bombarrassi lost his head. He got to his feet, moaning and wringing his hands. Triumphant, I plunged ahead with an outright lie: 'I met Benini in Venice. He is an old friend, from the Arbeu theater in Mexico City, and he confided in me. But you need not be alarmed, for the secret is safe with me.'

"Bombarrassi almost collapsed, begging me tearfully to keep the secret that could ruin so many high-placed persons. I promised—and I have kept my word.

"That is, I have kept it for a consideration. The next morning I met the duchess in the garden and lost no time. 'Your grace,' I said, 'will you permit a stranger to offer you a bit of counsel? It is this: You need have no doubt of Bombarrassi's loyalty and esteem, but you ought to warn him to be more discreet. I mean, with a few casual questions and suggestions I made last night he became panic stricken and admitted that Solito is the son of Arturo Benini—and that you are his mother.'

"PALE as a dead woman, the duchess swayed in the brilliant sunlight, staring at me with haunted eyes.

"'Madame, I must return at once to Paris,' I said. 'I find I cannot remain longer. And to shorten this unpleasant scene, I wonder if I might beg you to speed me on my way back to possible death at the front with your blessing—and a small, temporary loan to meet obligations I fear I shall find awaiting me in Paris?'

"She did not move. She just looked at me. When she spoke at last, her voice was a whisper: 'Blackmail it's to be, isn't it, captain? Blackmail! How you learned, I do not know. I can't imagine. But it isn't important, is it? Bombarrassi—you must have tricked him. I know him, and he must have stumbled into a trap. Blackmail! Very well, I'll help you—meet your obligations. Since you have put it on that plane, may I rely on your silence?'

"I bowed. 'Your grace places an unhappy construction on the whole thing,' I said. 'But since between us it has reached that plane, please be sure I shall never talk—while I have those obligations to meet.'

"'I understand,' she said bitterly. 'I understand perfectly. Obligations! Obligations you'll never be able to pay in full. Very well. I agree. It's just another installment on my old debt. What lovely things men are!'

"I waited a bit until she had regained her poise, and then we discussed the matter. I suggested she deposit five thousand pounds twice a year in her bank in New York, for transfer to my old Midland account via Mexico City. I thought that would cover the transaction quite skillfully, and I had no way of knowing Scotland Yard had ever even heard of me. After the armistice I met Beauty in Paris, and I have been out here often since. Presently no one saw anything strange about that.

"I kept my promise and the duchess kept hers. Neither the duke or his family nor Solito has ever learned anything from me.

"That answers your question. And I repeat: Can you conceive of my killing the duchess when it served my every interest for her to remain alive?"

A Friend in Need

Graduation Will Offer New Humiliations to Many Young People if They Are Not Provided with Appropriate Clothing.

By Sally Joy Brown.

THE month of June is dedicated to a number of things. It marks the official opening of the summer season, it brings with it the first roses of the year, it has been set aside as the month for weddings, and to a number of young people it means that day to which they've been looking forward—graduation day!

You remember, no matter how many years ago it may have been, the thrill, the excitement, the sweet sorrow of those last weeks at school and the great amount of preparation that actually preceded the important day. For the girls perhaps the item of greatest consequence is that of the dress selected for this momentous occasion. Of course you'll remember it all, and you'll realize, too, the heartache which must be in store for the girl who can't have a new dress.

We've had a lot of letters from just such young people these last few weeks, and they include pleas for clothing for the boys who will be receiving diplomas this month, too. In the majority of the cases the father, or the widowed mother, as the case may be, is out of work. Perhaps they are being supported by charity entirely, and, as their allowance permits only the barest necessities, an expenditure for clothing is out of the question.

And so these are the boys and girls, the young men and women, for whom we are appealing this morning. We are asking those of you who have discarded clothing which might be suitable for a graduation to give it now, when it can do so much good and bring so much pleasure.

There's the boy on the south side who will need white flannel trousers, size 16. His mother has been out of work for several months, and graduation will hold no thrill for him if his costume cannot be the regulation one. Another boy, who will finish high school this month and expects to begin job hunting, will need a suit and a pair of shoes. His mother is a widow with four children to think of, and she hasn't received her pension for some time.

A girl 16 years of age asks for a dress and a pair of shoes, size 4½. Her father hasn't worked for two years. Another girl, 15, needs a pair of white slippers, size 4½ or 5; a dress and slip, size 16, and a pair of hose. Her sister writes that she is not a strong child and worrying about the dress and slippers and other things which she hasn't been able to get is actually impairing her health.

And then there's the letter from a heartsick mother whose 17 year old son expects to finish high school, but whose clothing is so old and so worn that he is ashamed to appear in the classroom. Imagine how he will feel at the graduation exercises if some one doesn't present him with a decent suit. His size is 34; shoes, size 8.

There are more letters, each of them telling a similar tale, and I hope we can do something about them. It doesn't seem quite right that there should be anything to mar the happiness of this great day which the boys and girls have been looking forward to for so long. Any one who has presentable clothing to give, in sizes which would fit a grammar or high school graduate, can do much to make the occasion the joyful one it should be. Let me hear from you if you can help.

Request for Popular Song.

"I am eager to get a copy of the song, 'If I were a Millionaire,' from Gus Edwards' revue of several years ago. I haven't been able to find it at any of the music stores, and I wonder if you could get it for me through your column? L. H."

If your collection of sheet music dates back to the time when this piece was in vogue perhaps you can satisfy the request of this correspondent. She'll be grateful for it if you no longer want it.

Lack Hymn Books.

"I am pastor of a small church in northern Wisconsin. We are in need of hymn books. The depression has made it impossible for us to buy any and I wonder if you know of books which have been discarded by some church. We'd be pleased to get them? R. S."

The church or Sunday school about to invest in new hymnals may be able to save a few of those they will be discarding for this little country church. Both the pastor and his congregation will appreciate any you may have to give.

Books Offered.

"I have four books to give away: 'The New Civics,' by Ashley, 1921 printing; 'Sentence and Theme Revised,' by Ward, 1923 printing; 'The Photoplay Synopsis,' by A. Van Buren Powell; and 'Cicero's Orations and Letters,' by Johnston and Kingery. "A. B."

The student interested in any of the above subjects would do well to write me for the books this reader offers. Perhaps you'd like some of them for your library. At any rate, I shall be glad to hear from you.

Request for Stroller, Clothing.

"My baby is getting large enough for a stroller, and I have no way of getting it for him. Do you think one of your readers would have one to give away? We are in need of clothing, too. The oldest boy needs a suit, size 38 or 40, and shirts 15½. He has no socks but has had to wear a pair of my stockings. The other children are boys, 12 and 10, and a girl, 10. I wear shoes, size 6 or 7A. The children and my husband have been sick and we have had no income for over two months. MRS. H. D."

In addition to the usual suffering which comes of this depression, the D. family has had a great deal of illness with which to contend. Can you relieve some of the worry the poor mother has had by giving the clothing which is so badly needed?

Beach Aprons Take Place of Popular Pajama

Cannes Must Turn Down Coney Island Vogue, Say the Couturiers.

PARIS.—(AP)—The beach pajama style is dying in the salons which gave it birth.

The beach apron—with a short skirt instead of long trousers—is taking its place.

"Since Coney Island took them up, Cannes has turned them down," is the designers' explanation of the pajama scarcity in their new collections. "Whether America clings to pajamas or not, the women who set the styles on the Riviera want something different."

The new beach apron is as young as a little girl's pinafore, which inspired its design. It has a gored skirt, with a hem about 12 inches from the sand, made on wrap around effect which buttons in the back, and a short sleeved or sleeveless bodice which is sometimes as barebacked as a bathing suit.

Made of Linen or Piqué.

Beach aprons are made of linen or piqué in such quiet tints as beige, cream, or white lightened with splashes of bright red or green.

Another version of the new beach mode is made of red and white polka dotted linen with a suspender top and a skirt as long as pajamas.

A third is a divided suspender skirt of heavy white wool which will not wrinkle in the damp sea air and which has the advantages of the pajamas' bifurcated cut. It is worn with a striped jacket of red, green, and white; brown, green, and beige, or black, orange, and white, which is knitted like a sweater.

Trousers Narrower.

The few pajamas which are shown in the latest collections have narrower trousers than last year's designs. They are generally made of blue or sand colored linen.

The new bathing suits fit almost as closely as the wearer's skin. They are universally one piece, made of heavy knitted wool or jersey in such bright tints as sapphire, emerald, and orange.

There are many new gadgets to go with them—wood clogs with oilcloth thongs, oilcloth belts with waterproof pockets for powder puff and cigars, and bright waterproofed bandanas to wear instead of swimming caps.

"And what is so rare as a day in June . . . ?" Then, if ever come—national conventions. . . .

But before the conventions, come we, sprightly and gay, with our apt to be disputed opinion as to the six "best" pictures of the month before.

"THE MOUTHPIECE"—Did you see it? And if so, didn't Warren William intrigue you in the title rôle of a shrewd and conscienceless criminal lawyer "mouthpiece" of gangland? A good, an exciting movie in which Mr. Williams gave, I thought, "a poseless and electric performance. He absolutely dominates the action and makes his most exaggerated deeds perfectly believable. . . . Ladies' laurels go to Aline MacMahon. She's immense. . . . Sidney Fox is sweet and earnest. . . . Jane Cowl's Newest Vehicle Is Uncertain in Its Development

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—In her long search for a comedy worthy of her beauty and her talents Jane Cowl has come upon one called "A Thousand Summers" that has caused her considerable anguish and given her no little trouble. This is a Candida drama in the sense that, like Mr. Shaw's classic model, it concerns the love of an ardent though shy youth for a lady fifteen years his senior.

The trouble has been caused by a recurring doubt in the mind of the star and that of her director, Shepard Traube [I have a feeling the author, Merrill Rogers, was consulted only now and then] as to what should be the proper attitude for a lady of 36 who finds herself in love with a collegian of 21 en route to Paris and the art life.

One week they have permitted the lady to rescue the youth from the predatory clutch of a buxom barmaid, to whom he has turned in his fevered state after being dismissed by his ideal. Another week they have permitted the boy to fly with the barmaid and with her suffer the disillusion of all his adolescent dreams of the beauty of love.

The New York version, I assume, is

No New Shows in Sight for Chicago Stage

Convention Guests Will Find Most Theaters Have Folded Up for Summer.

By Charles Collins.

ALTHOUGH the period of the national conventions is close at hand, and pilgrims from the forty-eight states of the Union will soon come swarming into town, the Chicago stage has resolutely folded itself up for the summer. Last night's closing of George White's "Scandals" at the Civic Opera house left "Counsellor-at-Law" as the sole survivor on the list of playbills, standing alone in its glory and striving to win the season's championship for length of run.

Tonight a little comrade will spring up to stand by the "Counsellor's" side and hold the bridge for a while—a comedy called "Love on Approval," which finds lodging at the Playhouse. That's all there is; there isn't any more—as Ethel Barrymore moaned unforgettably years ago in a play named "Sunday." To complete the picture of a great city almost barren of theatrical amusement, it should be added that there are no prospects in sight. For the next three months, the stage will be practically an obsolete institution in Chicago.

A Phantom Revue.

Last Sunday the playbills carried the promise of a revue called "Clowns in Clover" for a première at the Grand Opera House June 12. I have run my pencil through those few lines of print, making a "delete" sign with a neat flourish. Lew Leslie, impresario of "Rhapsody in Black" and other song-and-dance entertainments, issued this announcement in good faith, assembled a cast with Walter Woolf as his star, collected his songs and sketches, and started rehearsals.

But a few days ago his plans were halted by demands from the Actors' Equity association for the posting of a bond to cover the transportation of the company back to New York—a provision by which the actors' union protects its members against the perils of being "stranded." So, for the time being, "Clowns in Clover" is merely a case of wishful thinking. The show may be staged, and it may come here; but at this week-end, it is another case of hope deferred. A good guess at its opening date, when, as and if, would be June 26.

Erratic Management.

The foregoing remarks were written with a reservation to the effect that before this issue of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE reaches its readers, Mr. Leslie may come up smiling—his "Equity" bond posted, his worries calmed, his praiseworthy resolve to send Chicago a show stronger than before. Things like that are characteristic of the contemporary theater. Its eccentricities of management, its overnight changes of mind, its helter-skelter conduct, are the despair of its chroniclers.

Gone are the days when the American stage, under the discipline of a genius in organization named A. L. Erlanger, sent hundreds of plays on national tours with the precision of clockwork, never breaking a date or missing a train. Times have changed, and "show business" has gone gaga.

Reasons Why.

The situation in Chicago, with no theatrical productions in sight for the entertainment of the convention crowds, is so unusual that it deserves

And here is Miss Ann Harding, who has just divorced her husband because she loved him so. "Westward Passage." State-Lake.

Heads up are those of James Dunn and Peggy Shannon, who grace "Society Girl," at the Chicago theater. Isn't it nice to see such smiling faces of a mornin'?

Just a tip or two on makeup, as demonstrated by Mae Clarke, who has a featured role in the Palace theater's current film entitled "Night World." Judging from the highly interested audience here depicted, the tips are really good!

QUESTION OF MUSIC AT RAVINIA THIS SUMMER MAY BE SOLVED BY A CONCERT SERIES

By Edward Moore.

WANTED, an organizer.

Ever since Mr. Eckstein sent out word that circumstances over which he had no control, or words to that general effect, made it impossible for him to continue the opera season at Ravinia this summer, loud wails have been arising up and down the length of the north shore of Chicagoland.

Some of them have merely expressed distress that so lovely a musical observance as the Ravinia season should be wiped out. Others, slightly more articulate, have conveyed the idea that Mr. Eckstein in sending out his notices to his former subscribers and guarantors did not indicate that matters were in such desperate shape, and that if he had there would have been a better response. To which Mr. Eckstein maintains silence, merely reiterating his former statement that public response was not of a nature to justify him in going on with the season.

Opera is, therefore, out. That does not necessarily mean, however, that Ravinia will have to stay closed for the summer. If north shore residents want a season of music, good music, the best music in the world, they can have it with little trouble. It can be made by the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

A Live Question.

Ever since Mr. Eckstein made his unhappy announcement there has been interest in a number of influential quarters, the Orchestral association among them, in finding an outlet for this fine body of players during the summer. Not a great deal could be done at the time, for just then diplomatic pourparlers were taking place between the Orchestral association and the Chicago Federation of Musicians and there was no certainty that there would be a Chicago Symphony orchestra by the time that summer came.

That possibility has passed by. The

WHEATON PLANS 100TH BIRTHDAY FETE ON JULY 4

Washington Bicentennial to Be Observed, Too.

Wheaton, that charming residential suburb 25 miles to the west, is to stage a triple celebration Fourth of July week-end. It will observe the 176th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, also the bicentennial of George Washington and the 100th anniversary of Warren L. Wheaton's pilgrimage from Pomfret, Conn.

Tentative plans announced yesterday by Dick Cook, appointed general chairman of the celebration by the Wheaton - Washington bicentennial commission, indicate that this will be the biggest and most impressive event ever staged in the history of the town. The centennial occurs July 2, for it is just 100 years ago on that date that Mr. Wheaton chose this site for a settlement. After him came such hardly pioneers as his brother, Jesse, Erastus and Judy Cary, Rufus Blanchard, and John B. Turner.

20,000 Visitors Expected.

"This will be the first real celebration of Independence day since 1918," said Mr. Cook. "It will undoubtedly be the biggest and best Wheaton has ever staged. Usually the town is deserted over the Fourth, but this year we expect to have 20,000 to 30,000 people on hand."

Mr. Cook has already obtained the hearty coöperation of city officials and business men's organizations in helping put the event across. It is his intention to make Saturday, July 2, the big day of the celebration in order that business men may profit thereby. The day will be featured by a parade, military and historic, and an address by a nationally prominent speaker, perhaps Gen. Charles G. Dawes. In the evening there will be a mardi gras program.

Relics to Be Displayed.

"It is the plan of the commission to have at least 25 or 30 American Legion drum corp bands in parade on that day, along with floats prepared by business houses of the city, as well as neighboring towns," said Mr. Cook. "The Illinois Drum Corps association of the American Legion, which comprises 75 per cent of the finest drum corps in Illinois, has promised its fullest support to make this parade one of the finest and largest ever held in northern Illinois.

"Merchants have also agreed to give window space for the display of Du Page county relics," Mr. Cook continued. "For the mardi gras Saturday evening Front street will be roped off and the carnival spirit will reign supreme."

The second day of the celebration, Sunday, July 3, will be set aside as "go to church" day. The Wheaton Ministerial association will direct church homecomings and plan picnics for the afternoon.

Elephant to Humming Bird.

The Fourth of July will be featured by a mammoth pet parade under the direction of Lawrence Hattendorf and the Boy Scouts and Mrs. Olive Meredith and the Girl Scouts. Everything from an elephant to a humming bird is promised for the procession. In the afternoon there will be baseball games between the various business men's organizations, church organizations, and posts of the American Legion, a swimming meet, and a kite flying contest.

The three day celebration is to reach its climax in a mammoth historic pageant Fourth of July night on the Wheaton Community High school athletic field. Dave Thompson and the Wheaton Drama club are planning a performance portraying the important phases of Washington's career.

On General Committee.

Assisting Mr. Cook on the general committee are Mrs. John W. Guild, regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution; M. B. Taylor of the First National bank of Wheaton, B. O. Thompson, president of the Wheaton Drama club; O. B. Dold, commander of the American Legion; W. C. Vining of the American Legion, and Benjamin Arnold.

Mayor William H. Caldwell and Joseph Sauer, Thomas Kellogg, Hugo Karstens, and J. A. Bedal, members of the Wheaton council, are giving their support.

FIRE PANTOMIME TO BE GIVEN AT PARK DEDICATION

Oak Park Completes Last Unit of System.

Three thousand Oak Parkers, appreciative of the new recreational facilities provided for the southeast section of the village, are expected to turn out Friday evening for the dedication of the James Barrie playground, Lombard avenue and Garfield street. Completion of this play center marks the fulfillment of the building plan outlined by the Oak Park playground board at its inception 11 years ago.

The dedicatory program, scheduled to start at 8 o'clock, will include short addresses and an original pantomime written especially for the occasion by Miss Josephine Blackstock, director of village playgrounds. Dr. H. J. Stewart, chairman of the playground board, will introduce Willis McFeeley, president of the village; William P. Churchill, trustee; Miss Martha Bauerle, principal of the Irving school; W. J. Watts, and J. J. Maloney, playground commissioners; William J. Hamilton, superintendent of Schools; Dudley C. Meyers, commissioner of public works; Arthur J. Keating, president of the South Oak Park Improvement association; J. R. Batchlor of the National Recreation Association of America; and V. K. Brown, superintendent of recreation of the south parks system.

24 Girls in Pantomime.

Twenty-four girls will take part in the pantomime, a legendary tale of the birth of fire. Geraldine Crowley, once queen of the May on the Oak Park playgrounds, will take one of the leads as Night. In the supporting rôles will be Patricia Drum, Ann Rose Golden, Betty Robertson, Muriel Brown, Marie Bockholt, Frances Ramsey, Alice Helen Clarkson, La Vergne Morrissey, Ida Laitchin, Ruth Jorgensen, Marion Jean Akin, Gayle Atkinson, Miriam Henry, Dorothy Herrmann, Janet Cannon, Doris Franks, La Vergne Joa, Jane Roach, Edith Urban, Dorothy Anderson, Helen McCreary, Martha Roche, and Virginia Roche.

The play is under the direction of Miss Lilith Lidseen, dramatic director for the playgrounds, and Miss Anna Aigress. Miss Ardath Janes will be the pianist and Miss Eleanore Ribbet, the soloist. Miss Ruth Larsen and Miss Vera Rethberg will accompany on the flute and cello.

Finest in Play Facilities.

The playground offers the newest in recreational facilities. It provides a wading and swimming pool, a special section for play for children under 6 years, and another section equipped for dramatics, handicraft, cooking, and dancing lessons, and neighborhood club meetings. Murals in the play rooms have been painted by Miss Ethel Soears of the Art institute. Miss Harriet Chadwick and Edward Beraneck will be the leaders in charge of the play center.

"This playground, named after the famous writer of children's stories and plays, will receive a warm welcome in the southeast section of the village," Miss Blackstock said yesterday, "since the neighborhood has worked for it for years. The South Oak Park Improvement association and the Parent-Teacher association of the Irving school each worked hard to obtain it."

This Week in the Garden

Monday, June 6.

Continue to plant out tender bedding plants. These include the canna, coleus, geranium, and similar plants.

All seeds germinate quickly at this time. Many perennials may be sown now for fall planting. Delphinium seed does best if it is soaked between wet blotters for 36 hours, or until the seeds swell.

Keep the walks and drive in good condition by raking, and eradicating the weeds.

Disbudded roses will give larger flowers.

Tuesday, June 7.

Water iris well after the flowering period. A top dressing with bonemeal is good for iris. Do not use barnyard manure. Do not let the fuchsias stand in full sun, for they do best in partial shade. They are excellent for shady window boxes, and the trailing sorts do well in the front of the box and in baskets.

Plant food will aid many lawns. The grass grows rapidly and the roots penetrate deeply if copious water is applied.

Pinch out the tops of bedding plants to make them bushy and compact. Potted cyclamen placed in a frame outdoors and shaded with burlap makes a stronger growth. Feed the amaryllis bulb to promote a strong growth and store up food for next season's bloom.

Wednesday, June 8.

Do not permit the red spiders to get a foothold, for they are difficult to eradicate. Syringing with water, under pressure, is one way to keep them down. Spraying is also a means of killing them.

Make cuttings of poinsettias now. Take the cutting with a "heel." Look out for rose bugs. Go over the plants each day, shaking the flowers so the insects fall into a can of kerosene. The same treatment saves the peonies.

Thursday, June 9.

Sow kale, brussels sprouts, cabbage, celery, and cauliflower. The young plants, when large enough to handle, should be transplanted into other beds and set four inches apart.

Before applying a mulch to the strawberries protect the fruit from dirt.

Friday, June 10.

If they have finished flowering, the early spring shrubs such as forsythia, weigela, and Japanese quince should be pruned. The best method is to cut out entirely several of the old branches.

The climbing roses should be looked over carefully and any heavy new growth should be tied into position. Pruning should be left until they have finished flowering.

Saturday, June 11.

Do not neglect to cultivate the garden often. This not only keeps the weeds in check but preserves the soil moisture for the use of the plants. If this is not done, the moisture from the soil will quickly evaporate. After every rain, cultivate.

It is a good plan to go over the tomato plants, reducing the number of unproductive vines and supporting those left to carry the crop. It is immaterial what system is used to support the vines.

CRANE MUMMERS CLUB TO PRESENT "UP IN THE AIR"

"Up In The Air," a farce by William F. Madden, will be staged by the Mummers club, honorary drama society of Crane Junior college, Friday evening at the Goodman Memorial theater. This will be the première performance of the piece.

The plot deals with the adventures of a group of United States army flyers standed in a wilderness. Leading rôles will be taken by Bud Hinkle and Miss Bernice Rea. Other members of the cast are Duane Dahlen, Charles Kolar, Miss Mary Lou Bartholf, Art Higgins, Miss Edith Lawrence, Sam Statland, Miss Alice Claeys, Dan Robertson, Walt Eisenstein, Russell Logan, Alfred Frishman, Sherman Marks, Abe Berkson, Ross Beckham, Sam Spinka, David Malkemus and Maurice Kaplan.

Mr. Madden, who has been in charge of theatrical ventures at Crane for the past ten years, is directing the production.

St. Isaac Jogues Parish to Hold Annual Picnic

The third annual picnic of St. Isaac Jogues parish in Hinsdale will be held at the parish park, York road, Hinsdale, June 11 and 12. The Women's club of the church will serve a dinner on these days under the supervision of Mrs. J. H. Clark, president, and Mrs. F. J. Hauser. The Rev. Thomas Tormey is pastor of the church.

DEMAND ACTION IN FALL ON NEW STATE BASIC LAW

Civic Federation Asks Vote on Convention Call.

A referendum at the November election on a proposal to call a constitutional convention to revise the state's basic law, particularly in respect to reapportionment, will be sought by the Northwest Federation of Improvement clubs. This was announced last week by Richard J. Weurst, chairman of the constitutional convention committee of the federation.

This action was decided upon at a recent community meeting sponsored by the federation as the initial step in its movement for a state convention. A resolution adopted at the meeting provides for the appointment of a committee to study and report on the advisability of submitting such a proposal to the voters. The resolution points out that there has been no revision of the Illinois constitution since 1870, and that there are provisions which have long since outlived their usefulness as a result of changing factors, particularly in respect to population and taxation.

Speakers' Bureau to Be Formed.

Efforts to crystalize sentiment in favor of a constitutional convention will be made through a speakers' bureau to be organized by the federation, Mr. Weurst said. All civic and improvement organizations throughout the northwest side will be appealed to, as well as groups in other parts of the city.

In emphasizing the need for reapportionment, Mr. Weurst pointed out that in view of the fact that Cook county contains approximately 4,000,000 of the state's population of 7,607,684, its proper ratio of representation should be seven additional senators and 21 additional representatives, making a total of 26 senators, and 78 representatives.

Other questions, aside from reapportionment, that demand consideration, Mr. Weurst pointed out, are revenue and taxation matters, banking legislation, and problems relating to education, labor, public works, corporations, and coöperative associations.

Plan Conference of Lawmakers.

A conference of all Cook county members of the general assembly will be called in the early future, Mr. Weurst said, to enlist their support in the movement for a state convention.

Community organizations in all parts of the city are to be asked to crystallize sentiment in their respective communities. These, it is planned, will be followed by a central meeting at which all sections of the city will be represented and which will be addressed by city and county leaders.

AUSTIN LIBRARY EXHIBIT PIECES BITS OF HISTORY

Photographs Give Idea of Old Days.

An opportunity for residents of Austin to compare the modern community life with that of pioneer days is being afforded at the Austin branch library, Race and Central avenues, where Miss Maude Blake, librarian, is arranging an exhibit of local historical data.

MISS MAUDE BLAKE.

Miss Blake points out that many Austinites have in their possession interesting material for such a collection which should not be lost to posterity. In the material desired for care and protection of the library are photographs of vanished landmarks and of Austin pioneers, old maps, and any sort of souvenir that will lend to the piecing together of an accurate story of days gone by.

The Austin branch has been arranging its local history collection for some time and now has several scrap books of clippings indexed and made workable for library use. This material includes photographs of the dummy line train which served Austin 40 years ago, of the student body of Austin school in 1884, a birdseye view of Austin in 1888, a stage coach during its stop on Lake street in 1840, the Austin Philharmonic in 1897, and a view of Austin boulevard 15 years ago.

E. M. Pray, 5623 West Lake street, has presented to the library an 1884 map of Austin, and Austin directories of 1897, 1903 and 1907.

H. K. Oram, 213 North Menard street, has contributed an 1874 map of Austin, believed to be the earliest in existence.

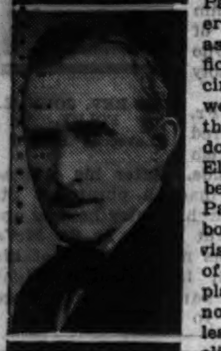
STARTS MOVE IN DU PAGE TO END TOWNSHIP RULE

Wendt Proposes County Board to Save Cash.

Petitions asking support of a plan which, it is claimed, will materially reduce the expenses of the Du Page county government as well as increase its efficiency will be circulated this week throughout the county. Theodore Wendt of Elmhurst, a member of the Du Page county board of supervisors and sponsor of the plan, explains that it is nothing more nor less than the elimination of the township organization in the county, an organization which has grown unwieldy and can of itself levy taxes almost without limit.



THEODORE WENDT.

Cook county has eliminated all township elective offices. Mr. Wendt proposes a similar form for Du Page county with the elimination of the 36 township supervisors, and other officers, and the substitution of a county board of three commissioners and an executive officer or county agent who will in effect act as business manager. He thus proposes to save the county approximately $150,000 annually and increase its efficiency.

Calls Response Satisfactory.

To carry through such a plan it is necessary to place the proposition on the ballot at the general election in November. Petitions signed by one-fifth of the voting population are required to place this proposition on the ballot. Mr. Wendt explained yesterday that in obtaining a few scattered signatures to his petitions last week he was gratified to see that the response was satisfactory among the taxpayers with opposition registered only by politicians and office holders.

"The present township form of government is the result of the original organization in 1850," said Mr. Wendt. "It is not adapted to modern methods and easy communications. It also fosters the 'gumshoe' type of politics which puts forward in the mind of the politician the question of how much the taxpayer can stand."

Du Page Has 157 Officers.

Mr. Wendt went on to explain that Du Page county with its township organization has 157 elective and appointive officers. These include 36 supervisors, 9 town clerks, 9 assessors, 9 highway commissioners, 28 school trustees, 11 school treasurers, 34 justices of the peace, and 31 constables.

"All of these for a population of 91,998," said Mr. Wendt, "and of this number 74,678 are governed by village and city governments, an overlapping of governmental and taxing bodies that is unwieldy and unnecessarily expensive. The 36 supervisors alone receive in salaries $12,630, while under the commission form the amount would be $3,196. In addition to this the three commissioners would act as the board of review which should concentrate responsibility for a more equitable assessment than is possible under the present system. In 1931 taxes of $433,500 were levied and spent by the townships of Du Page county."

Mr. Wendt has prepared a chart which purports to show that $12,200 would be saved in election expense under the commission form of government, that salaries of town officers would be reduced approximately $33,000, and that at least $40,000 would be saved in the construction of roads and bridges.

RIVER FOREST FIREMEN BUILD A ROCK GARDEN

Village Smoke Eaters Go Creative.

BY PHYLLIS HAMMOND.

Doughty firemen of River Forest have forsaken the checker board. Gone is their yen for horseshoe pitching and pinochle games. No longer does the billiard table lure them of an evening nor the bowling green of a sunny afternoon—the boys have turned to the finer things of life. Their chests inflated with civic pride, the combined artistic and muscular efforts of these suburban smoke eaters have produced a rock garden worthy of the name.

A rather unattractive plot of ground between the town hall and the fire station caught the interest of the squad.

"Visions of beautifying this lot with such a garden have occupied their minds in spare moments between card games and alarms, all through the year," commented Chief John Matthew.

"The cost of rock gardens of this caliber frequently run into several thousands of dollars," he continued. "This one was built without cost to the village. The work was started in January and completed this month."

All Materials Donated.

All materials going into its construction were donated.

"An arrangement of evergreens, pine, spruce, and juniper was made possible through the kindness of the River Forest park board," said Chief Matthews.

W. A. Littlewood of River Forest was the designer and spent much of his time in the supervision of landscaping, laying of the rock, and working out of unusual lighting effects. The department, which labored through several months upon its important addition to the beauty of the community is composed of Al Zay, Ed Doring, Fred Jannisch, and Oscar Milchoefner.

Resembles Work of Nature.

The rock, limestone shale, is arranged to resemble the natural effect of the wearing away of the stone by constant dripping of water. Tuffa rock decorations grace the borders of three pools set one above the other.

In the two upper pools, unique submerged red and white electric lights cast soft rays of color up through the water.

An old Dutch windmill adds a bit of old world atmosphere. In the background forsythia, Persian lilacs, and sumac have spread budding branches, which promise cool shade for the flowers planted below. Pansies, creeping phlox, columbines, sedums, pinks, hardy alyssum, hydrangeas and others compose the floral plantings.

Oscar Milchoefner, expert hose wielder, expressed the sentiments of his associates when he said: "This little gardening has gone a long way with us firemen. The kind of hose we are used to handling is not the type you use for keeping the grass green, but let me tell you, you may be sure of one thing—our rockery is one thing in town that won't catch fire."

CLUB OFFICERS

Mrs. Vernon Cox, 113 Ashland avenue, River Forest, has been elected recording secretary of the Austin Woman's club.

HARLEM TRACK DAYS RECALLED BY LANDMARK

Old Timer Tells Story of Clubhouse.

"You ask about that big white building with its cupola and broad verandas?" sighed the old timer in response to the inquiry of a motorist along Roosevelt road in the vicinity of Harlem avenue. "I suppose the old fashioned frame structure, surrounded by open acres, does puzzle the modern generation. The city has crept out to it and far beyond, but the old clubhouse of the departed Harlem race track remains a landmark to remind many of us of glamorous days gone by.

"The fact that racing has been revived on the west side, with the Hawthorne track opened several years ago and Sportsman's Park opened this year, helps me to bridge the gap to the time when old Harlem drew its big crowds. There was a town of Harlem then and it was 'way out in the country. That was up to 1904 when the track closed.

McChesney, Imp Favorites.

"Todd Sloan was among the jockeys who rode at Harlem, and McChesney and Imp were two of the favorite horses I recall. Harlem became popular just after the Garfield park track was closed in the city."

"I can remember when stables almost entirely surrounded the 123 acres for the mile track. There was a grandstand that burned and a later one that was torn down about 1918, but the clubhouse, and a mighty gay place it was, has survived.

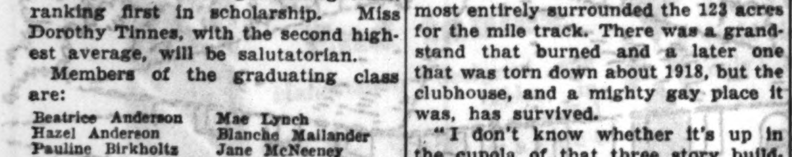
"I don't know whether it's up in the cupola of that three story building still or not, but for a long time they kept a blackboard of the racing program of the track's last day.

Cleopatra Statue Survives.

"That statue over there in the rock garden? That's another survivor of the nineties. It's 'The Death of Cleopatra.' It was here during the racing days. They brought it out from Harry Varnell's saloon in the loop. It's of Italian marble and was said to have cost $10,000.

"John Condon was sole owner of the track when it closed and it still belongs to his estate. Along in 1907 a 24 hour automobile endurance test was held on the track. In 1910 the place was turned into a golf club. The course covers the old track.

"Well, you can say this about these 123 acres. They've kept much of their identity, despite the city's encroachment. First wild prairie, then farm, then race track and finally golf coarse—it's still open country. No, they wouldn't be apt to build that sort of a clubhouse today. Too much lumber, too much paint, and what would be considered unnecessary frills."



BY JAMES GAVIN.

A WHITE horse—attached to a wagon—was passing in front of a fruit store at 5802 West Madison street. "Whoa," shouted the driver. He jumped out, took a case of oranges, and threw them on the rig. "Giddap," he bellowed, and the white horse galloped away. S. L. Eckle, the manager, called the police and reported the robbery.

David Sacks, 1540 South Central avenue, put his wrist watch in the locker room while he went swimming. Now he has no watch. Some one broke into the locker.

Lawrence Dillon, 632 South Austin boulevard, went to 3601 Indiana avenue to collect some rent. He got the rent but lost his topcoat. It was taken from his automobile.

Mrs. Leo Mekler, 1530 North Kedzie avenue, hung her fur jacket on a clothesline on the rear porch for an airing. Now it's gone. A sneak thief took it.

MRS. BENJAMIN FRIEDMAN, 4517 West Jackson boulevard, was wishing it was only a dream. She hid her ring, valued at $1,250, and $45 in currency under her pillow. At 4:45 a. m. she heard a noise. Opening her eyes, she saw a man standing in front of her with a revolver in his hand. He took her purse from the dresser, the ring, and money.

Raymond Decner, 1743 West 35th street, was varnishing his car in the garage in the rear of his home when he was overcome by the fumes. Squad 1 of the fire department revived him.

Mrs. Lena Deutsch, 1544 South Turner avenue, was partly overcome by gas when the wind blew out the flames while she was heating a kettle of water.

HERMAN ADLER, 1114 South Homan avenue, played the part of the good Samaritan. He listened to the sad story of a stranger he met on the street and invited him to his home. Herman stepped out to look for a job for the stranger. The latter also stepped out. He took with him $56 and four rings.

John Kairis, 2638 West 40th street, was painting the home of James Mullin at 3856 Archer avenue. The ladder slipped. John's right leg was broken.

David Rosenfeld, 4008 Grenshaw street, a furrier, was taken for a ride by three bandits. They robbed him of $10, his watch, coat, and hat. They took off his shoes, but David pleaded and they gave them back to him. However, they refused him car fare.

Mrs. D. J. Madigan, 150 North Mason avenue, reports a burglar entered her home through the bathroom window and took $60 and jewelry valued at $3,000.

TELLS HOW RADIO MAKES SCHOOL MORE EFFICIENT

Inspires Creative Work, Principal Says.

The radio system installed in Washington school, Maywood, is proving its worth as a real and practical aid to education, according to Mrs. Pearl Pierce, principal.

"The arrangement of having radio facilities in each class room, as well as in the gymnasium and hallways, with controls and microphone in the principal's office, is ideal," says Mrs. Pierce. "It enables the principal to bring into the circuit any or all class rooms for a program from outside or she can arrange to have talks given from the office for one or all classes."

Music for Marching.

"The phonograph attachment gives to the school the music to which the pupils march at opening and closing of each session. To the pupils are brought world events, word for word instruction from leading educators, and the best in art, literature, and music.

"These radio programs," said the principal, "inspire various forms of creative activity. Subjects may be selected related to the class work being done in various grades. During each broadcast the teacher uses the blackboard or whatever visual aids are available, and at the close of each program the classes review the material that has been presented.

Increases Efficiency of School.

"It has been most satisfying to watch the success of the experiment," says Mrs. Pierce. "Aside from the educational value, the radio system offers efficiency of coöperation between principal and teachers and between principal and students. It has proved a time saver as well as another step toward accurate business administration. The school has received an advantage from its new radio system for which everyone who enjoys it is grateful."

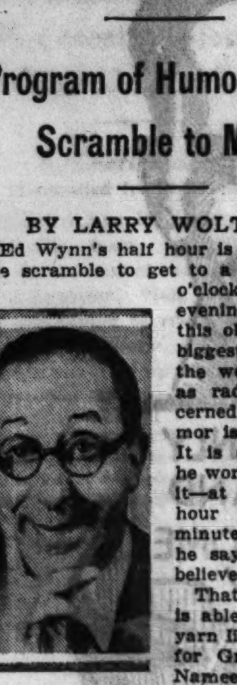
ED WYNN WORKS HOUR FOR EVERY MINUTE ON AIR

Program of Humor Worth Scramble to Mike.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.



ED WYNN.

Ed Wynn's half hour is well worth the scramble to get to a radio at 8 o'clock Tuesday evenings. It gives this observer the biggest kick of the week, so far as radio is concerned. Ed's humor is rollicking. It is so because he works hard on it—at least an hour for every minute on the air, he says, and we believe it.

That's how he is able to spin a yarn like this one for Graham McNamee:

"Now first, you see, there was a ship crossing the ocean. And on this ship they had an entertainment in which all the actors and artists on board took part. Now, in the salon where they held this entertainment there was a parrot, Graham. But the parrot didn't pay a bit of attention to the entertainment. Just ignored it, until a magician came on.

"Well, the first thing this magician did, Graham, the first thing he did was to put a handkerchief over a salt shaker on the table and wave his hands. Then he lifted the handkerchief and—what do you think?—the salt shaker was gone.

"Well, this got the parrot's attention, Graham, and he watched carefully while the magician put the handkerchief over a glass of water. Then the magician lifted the handkerchief and the glass of water disappeared. This fascinated the parrot, Graham, positively fascinated him. So the magician covered the whole table with a big cloth and waved his hands again. And what do you think, Graham? The table disappeared.

"Well, sir, the parrot could hardly believe it. He just sat and stared while the magician threw the cloth over a baby grand piano and began to wave his hands again. But just then, Graham, just then there was a terrific explosion. When it was all over the ship was gone. There was nothing left, nothing except the parrot floating on a steamer chair and gazing at the spot where the ship had been.

"Suddenly up out of the water bobbed the magician. He waved his arms and shouted for help. Then he sank, leaving the parrot staring at the spot in the water where he had disappeared. A few seconds later the magician came up again, waved his arms, shouted for help, and sank. The parrot never took his eyes off the spot.

"For the third and last time the magician came up, shouted for help, waved his arms, and disappeared. The parrot didn't move. Eyes glued to the spot where the magician had disappeared, he sat watching for six hours. Then he took a last long look at the water and shook his head.

"'Marvelous,' he said."

A listener sent Allan Grant, W-G-N pianist, a hundred sheets of old time favorites last week and among the pile he found one of his own numbers, "A College Boy," written 'way back when. Allan turned the gift over to Fred Meinken, W-G-N's music librarian, who will catalog the numbers and file them away for use in making up musical programs. What does a radio announcer do when a bug decides to make his close acquaintance during a broadcast? Edward Smith, W-G-N announcer, had just such an experience while reading the "Digest of the News" at 10:30 one morning recently. The bug flew into the studio, landed on Smith's collar and then decided to explore. Ed tried to dislodge him with one hand while continuing with bits of news from THE TRIBUNE, but eventually the bug triumphed. Ed asked his audience to pardon him a moment, caught the insect, and then finished his reading.

SHOWING THE CUBS' BOSS

START CONSTRUCTION OF RADIO BOOTHS AT STADIUM TOMORROW

Construction of the booths and special broadcasting rooms for the Republican and Democratic national conventions at the Chicago Stadium will be started tomorrow. The Republican convention opens June 14 while the Democratic committeemen and women will gather at the big west side arena starting June 28.

Paul Gascoigne, who is supervising radio construction work and making all arrangements for the Republican national committee, will meet tomorrow with representatives of W-G-N, the National Broadcasting company, and the Columbia Broadcasting system to complete details on the construction of the booths.

The working booths will be located back of the speakers' platform in the mezzanine. In addition to these booths for announcers, special rooms are to be built under the speaker's stand for broadcasts of talks by special writers or political experts which are not to be given before the convention.

W-G-N is the only independent station to broadcast the convention. Most of the major stations of the country are to be fed either by NBC or CBS and there is some talk of a special independent chain of stations not now connected with either chain. W-G-N'S activities will be directed by Quin Ryan, general manager of the station, who has broadcast other national conventions.

APPLEBERRY DAY LEAVES HURLER PLENTY OF WOE

"Appleberry day" has a rather sorry aftermath for the big Posey county lefthander as revealed in the coming weeks' episodes of Big Leaguers and Bushers, W-G-N's humerous baseball sketch of two rookies winning their spurs on a major league diamond.

During the coming week Rube's troubles start over the fame he gained overnight for chasing an opposing player out of the ball park in an attempt to tag him out. Rube believes in finishing a job once is has been undertaken.

Then the automobile presented Rube by the delegation from his home, Pin Point, proves a real liability, both financially and otherwise.

As a climax neither Rube's mental facilities nor his Hurricane Hannah fast ball and his Dippsey Dew curve ball are functioning on his next call to the mound when he faces the slugging Cincinnati Reds and he is bombarded to the showers. It is certainly a full week for Rube.

Tommy Malloy continues to make major league history for a rookie, but his path of progress is not altogether smooth and his difficulties with his rival, Butch Grogan, become increasingly involved. Big Leaguers and Bushers is presented each Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evening at 9:30 over W-G-N.

THE MOYNIHANS LEARN SECRETS OF RADIO STATION

The secrets of a radio station, the writing of the script, auditions, microphone rehearsals—all of the interesting behind the scenes phases of the industry will be brought to light during the episodes of "The Moynihan Family" on W-G-N at 11:30 each week day.

Irene, the talented daughter of Mother Moynihan, really gets started in radio this week when she is given a part in the new script of Joyce Foster. Joyce, who is a continuity writer for the radio station, has at last sold her script to an ice cream company and managed to land a part for Irene. Irene quits her job at the hotel and is now launched upon her new career.

Ireene Wicker is heard in the rôle of Irene Moynihan, Kay Chase, who writes the script, takes the part of Joyce Foster, and Mrs. Mary Flynn is heard as Mother Moynihan.

HEALTH PERIODS ON W-G-N WILL BE CONTINUED

W-G-N will continue its health and hygiene periods during the summer months. At 11:50 daily speakers have presented the latest results of medical and psycological research for the last year.

Speakers for the Illinois State Medical society who will be heard each Tuesday during the month of June are Dr. Clarence K. Jones, Dr. Donald P. Abbott, and Dr. Harold I. Meyer.

Beginning June 16, and Thursdays thereafter speakers from the Illinois Society of Mental Hygiene will be heard. The speakers are Dr. Margaret W. Gerard, assistant clinical professor of psychiatry of the University of Chicago; Helen Totten of the Winnetka Public schools, and Helen L. Myrick, executive secretary of the society.

Dr. Johnston Myers to Tell of His Work for City's Poor

Dr. Johnston Myers, pastor of Immanuel Baptist church, will speak on W-G-N at 1:30 today, upon the relief work which is being conducted from his church, 2320 South Michigan avenue. Dr. Myers has been engaged in relief work for 45 years, and in his talk today and for several successive Sundays at this same hour, will outline practical measures for assisting those in need to get immediate relief. Dr. Myers' work came before the public last summer when he brought fruit and vegetables that were going to waste in Michigan to needy families in Chicago.

Special Orchestrations to Mark Melody Parade

Special orchestrations and close and novel vocal harmony will mark the line of march for today's passing of the Parade of Melodies, W-G-N and CBS, from 8:30 to 9 p. m. Conductor Harry Sosnik assumes responsibility for the unusual arrangements.

LUCK PLAYS BIG PART IN RISE TO RADIO STARDOM

Lightning Crash Started Col. Stoopnagle.

Maybe it was luck—

That Joseph Schenck, theater magnate, happened into a New York department store and heard Ben Bernie, wisecracking salesman, talk about $4.98 violins. Schenck, amused, signed Ben for vaudeville at $35 a week.

That lightning hit Columbia wires between Buffalo and New York and that Chase Taylor, continuity writer, and Budd Hulick, station handy man, created "Col. Stoopnagle and Budd" for local fans while workmen repaired the network gap.

That Morton Downey once sold phonographs for $15 a week and was paid only eight, forcing him to sing to live.

That nobody in the studio but Ruth Etting knew a song requested by phone at a Chicago station; that she sang it and the "listener" signed her the next day for her famous records. That Irving Berlin, who is particular about the way his lyrics are recorded, heard Ruth and brought her to Ziegfeld's Follies.

That Kate Smith took time off from a medical course at Georgetown university to sing at a Washington, D. C., benefit, was heard by Eddie Dowling and engaged for his show, "Honeymoon Lane."

That Arthur Tracy fell on his sword in an opera scene and attracted the attention of Gigli, who advised Arthur that his singing was better than his acting.

That Vaughn de Leath accepted a "blind date" at a New York party and that he was an engineer who took her to De Forest's pioneer station, where she sang that night as first lady of the air.

Quit Work to Study.

That the grass grows tall in the Hoosier state and that a home town friend first put Singin' Sam on the air to advertise lawn mowers.

That Nat Shilkret married a girl who was willing for him to quit work after the wedding to spend two years studying the ground work for his 1,000 compositions.

That John of the Four Mills Brothers couldn't buy or borrow a trumpet for a Negro orchestra and offered to imitate the instrument for half pay—thereby originating their vocal antics.

That Little Jack Little, as cheer leader at an University of Iowa football classic, yelled himself hoarse and became the whispering baritone.

That Howard Barlow, fresh from his father's lumber camp, found a buyer for the return half of his round trip ticket, raising a "grub stake" while he hammered at Gotham's music portals.

ORPHAN ANNIE TO HAVE HER BIG DAY TOMORROW

Tomorrow is the big day in Simmons Corners! The event the whole town has been waiting for—the end of the campaign to save the Simmons Corners school. And the prize for contributing the largest amount to the school fund will be awarded to Little Orphan Annie and Joe Corntassel, in the "Little Orphan Annie" episode to be heard over W-G-N and a network of NBC stations at 5:45 tomorrow afternoon.

Annie and Joe were almost robbed of the prize by old man Trimble's $1,000 contribution, but the meanest man in town helped them out by rewarding them for finding his tin box, the reward putting them ahead of him in the fund standings. No one knows as yet what the prize is going to be, and not only Annie and Joe, but thousands of listeners are anxiously awaiting the zero hour tomorrow evening when the presentation will be made.

Boys and girls who follow Annie's adventures every night, have also been aroused by Pierre Andre's announcements of a big surprise to come for all listeners, "the biggest surprise ever announced over the radio." The surprise announcement will be made tomorrow night.

MIDDAY SERVICE WILL CONSIDER CHILD TRAINING

The emphasis of the W-G-N midday services for the coming week will be placed upon religious training and education of children, coincident with the opening of vacation church schools in hundreds of church centers in Chicago. Beginning tomorrow the following speakers will be heard at noon: Dr. E. H. Schutz, pastor of the First Methodist church of Morris, Ill.; Tuesday, Mrs. Solomon Strouse, superintendent of religious instruction for Congregation K. A. M.; Wednesday, Rev. Father William J. Gorman, member of the board of charities of the Catholic church; Thursday, Dr. Emerson Bradshaw, secretary of the Chicago Council of Religious Education; Friday, Dr. Hubert Carleton, rector of St. Augustine's Episcopal church of Wilmette; Saturday, Dr. O. A. Benson, pastor of Salem Lutheran church of Chicago.

Greek Cooking to Be Discussed by Ida Allen

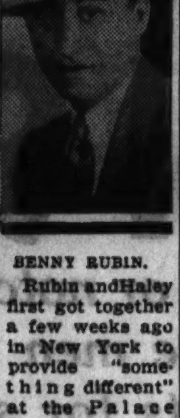
Greek cooking will be the subject of the Round the World Cooking school lesson to be conducted by Ida Bailey Allen, prominent home economist, during the broadcast over W-G-N and CBS from 10:30 to 10:45 a. m. Wednesday. Assisted by Frans, the international chef, Mrs. Allen will feature typical Greek recipes for lamb and string bean stew and for prunes stuffed with fruits and nuts.

Don Lang Will Start Series About Robin Hood

Don Lang, who has told animal stories on W-G-N the last spring, will begin a series of tales of Robin Hood at 5:30 tomorrow afternoon. Furnishing a background for the stories, the W-G-N Symphony will play authentic music from De Koven's famous light opera, and old English airs. Lang will be heard at this same hour each Monday.

RUBIN AND HALEY PAIR FOR PERFORMANCE ON W-G-N AT 9 TONIGHT

Two top notch comedians, Benny Rubin, inimitable dialect fun-star, and Jack Haley, musical comedy favorite, team together for laughs over W-G-N at 9 o'clock tonight. They are guest stars from the Palace theater where they head their own revue.



BENNY RUBIN.

JACK HALEY.

Rubin and Haley first got together a few weeks ago in New York to provide "something different" at the Palace there. The fanfare of laughs they created was so great that right then and there arrangements were made for them to continue their joint clowning.

They are calling the team the "Cohen and Kelly of Vaudeville." The reason is of course obvious. Rubin is a popular Jewish boy and Haley is an Irish lad, and some of their banter is of the friendly enemy variety.

For the W-G-N offering Rubin and Haley will present a lot of apparently extemporaneous gags and bits of nonsense. They perform as twin master of ceremonies.

ARCHITECTURE OF EARLY CHICAGO TO BE DESCRIBED

Speaking on W-G-N at 2 Wednesday instead of 1:30 as heretofore, Ruth Atterbury Wakefield will describe the early architecture of Chicago. Mrs. Wakefield has been gleaning her information from prominent architects of the city and will tell about buildings which were destroyed by the great fire. During the civil war, because of lack of workmen, many atrocities were erected in the name of architecture.

Singin' Sam's Program.

The currently popular "Hummin' to Myself" will be included by Singin' Sam in his group of offerings over W-G-N from 7:15 to 7:30 p. m. Wednesday, as well as several olders numbers.

Neighborhood Theaters

Garbo glitters once again and perhaps for the last time in "As You Desire Me," now playing at the Paradise. Everything about her—clothes, movements, and speech—portrays the slow, sinuous fatality of the enchantress Circe.

The plot concerns the disappearance of the wife of an Italian officer whose country estate was raided during the war. His faith in her reappearance is justified, but what occurs during the interval and afterward contains the germ of this beautifully directed story. Erich von Stroheim, Melvyn Douglas, and Owen Moore support Garbo admirably.

"Huddle," now at the Marbro, should satisfy football fans. Ramon Novarro stars as Tony, the Italian lad who just didn't fit in with the other fellows at college. And how could he, coming from the Gary steel mills? Despite the high hat by his classmates and his many failures, he becomes a big pigskin man and wins, in addition, the love of the sister of the man who hates him. Madge Evans is the girl and Una Merkel and Ralph Graves make a good story better.

Action doesn't stop for a minute in "The Trial of Vivienne Ware," double featuring with "Huddle." An innocent debutante, engaged to a man of the world, is accused of murdering him. Interest is added by the fact that her lawyer was once her sweetheart, and comedy relief comes from a lively radio announcer broadcasting the trial. Players are Joan Bennett, Donald Cook, Skeets Gallagher, and Zasu Pitts.

Human Interest in "So Big."

Real human interest, combined with Barbara Stanwyck's best work, makes "So Big" the kind of picture the whole family will like to see. It plays at the Senate today with "Sky Bride." It's a tale of mother love at its best. Other leads are taken by Bette Davis, George Brent, Dickie Moore, and Guy Kibbee. Richard Arlen and Jack Oakie are teamed in "Sky Bride," one of those zooming, sipping airplane pictures. Virginia Bruce is the heroine of the piece.

Beauty Wins Boss.

The rise of the lowly steno to riches and beauty is done by the use of the gal's own brains in "Beauty and the Boss," playing at the Broadway Strand today. Marian Marsh takes the rôle Louise Groody is now playing in the stage version of this story called "The Church Mouse." Warren William is the boss, who ultimately succumbs to her charms. Charles Butterworth supplies the laughs.

Johnny Weissmuller rings the bell in "Tarzan," also at the Broadway Strand. For examples of real "cavemanship" see this. Sound effects in an African jungle are done realistically. Maureen O'Sullivan plays the daughter of an English explorer, whose search for the burial ground of the elephants ends so pathetically. (The last resting place of the pachyderms turns out to be his own.)

Pair of Comedies at Byrd.

The Byrd is showing "One Hour with You" and "The Cohens and Kellys in Hollywood" today. Both are of the comedy type. Bring the children for Cohens and Kellys, it's slapstick. Take yourself for the former picture if you like naughty and amusing situations. Maurice Chevalier sings, and Jeanette MacDonald and Genevieve Tobin do the rest. Two clever boys, Charles Ruggles and Roland Young, add zest to the production.

PIRATE LEADERS ON W-G-N TODAY FROM BALL PARK

When Bob Elson began interviewing baseball players and introducing them over the W-G-N mike from the playing fields at Wrigley field and Comiskey park this season he started something. Every day Bob gets a bunch of letters from fans asking him to bring a diamond favorite before the microphone.

Today Pittsburg's Pirates will play the Cubs at Wrigley field and Elson plans to have a quartet of Pirates talk to the fans. Manager George Gibson, the Waner brothers, Lloyd and Paul, the hard hitting outfielders, and Capt. Pi Traynor, the brilliant third baseman, will be introduced to the W-G-N audience.

On Tuesday the White Sox start a four game series with the Washington Senators and on successive days the stars of the Senators will be presented over W-G-N. Cary Reynolds, a former White Sox player, now playing in the outfield and one of the leading batsmen of the American league for the Washington club, will talk, as will Ossie Bluege, infielder and also a Chicago boy. Joe Cronin, Heinie Manush, Fred Marberry, and Manager Walter Johnson also are slated for microphone appearances during the series.

Elson also is receiving many baseball questions daily which he answers during the broadcasts of the games.

Kaufman to Impersonate Jolson Doing Sonny Boy

Irving Kaufman, baritone of The Bath club, will impersonate Al Jolson singing "Sonny Boy" in the fifteen minute feature with Roger White's Novelty orchestra tomorrow night at 7 p. m. over W-G-N. Kaufman, famous for his mimicry and novelty songs, also will offer "Banking on the Weather" and "She Came Rolling Down the Mountain."

No New Shows in Sight for Chicago Stage

Convention Guests Will Find Most Theaters Have Folded Up for Summer.

By Charles Collins.

study. The man in the street, when given the facts, invariably asks "Why?" in a tone of incredulity tinged with indignation. Well, then, the theaters are failing to rise to this civic opportunity because: [1] the supply of shows has dried up during the past few months of economic withering; [2] because most of the impresarios are feeling poor and discouraged, and [3] because experience has taught them to adopt a cynical and wary attitude toward convention crowds. Apparently these great quadrennial political circuses do not attract followers of a playgoing type. Delegates and their alternates seem to fight shy of box offices, and, according to many veteran observers of their habits, they spend their evenings milling around aimlessly in hotel lobbies. Conventions of master plumbers and gadget makers are of much greater importance in the support of the dramatic arts than the aggregation of major and minor statesmen that nominate our Presidents.

Chasing Rainbows.

Another mirage that has deceived many citizens whose wishes outrun the facts in the case is "Of Thee I Sing." Rumors that this satirical extravaganza will appear in Chicago during the convention period have been cropping up at least once a week during the past two months, and have been getting printed as valid, although not in this department. I have, at various times, endeavored to dissuade the dreamers who have been praying for "Of Thee I Sing" to descend upon our barren stage and fertilize it with its shrewd, impertinent humor; but I am compelled to repeat my message, for this hoax is again in the air.

"Of Thee I Sing" clings to its New York vogue like a limpet to its rock. "J'y suis, j'y reste," is its motto. Every week, however, the subject of a touring company is brought up around the council table in the offices of Sam H. Harris, its manager; is discussed solemnly for hours and hours; and then is dropped until the next meeting of the debating society. Tentative casts for this second company have been prepared by the dozen and filed for reference.

George S. Kaufman, one of the authors, sent me word after the latest session, a few days ago, that "Of Thee I Sing" will positively not be sent on tour until next fall. Participants in the Chicago prayer meeting may begin to look for it late in August; but it is likely that they will be kept in suspense until football weather sets in.

So do not let this mirage tantalize you into an agony of false expectations.

Theater Guild Mystery.

The great mystery of the two missing plays of the Theater Guild's Chicago program has been solved by investigators working under instructions from this department. The plays have sunk without trace; and the Guild will adjust the claims and rights of its Chicago subscribers under three options: [1] refund of deposit money in full; [2] credit on next season's American Theater society's subscription; or [3] compensating tickets to two plays to be sent here next fall by the Guild.

Mrs. Fitzwilliam Sargent arrived in Chicago last Thursday as the representative of the Guild with a special commission to iron out this matter in a way that will make everybody happy. I may add that the Guild's subscribers have been somewhat fretted, worried and annoyed by the mystery of the phantom plays, and that Mrs. Sargent's arrival will do much to restore their somewhat shattered faith in subscription theatrical programs. Warren Munsell, business manager of the Guild, explains that the delay was caused by the negotiations leading to the recently announced merger with the Dramatic League, and also to uncertainties over the application of federal taxes to the moneys on deposit.

B'way Survivors.

The New York stage entered the summer season last week with only fourteen titles in its announcements. They are: [new] "Bridal Wise," with Madge Kennedy, and "Christopher Comes Across"; [continued] "The Animal Kingdom," with Leslie Howard; "Another Language," "The Cat and the Fiddle," "Counsellor-at-Law," "Face the Music," with Mary Boland; "Hot-Cha," "The Man Who Changed His Name," with Fay Bainter; "Merry-Go-Round," "Of Thee I Sing," "Reunion in Vienna," "Show Boat," and "A Thousand Summers," with Jane Cowl.

Vox Playgoer

To the Dramatic Editor:

CHICAGO, May 30.—When I return from church Sunday morning I have a little breakfast and then I recline in my Morris chair and read THE TRIBUNE. I merely glance at the front page; I am tired of the sordid realities of every day life, but when I come to the dramatic section I take my time.

Your writing last Sunday was correct and wonderful. I don't like the cinema, most of the pictures are more painful than amusing. You forget a picture a few days after you see it, but I have seen legitimate plays that were so entertaining that I can never efface them from my memory.

Do you remember Mrs. Leslie Carter in "Zaza," Otis Skinner in "At the Villa Rose," Robert Mantell in "A Free Lance"? I saw them long ago and I can't forget them.

I wish I could see some of these old time legitimate artists again and for two hours I could escape the vile smell of prohibition. I would not have to look upon 5,000 able bodied men in a soup line. I hate these awful realities. If I could see a real good show I could forget them and then for a long time have something pleasant to think about.

I loves the theater and its people, and so your writing is like a personal letter to me, and I thank you for writing.

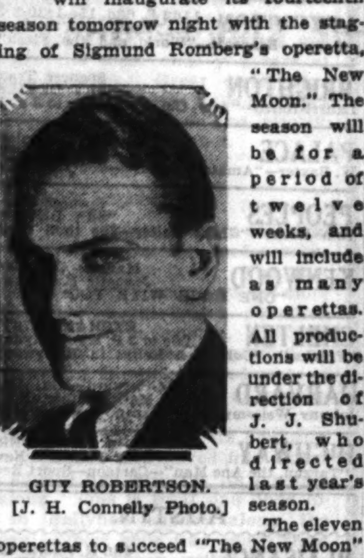
PERSONALITIES IN WHITE'S "SCANDALS"

THE last Broadway revue of the theater-going season passed into history when George White's "Scandals" deserted the Civic Opera house last night. Here is the way Ben Cohen, the aisle seat caricaturist, said good-by to its leading performers: Above, Ray Bolger, who dances like the late Jack Donahue; Joan Abbott, singing "Ladies and Gentlemen, That's Love"; Rudy Vallee, crooning "This Is the Missis"; and Everett Marshall, chanting "That's Why Darkies Are Born." Below: Willie and Eugene Howard and Ethel Barrymore Colt in a sketch, with the girl friend's husband rowing the love-boat.

St. Louis Gets Summer Season of Operettas

THE MUNICIPAL OPERA OF ST. LOUIS, the largest open air theatrical enterprise in the world, will inaugurate its fourteenth season tomorrow night with the staging of Sigmund Romberg's operetta, "The New Moon." The season will be for a period of twelve weeks, and will include as many operettas. All productions will be under the direction of J. J. Shubert, who directed last year's season.



GUY ROBERTSON.

The eleven operettas to succeed "The New Moon" will be "The Riviera Girl," "The Last Waltz," "Blossom Time," "The Honeymooners," "Rose of Stamboul," "The Blue Paradise," "The Desert Song," "Katja," "Land of Smiles," "Sari," and "Cyrano de Bergerac." The latter is a new composition. Each operetta will be given for a week only.

The company includes the following musical comedy players: Charlotte Lansing, Natalie Hall, Yvonne D'Arle, Barbara Newberry, Doris Patston, Hope Emerson, Virginia Watson, Genevieve McCormick, Guy Robertson, Leonard Ceeley, George Houston, Carl Randall, Clifford Newdahl, Jack Sheehan, Harry K. Morton and Victor Casmore. The chorus of eighty-four has been recruited from St. Louis singers and dancers.

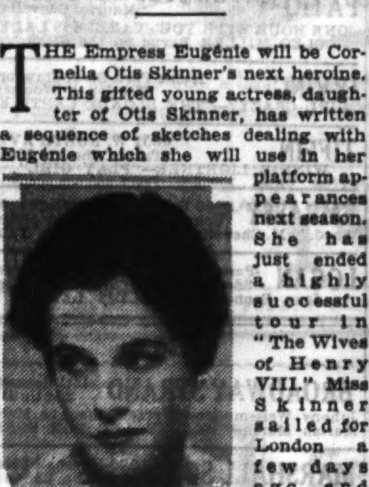
The ticket prices range from 25 cents to $1.50, with a few box seats at $2. Twenty-five hundred seats are free. Most of the sales come from subscriptions, and to date more than $170,000 has been taken in, which promises to bring this season's final total above the profitable showing of last season, which had a total attendance of 687,686, with receipts of $460,488. Of the twelve operettas presented last year, "Nina Rosa" was the most popular.

The cast of "The New Moon" will have among its principals Charlotte Lansing, Guy Robertson, Leonard Ceeley, Barbara Newberry, Hope Emerson, Carl Randall and Virginia Watson.

Miss Skinner's Next Heroine Out of History

"Liliom" for Revival by Le Gallienne's Civic Repertory Company.

THE Empress Eugénie will be Cornelia Otis Skinner's next heroine. This gifted young actress, daughter of Otis Skinner, has written a sequence of sketches dealing with Eugénie which she will use in her platform appearances next season. She has just ended a highly successful tour in "The Wives of Henry VIII." Miss Skinner sailed for London a few days ago, and will give her Empress Eugénie program there before submitting it to American audiences.



CORNELIA OTIS SKINNER.

Joseph Schildkraut's rôles in productions at the New York Civic Repertory theater next season will include Armand in "Camille," Romeo in "Romeo and Juliet," and a part in "Gruach," by Gordon Bottomley. In each play he will appear opposite Eva Le Gallienne.

Schildkraut's first performance at the Civic Repertory theater will be in "Liliom," the Molnar play, in which he and Miss Le Gallienne will have the rôles they played in the Theater Guild's production in April, 1921. Schildkraut will return from Vienna late next month.

A group of actors, playwrights, and stage directors, to be known as the Broom Stagers, will establish headquarters in the Vanderbilt theater, New York. The group plans production of four new plays: "Back Fire," by Jerald Robert; "The Blue Orchid," by Tess Dalton; "Second Blooming," by Kate Jordan, and "Enchantment," by Tad Bussiere. The first of these will be ready for presentation in June. The players will include Mabel Taliaferro, Alice May Tuck, Doris Packer, Robert Ober, Donald Gallagher, and Maurice McRae.

Marie Tempest will have Mary Boland's rôle in the London presentation of "The Vinegar Tree." The cast will also include Henry Daniell, Celia Johnson, Barbara Hoffe, and Louis Hayward. "The Vinegar Tree" will be produced in London by Gilbert Miller.

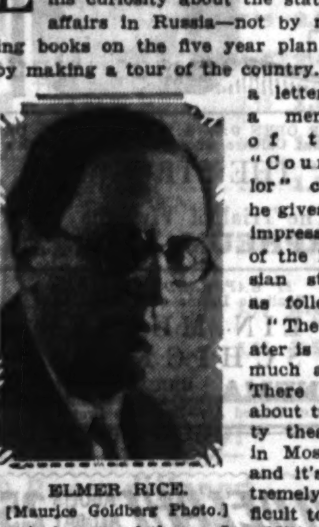
Selena Royle, actress and daughter of Edwin Milton Royle, the playwright, was married last Tuesday in the chapel of the Riverside church, New York, to Earle Larimore, a well known member of the Theater Guild's acting company. Miss Royle recently appeared in Chicago as leading woman with George M. Cohan in "Confidential Service." Mr. Larimore's last acting here was in the Guild's staging of Turgenev's "A Month in the Country," at the Blackstone theater in the fall of 1930. This season he had the rôle of Orin Mannon in the New York cast for O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra."

Lou Tellegen will have the leading rôle in the Jean Bart play, "The Man Who Reclaimed His Head," which L. Lawrence Weber and Arthur Hammerstein will stage at the Garrick theater, Philadelphia, for nine days, beginning June 16. The production is in rehearsal under the direction of Herbert J. Biberman.

Max Gordon announces that his new musical production will be called "Flying Colors." It is to be a revue and will be staged by Howard Dietz, who will also write sketches and lyrics. Arthur Schwartz, who wrote the music for "The Band Wagon," is composing a score for the show which will start rehearsals late in June. Clifton Webb, Patsy Kelly, and Charles Butterworth will have leading rôles.

Elmer Rice's Impressions of Russian Stage

ELMER RICE, author of "Counsellor-at-Law," is now slaking his curiosity about the state of affairs in Russia—not by reading books on the five year plan but by making a tour of the country. In a letter to a member of the "Counsellor" cast he gives his impressions of the Russian stage, as follows:



ELMER RICE.

"The theater is very much alive. There are about twenty theaters in Moscow, and it's extremely difficult to get seats in any of them. In addition, almost every factory and workers' club has some sort of dramatic group. There are special theaters for children and adolescents.

"The acting, on the whole, is very good, especially at the Moscow Art theater. Direction, settings and lighting are good also; much better, I should say, than all but the very best American productions. All the plays are concerned with some form or other of propaganda, either some phase of revolutionary history or the working out of some problem connected with communism."

New in Chicago

"LOVE ON APPROVAL," a comedy by George L. Spaulding, will have its première at the Playhouse tonight. In the cast will be Cecil Spooner, Victor Sutherland, Sonia Karlov, Jean Cleveland, Kathryn Meskyl, Rex Carlton, L. Maury Tuckerman, Rankin Mansfield, and Paul Byron.

This play deals with young people who leave conventional homes to try their luck and rebellious theories in Greenwich Village. Eventually troubled parents arrive in New York, and to avoid a crisis they give the children a "dose of their own medicine." The dialogue is said to be witty. The scenes are laid in the studio apartment of a young woman from a small western town.

Cecil Spooner was last seen here in "The House of Fear." Sonia Karlov will be remembered as prominent in "Sisters of the Chorus." Jean Cleveland is a picture actress who played opposite Herbert Rawlinson for several years, and Rex Carlton has been active on both the legitimate stage and in film shows.

Question of Summer Music Needs Settling

Two Liberal Offers by Mr. Eckstein and Mr. Stock Make Concerts Possible.

By Edward Moore.

dove of peace is once again preening its feathers on its accustomed perch and the question of summer concerts is entirely a live one. In the interval two offers of surpassing liberality have been made. One is by Mr. Eckstein, and it still holds good. It is to provide Ravinia free of charge for a season of any length, keeping up the grounds in their accustomed loveliness, even paying for the lights. It is conditioned only on the Chicago Symphony orchestra being the performing attraction, but with that condition every cent that is taken in can be applied to the concerts. Not a cent will go to him.

The other offer is Mr. Stock's. He says that if arrangements can be made for the orchestra to play there, he is willing to conduct the first two weeks free of charge. Other calls on his time this summer will make it impossible for him to stay longer, but two weeks under his baton would be enough to give the season a rousing start. After that other notables among conductors could be arranged for, just as they are arranged for in the Stadium concerts in New York—concerts, by the way, that will go ahead full force this year just as they have gone ahead in past summers.

Now Is Time to Rally.

This, then, is the situation. Here is one of the finest orchestras in the world, an orchestra that for twenty years has had an important part in making Ravinia what it was and ready to give concerts this summer. It ought to give concerts. For that matter it needs to give concerts. For there can be little question that the abolishment of the opera season this summer has hit these players about as hard in their personal budgets as anybody connected with the whole operatic organization.

Now, if ever, is the time to rally around. Such a season of concerts cannot be given for nothing, but they would not cost a great deal. By the side of what is needed for a Civic opera season, or even what the Orchestral association contemplates as an anual deficit, it would be an entirely minor item of expense.

Mr. Petrillo, the president of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, takes a stand against permitting the men to play on a profit sharing basis. He asks for a guarantee, and he is right in so doing. He has seen profit sharing experiments before, and has learned by experience that the profits to be shared are entirely too speculative to make them a fit offering for the artists who make up the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

But an organizer who could develop and crystallize the musical sentiment of the north shore into a reasonable guarantee could make a series of concerts an assured fact. If a nightly series seems too much, a triweekly series would be a long step in the right direction.

Without some sort of good music, Chicago this summer is bound to be a much less cheery place to live in than it has been for a long time. Anyway, if the north shore people are as anxious to have music as they say they are, there will be no need to dip into the guaranty fund to pay for the concerts. They will pay for themselves.

Opinions of Crooners.

What will probably rate as the most entertaining set of opinions of the season has just been printed in a magazine devoted to music and musicians. Its editor addressed letters to various persons, mostly professional musicians, asking them what they thought of crooning, and if any answers could have an effect on those devoted to this lowly member of the arts, which never yet has been the case, these would have.

"Disgustingly saccharine and banal" was one. "A little more of it, and music will die of pernicious anemia" was another. "It belongs in the realm of pathology" was a third. Then there are "bad for digestion," "cheap and artificial," "perversion of the beautiful emotion of love," "neural debility," "detriment to the voice," and "cancerous outgrowth." But Mme. Schumann-Heink out of the stores of a rich experience ventured to hint that Rudy Vallee was possessed of a lovely voice, fine musicianship, and clever interpretations.

This department has been forced to believe that the whips and scorns of time are as nothing compared to the scorn with which the musically elect regard the popular songs of the musical masses. It is certain that failure to understand and sympathize with the music of the masses accounts for failure to be appreciated by the masses. The next step follows, though it should not, that after a lifetime spent in keeping austerely aloof from the music of the masses, they complain that America is not musically minded. This, it would seem, is logic gone entirely strabismic.

B'way Openings

NEW YORK, June 4.—[Special.]—Three premières are scheduled for the Broadway stage next week. The annual classic production of the Players' club leads the list in interest. Here are the announcements:

"Troilus and Cressida" opens Monday night at the Broadway; the eleventh annual classic revival by the Players' club, for one week. This Shakespearean play has never been produced professionally on the American stage. The large cast will find Otis Skinner, Edith Barrett, Blanche Yurka, Jerome Lawler, Eugene Powers, Eliot Cabot, George Gaul, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coburn and Eileen Huban in important rôles.

"Hey-Nonny, Nonny!" opens Monday night at the Shubert—the postponed opening of an intimate revue, chiefly by Max and Nathaniel Lief and Michael Cleary, with Frank Morgan as its star. Other entertainers will be Ann Seymour, Dorothy McNulty, Joan Carter-Waddell, Jerry Norris, Jack McCauley, Frances Maddux, and Richy Craig Jr.

"The Boy Friend" opens Tuesday night at the Morosco. A melodramatic comedy by John Montague, with Emily Graham, Charlotte Walker, George Probert, Walter Glass, Brian Donlevy, Edward Leiter, Kathleen Carr and Harold Heaton in the cast.

Switchboard Actress

[Bloom Photo.]

SHE is the sophisticated lady who sits at the switchboard in "Counsellor-at-Law," now at the Erlanger theater, putting into the play its theme song of "Simon and Tedesco." Miss Day's character study of this slangy and cynical telephone operator is one of the diverting features of a play that is promising to establish the season's record for length of run.

Armchair Playgoer

By Fanny Butcher.

YOU know what a "blackout" is. You've seen them hundreds of times in revues—short sketches sometimes a little naughty; usually funny, or pretending to be—and ending with the abrupt switching off of the lights. For the first time, at least so far as I know, a collection of blackouts has been made for the reading public [and the amateur acting one, if so be it]. Marjorie Rice Levis has added to one of her own, "What Price Grand Slam," about a bridge game, thirteen others in "Blackouts" [Samuel French]. Some are by the topnotchers of the drama business, others by people whose names you mayn't recognize.

RING W. LARDNER.

Among the well-knowns are Ring Lardner and George S. Kaufman and Earl Carroll and Henry Wagstaff Gribble and Leslie Howard. Ring Lardner's contribution is called "The Tridget of Greva" and it's just about as sensible as its title.

Its blackout ought to be something of a shock to an audience. Also the moment of turning off the lights in Earl Carroll's "All Aboard," which was in the 1928 "Vanities." "The Pride of the Claghornes," by George S. Kaufman and Howard Dietz, was one of the hits of "The Band Wagon" and concerns an old southern scene in which the daughter of the house brought disgrace on the name and was turned out by an angry pa because she couldn't deny that what they were saying in the village was true—that she was virtuous!

Harry Wagstaff Gribble's "Lest Ye Forget!" is a sketch with a sob until the last moment, when the secretary to the warden of an insane asylum gives the governor's wife something more to tell the governor than that injustice has been done.

Leslie Howard's "The Hundred and Eighteenth Amendment" has to do with prohibition — the prohibition of salt.

In Gene Buck's "The Unknown Soldier," which was originally produced at the "Lambs Gambol" of 1930, there is a last moment of sentiment. Bertram Bloch's "Front Page Stuff" makes a man presidential nominee for the sake of making the front page.

In "Robinson Crusoe," by Merrill Dennison, that famous classic is made into a modern movie by a director and a cameraman.

"Alibi," by Mortimer Offner, is a new version of the drunk and the policeman story, with a guffaw at the end.

"True to the End," by Edward Eliscu, tells how a woman was faithful to Hank—after her fashion.

"Relatively Speaking," by Hugh A. Anderson, is a very unfunny sketch about Einstein and the radio.

"Democracy" concerns the snobbishness of the future, when "under the plaited shirt of a prince there may beat the heart of a plumber."

Leslie Howard for Hollywood; Stage Gossip

Revival of 'Rose-Marie' May Follow 'Show Boat'; Tours for Next Season.

NEW YORK, June 4.—[Special.]—"The Animal Kingdom" will end its run at the Empire theater June 18, and Leslie Howard, its star and co-producer, will then make a dash for the first train moving toward Hollywood, where he will spend the summer working for the film magnates. He will appear in the picturization of "The Animal Kingdom," and also in another scenario that has met with his approval.

LESLIE HOWARD.

This arrangement makes it seem likely that "The Animal Kingdom," as a stage play, will not have much of a tour next season. The film will be ready for distribution in time to conflict with real life performances. Furthermore, Mr. Howard's plans for next season do not contemplate traveling in "The Animal Kingdom." After he finishes his Hollywood assignments, he will proceed to London to act in one of Gilbert Miller's productions.

Among the Broadway hits scheduled for tours next fall is "Springtime for Henry," the sprightly comedy by Benn W. Levy, author of "The Devil Passes," etc. This piece will take to the road in September with Henry Hull in the leading rôle, as usual. Frieda Inescourt, also identified with the Broadway run, may continue with the play, but her present plan is to hurry to London in the hope of becoming the leading woman in the London production, to be staged by Gilbert Miller and Jack Buchanan. Seymour Hicks will be the London representative of Mr. Hull's rôle.

R. C. Sherriff, who has done little as an author since "Journey's End," has adapted a play from the Hungarian by a certain Erno Szep. Its title translates as "Gold Watch." The manuscript is now in the hands of Charles Frohman, Inc.

A week ago eleven members of the cast of a comedy that had gone to Chicago in high hopes of a run telegraphed to the Actors' Equity association the sad news that they were stranded. The organization promptly wired $400 to pay their fares back to Broadway; and then struck an attitude of total amazement. This sort of thing has become almost obsolete, because of "Equity's" requirement for a bond to guarantee transportation back to the home port. Before September, 1919, however—the time of the actors' strike and unionization—the stranding of theatrical companies averaged about 90 a year.

Theater Guild and League in Drama Merger

Subscription Audiences and Programs Joined for Next Chicago Season.

THE formation of the American Theater Society, to combine the subscription drama programs of the Theater Guild and the Dramatic League in Chicago and other cities, is outlined by the League's spokesman as follows:

"The merger of the Theater Guild with the Dramatic League of Chicago and its affiliates in the subscription field indicates a practical amalgamation of the booking interests of the Erlangers and the Messrs. Shubert for the territory outside New York City commonly referred to as "the road." Under the new arrangement, Chicago subscribers to the Dramatic League and to the Theater Guild will be provided hereafter with the same program of plays, to be given in a single theater. This applies also to the other cities where the Guild and the League have been in competition. Details as to the program for the first Chicago season of the merged organizations will be the subject of later announcement.

"Neither the Dramatic League nor the Theater Guild will be represented in the title of the new body, which will be called the American Theater Society. That name will be used not only in Chicago but also in the eleven other cities where the Guild or the League has conducted annual seasons of plays on subscription. Competition is replaced by coöperation.

"The Dramatic League of Chicago had as its financial sponsors the Messrs. Shubert, who, hard upon the success of the organization in its first season here, 1929-'30, proceeded to extend the plan into Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Detroit, St. Louis, Kansas City, and Washington. The Theater Guild, too, has operated in all these cities save Kansas City; but the Guild also had an annual subscription in Baltimore, where the Dramatic League was without an affiliated body.

"Now, with the Guild and the League merged, it is the hope of the joined managements that other cities will be made to see the values of the subscription plan as a device for providing what is known as the "organized audience" for plays of fine caliber, and that in time, with the revival of interest in "the road," the chain will extend to San Francisco and Los Angeles.

"Not only the Theater Guild, the Messrs. Shubert, and the Erlanger office will supply the plays. All play-producers will be asked to submit their plays to a committee of seven, which will pass upon their availability for the subscription audiences. As a matter of fact, both the Dramatic League and the Theater Guild in the season now ending has offered to Chicago subscribers plays staged by Gilbert Miller, John Golden, Charles Hopkins, and other producers not affiliated with either organization.

"The American Theater Society will have a resident deputy in each city, while field agents will organize the audiences, arrange programs, and adjust schedules, so that the rotation of plays will be embraced in a scheme which will give to each city its quota of plays at regular fixed intervals. Formal notification of programs, dates, etc. will be made to Chicago subscribers to both the Theater Guild and the Dramatic League, who thereafter will be regarded as a single body of playgoers."

Poised Gary Cooper Back from Travels

Friendships with Titled, Trip Have Given Him Fresh Perspective.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—It's an entirely new Gary Cooper that we talked to at lunch this week at Paramount, where he is doing his first picture in months, "Thunder Below," with Tallulah Bankhead. He is brown and healthy looking, with the heavy lines in his face gone, and there is a pleasant addition of poundage to his tall, spareframe. It is a well poised Gary, a conversational Gary, a charming Gary, that has come back from his travels. To one who has interviewed him in the past, it's a revelation to talk to him. In the old days interviewing Gary was like pulling teeth. He was distracted, ill at ease, and not very inspiring. That's all changed now. Our Gary is a cosmopolite.

GARY COOPER.

"For three years I had been promised a vacation," said Gary. "Always it was put off until 'after the next picture.' When I finally decided to go I was supposed to have three weeks off. I just took a vacation. I was a pretty sick man when I left and my doctor told me I had better get a rest and stay in some high altitude.

Entertained Royally.

"They brought me back for one more picture in New York, but I went abroad again. The trip gave me a perspective that I have never had before. It ought to be compulsory for Hollywood folks to go abroad; it would do actors good to see the originals of some of the rôles they have to play on the screen. It's wonderful to see some of the places you have read about and dreamed about—London, Paris, Rome. The people are wonderful, too. I never realized how simple the really important and titled people are. They entertained me royally, made me feel at home, and were so absolutely unaffected and kind.

"In Rome I enjoyed my stay enormously, and took riding lessons from two cavalry officers of the famous Tour de Quinto. The Italians have the best cavalry I have seen; not that the men are better than our American riders, but they have better mounts and their system of horsemanship is different from ours. I learned several stunts from them. I was the guest of Count and Countess Frasso during my stay there.

"In London, as the guest of Earl and Lady Portarlington and of the daughter of the duke of Westminster at Eton hall, I met the same kindness that I did in Rome. I saw the Grand National steeplechase. That was a great thing to me."

Estelle's New Home.

Estelle Taylor has taken a house at Malibu beach; bought it, in fact, and is now in the throes of building a dining room, extra bedroom, and bath onto the new place. Estelle was sighted in town lunching at the Brown Derby. Your correspondent went along to help her buy a waste basket for the bathroom, a hooked rug for the hall, and some other pretties that were not really needed.

ESTELLE TAYLOR.

Estelle is an inveterate shopper. Her present enthusiasm is for singing, and she has been making many friends in the local musical group. Recently an enthusiastic bunch of her musical friends came out to her beach house and what with violins, the piano, and other instruments Estelle found herself singing enthusiastically till seven the following morning.

There's a chap named Teet Carle in the publicity offices at one of the studios. Carle is most popular with the actors who enjoy using him in their practical jokes. The other day Carle received a gift with the compliments of the Marx brothers. When unwrapped it proved to be a framed testimonial about the size of a full page of a daily newspaper reading: "To Teet Carle—He kept us out of print—The Four Marx Brothers."

Waiting for a Contract.

Alice White is unpacking things in the new house which she purchased in the Outpost district. Looks as if she is going to settle down and wait for a really good movie contract.

ALICE WHITE.

Walter Morosco, husband of Corinne Griffith, is in town and it looks as if he, too, felt the return might be permanent, for he brought a whole kennel of dogs with him from Europe. Corinne has made several films in England after a year of preliminary voice training and dramatic coaching, and it is entirely likely that Husband Walter will get things signed up for her to come back to Hollywood.

After Garbo?

Zita Johann (above) and Anna Sten (below) are among the screen stars reported to be all set to try to step into Greta Garbo's shoes when she returns to her homeland, as she now says she is going to do.

2 Film Exotics Reaching for Garbo Crown

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—(AP)—With Garbo's departure imminent, the year's new crop of movie exotics is preparing to reveal its splendors to the screen.

There are five of them, each at a different studio, and each is a potential candidate for the fan favor that has been lavished upon the serene Swedish star.

Hollywood always has had its woman of mystery and glamor back to the day of Theda Bara, the original screen "vampire."

Since Marlene Dietrich, the German star, now is conceded to have proved her right to be considered on her own merits, and Elissa Landi of England from the first was of a different school from Dietrich's or Garbo's, the logical successor to the Garbo crown may come from this group of five.

Five Competitors.

The five are Tala Birell, Anna Sten, Zita Johann, Sari Maritza, and Gwili Andre.

They are all blond with the exception of Zita Johann, a vivid bruette.

Mis Johann is Hungarian by birth, but was reared in America and has become well known on the New York stage as an emotional actress.

Tala Birell actually resembles Garbo, but her studio wisely refused to capitalize on the resemblance.

Still fans who see her in her first American picture may note flashes of the similarity. Tala is Viennese.

Sari Maritza was born in China of an English father and a Viennese mother. Some of her photographs resemble Marlene Dietrich, but Sari's hair is light brown where Marlene's has a reddish tinge, and Sari is smaller. She has starred in European films.

Played in German Films.

Anna Sten is Russian, but achieved real attention through her work in German films, from which she was brought to Hollywood by Samuel Goldwyn.

Gwili Andre, Danish by birth but a New Yorker by residence, is blond fragility at its most fragile and most blond.

Formerly an artists' model, her face has been seen on numerous magazine covers.

Around her there appears to be a definite studio effort to throw that cloak of so-essential "mystery."

Popular Title.

Billy Rose's next revue, tentatively called "Clown in Clover," is expected tc open on Broadway late in August. Herman Rosse has been engaged to design the settings.

to be "gripping, incident-filled melodrama . . . not for the adolescent this vivid, stormy, sexy screenization of Mrs. Belloc Lowndes' novel; but the seasoned adult will find it of absorbing interest and be in no manner corrupted by its details, for modern as is the piece, it's not one bit less mid-Victorian than 'East Lynne' in pointing the moral that the wages of sin is being sorry. . . . Joan Crawford's impersonation is a sensitive, intelligent and appealing one. . . . Robert Montgomery gets better every day in every way. . . . Direction brilliant. Lines have snap and potency and the film is beautifully mounted. . . ."

"THE RICH ARE ALWAYS WITH US" gave me a chance to "run with the pack. I honestly liked Ruth Chatterton in this picture. . . . "LETTY LYNTON" was thought did direction, George Brent, who is a leading man the girls will sigh for, and hand-picked supporting players who have been ideally cast. . . . The picture is richly and tastefully staged and the women's costumes are exquisite. Lines are clean cut. Situations are potent. Laughs are many. . . ."

"THE DOOMED BATTALION" is "one of those pictures that etches itself on your memory. It is real, vivid, human experience, hot from the heart and pen of a member of that 'doomed battalion' who held an Alpine pass against invading Italian troops, grimly awaiting practically certain death almost within halloing distance of their homes in the valley below. . . . None of the acting ever seems to be acting. . . . Tala Birell, Luis Trenker, Victor Varconi—all splendid. . . . Photography, direction—everything—great . . .!"

"AS YOU DESIRE ME" is thought to be the last picture Greta Garbo will make over here. Said the original review, "IF 'As You Desire Me' is the siren's Hollywood's good-by—it's an effective one, a picture in which the Garbo is as her adorers DO desire her. . . . A beautifully directed, staged, and photographed movie, definitely alluring from start to finish. . . ."

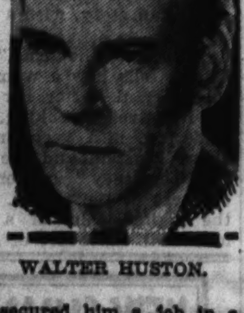
Bits aBOUTem.

VICKI BAUM, according to Modern Screen Magazine, "prefers Wallace Beery's picture interpretation of the rôle of Preysing to that of Siegfried Rumann on the stage. She is quoted as saying: "Of all the actors who played the part of Preysing (including the German) Wallace Beery was closest to my conception of this character." . . . BETTE DAVIS will have a featured rôle with EDWARD ROBINSON in "Silver Dollar." That little girl is stepping right along, isn't she? . . . ALISON SKIPWORTH has a mania for collecting ancient beauty recipes. . . . TALULAH BANKHEAD says that as long as she has a career she'll do without a husband. "The two don't mix," sezzshe. CAROLE LOMBARD thinks that light hair should never be waved tightly or dressed so that it covers the forehead. She may be right, but there was something about her coiffure in "Sinners in the Sun" that made her look like a little dead child . . . LILLIAN HARVEY, one of the featured players in "Congress Dances" has been signed by Fox films for five years. She'll arrive in America this fall, according to expectations. . . . GLORIA SWANSON has announced that she will make a picture in Europe which will be released through United Artists.

See you tomorrow!

Historiette

WALTER HUSTON was born in Toronto, Canada, and his boyhood ambition was to be a contractor like his father. All of his school activities pointed to an engineering career. His success in school dramatics put the acting bee in his bonnet and started his career as a player. After he finished school an actor friend secured him a job in a stock company. From Toronto he went to other stock companies. Followed a number of years on the major vaudeville circuits.



WALTER HUSTON.

His work in the stage production, "Desire Under the Elms," first attracted widespread attention to him. He made successful appearances in "The Barker," "Dead Legs Flint," "Congo," and "Elmer the Great." In 1929 he was sought as picture material and secured the lead in "Gentlemen of the Press" and "The Lady Lies," following which he gave his magnificent performance of "Abraham Lincoln" in the Griffith talker. He has been consistently excellent and successful on the screen ever since.

Mr. Huston is 6 feet tall, weighs 180 pounds, and has gray eyes and black hair. He was recently married to Miss Nan Sunderland, with whom he lives happily in Beverly Hills.

Summer Drama.

"Blessed Event," the comedy about a columnist, will open in Cleveland tonight as the second production of Robert McLaughlin's summer "stock" season. It will succeed "Reunion in Vienna," starring Ina Claire.

The Voice of the Movie Fan

Praise for Bela Lugosi.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have been a steady reader of your "opinion column" but have not until now joined it. That is, if my article is accepted. Just a word for Bela Lugosi. With the exception of one, I haven't missed one of Lugosi's pictures, and can say by now that he is the "finishing touch" to mystery plays. But why always make a villain of him? Why not a hero? It is not pleasant seeing his plays usually end in death for him—a stake through his heart or killed by a gorilla!

Am hoping to see him in a romance soon where the audience is for him, wishing him victory, instead of against him, wishing him—death.

I hope you will welcome me to your column, Mae.

Most sincerely,

IRJA JASKELAINEN.

Editor's note: Welcome, Joiner! Come again! You're now a member in good standing.

A Word of Protest.

Dear Mae: I am writing you in behalf of the way pictures are made from books and stage successes. For instance, the filming of the operetta, "The New Moon." It spoiled my evening's entertainment. There was as much difference in that as day and night. Why, I ask, do they do it?

Next, "Murder by the Clock." The book tells a different plot entirely. Producers must find fun in doing that.

Two pictures I would like to see in talkies are "Student Prince" and "Green Archer." Woe be to the producers if they change one inch of the plot! Also, why not have the same actors and actresses play the same parts as they did in the silent films?

Sincerely yours, R. L.

Editor's note: If I only knew everything. . . . !!!!

Two Questions.

Dear Mae Tinée: I should like this opportunity of telling you that I enjoy and appreciate your column.

However, what I wish to ask you is, Why must you constantly compare pictures with other pictures? For instance, you say the "Symphony of Six Million" is a good picture, but, of course, it isn't another "Humoresque." Who cares?

It seems to me a critic's job is to criticize a picture, not compare it.

Am I right, or am I right????

Another thing: Will you please tell me why so many actors and actresses say "a tall" for "at all"?

Really sincerely yours,

ADDY LOU MILLER.

Editor's note: No, I couldn't tell you. Next time write on only one side of the paper and we'll be able to print your whole letter.

Just a Written Brick.

Dear Mae Tinée: Not being able to meet you personally and not caring much, I take this means of throwing a brick at your viewpoint of knocking all movies that are shown at one local theater just because they happen to come from soviet Russia.

Why in the name of common sense don't you give Russian films the same break as you do the German, French, and American ones? Yours truly,

M. L. S.

P. S.—Free, white, and single, 100 per cent pure American.

Jane Cowl's Play Uncertain in Development

Two Possible Endings Tried; Final Compromise Is Hardly Satisfactory.

By Burns Mantle.

a sort of final compromise. The boy and the lady meet at an English inn. He, Neil Barton, is traveling with his aunt and uncle who have brought him up and are jealous of his future.

She, Sheila Pennington, has fled from London in the hope of getting away from it all—all the silly business of cocktail parties, night clubs, week-end visits and those men and their mistresses with whom she fraternized. For Sheila is not a lady according to the stricter social classifications.

At first Neil's ardent but awkward pursuit of Sheila results in nothing more serious than a summer flirtation. Then, when she sees whither they are drifting, she turns noble and warns him away. She has promised his aunt that she will take no advantage of the boy's innocence nor of his ignorance. Though, like Candida, she is a little more than half convinced it would be better for Neil were he to learn about life from her rather than from some less experienced and less honestly concerned young person.

Sheila leaves Neil after a turbulent scene, and Neil, as said, turns to the barmaid, who has been making none too subtle advances. Sheila, returning to the room, discovers what is happening, but does nothing to stop it.

Then, convinced that she has been wrong, Sheila sends Neil on to Paris as she had promised, but is busily looking up time tables and boat schedules to follow after him as the play ends.

Difficult Situation.

"A Thousand Summers" is naturally weakened by that matter of the heroine's indecision. It is fairly difficult at best to compose a romance in which a maturing woman and an adolescent boy are the principals which does not place the woman in an unfavorable light.

In "Candida" and "Young Woodley" it was met by gently curing the boy of his infatuation through the sympathetic understanding of the woman, aided by her slightly muddle-headed husband. In "Fata Morgana" it was played boldly as the adventure of an amorous and designing lady who returned forthwith to her husband and left the boy to assimilate his lesson through suffering. In "Another Language," which is written on the same theme, the boy is permitted to believe that his brother's wife, with whom he is desperately in love, has been making sport of him, and thus is in a fair way to recovery in the end.

But in "A Thousand Summers" the conclusion seeks to patch together a romance that has been violently shattered by offering a trick suggestion of its future welding, which, naturally, is another story.

The comedy's appeal as it stands is dependent largely upon the sympathetically sincere performances of Miss Cowl and her young leading man, Franchot Tone. Osgood Perkins is in the cast, playing the short part of Sheila's London lover, and Josephine Hull is the fluttery aunt.

Play About Crooners.

Another of the spring comedies that has been undergoing out of town repairing without noticeably good results is one called "High-Ho! Everybody," in which a satirical fling is taken at the radio crooners. It is pretty hard to be funny about a crooner. He is funny enough as he sings.

In this piece it is suggested that if you can catch a crooner and forcibly cure him of his head cold, and then keep him out of drafts, you will have no more trouble with your radio. Unless, which sometimes happens, he is afflicted with twisted tonsils. In that case there is nothing to do but operate.

The hero, Buddy Baxter, "the Adonis of the air," manages to keep his great unseen public palpitating with curiosity by acquiring a permanent head cold. If he feels his throat clearing he turns on the electric fan and opens his shirt at the throat.

His rival, Gene Gallo, who has never been able to acquire the same adenoidal tone perfection of Buddy, is managed by a gangster, who, just before the first night Mellow Cigarets are going on the air with a Baxter program, abducts Buddy and is about to have his tonsils taken out when a rescue is staged in the nick of time.

The men who wrote "Heigh-Ho! Everybody" (Herbert Polesie and Jack MacGowan; Polesie did the first draft and MacGowan the rewriting), have failed to build a plausible foundation for their satire. Only the lines are funny, and these are stuck in, regardless, so they have little relation to characters or story. Joseph Santley does well as the crooner, Harry Rosenthal (remembered in "June Moon") is again a wisecracking pianist, and Edna Hibbard does what she can as a sort of added starter with quips.

New Arrangement Planned.

It took a year and the depression to bring it about, but it looks now as though we were going to make headway with that campaign we had a hand in launching a year ago—the campaign to bring selected plays and organized audiences together in both major and minor theatrical centers of the country.

Last week the Theater Guild entered into an agreement with the Messrs. Shubert and the Erlanger amusement interests whereby these three producing interests and formerly competitive combine in an organization to be known as the American Theater society.

As such society they undertake to provide their audiences of playgoing subscribers, organized on the road as far back as 1927 by the Guild and copied in 1929 by the Shuberts, with a series of worthy dramas next season, the plays to be selected by a committee of seven experienced playgoers from the productions of not only the parties to the agreement but those of independent managers as well.

The new arrangement should add twelve weeks of practically guaranteed time to the life of each worthy play. This, in turn, is pretty certain to have an effect on both the character of the plays produced and the care taken with their production.

Headliner

BENNY RUBIN.

This week's program of vaudeville acts at the Palace theater finds Benny Rubin and Jack Haley as headliners in a half hour revue. Rubin is familiar to Chicago theater-goers through his association with "Girl Crazy," the musical comedy which had a prosperous run at the Garrick last fall.

Broadway Is a Second Coney Island Now

By Tom Pettey.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Broadway in that fertile field between 40th and 50th streets is the best advertised amusement center in the world. It is there or in that vicinity that Manhattan's greatest talkie palaces, theaters and night clubs offer their wares to an ever changing public. The acre or two of steel, stone and pavement long has been ballyhooed as a spot to be seen even before setting out to visit the lesser seven wonders of the world. Anyway, that is what its press agents boast.

I recall that Longacre square was just that when I first walked its length ten years ago on this very month. I doubt very much if it could properly be described as a glittering show place today or even tonight. There are a dozen theaters lighted and forty dark. There are no more first class motion picture palaces along the street than one finds on similar amusement thoroughfares in other large cities. The pictures one sees are the same ones you saw at home last week. Great dirty, bare spots stand out on the walls of dingy buildings where posters and electric signs have been torn down.

Dark Spots Increase.

Night still brings glamour to Longacre square, but the darkened patches are growing malignantly. The spot has become tawdry and there are more morons than sophisticates pounding its well worn pavements, pressing noses against its cheap shop windows and flattening the upholstered seats of its popular priced places of amusement. The sector needs more paint on its buildings and less on its denizens.

Coney Island has moved into Longacre square and brought its customers along. This is what one finds today in Ballyhoo square along the subway: Elbow your way south from 50th street and you will find more strollers than customers. These folks neither toil, nor do they spend. The street itself is their carnival. There are the window exhibits in the "art shop" where every picture is a nude. Every other wall of plate glass covers a cut price bookshop, in front of which tight little groups of beady-eyed men and elbowing women stand breathing damply against the pane.

The men, for the most part, are a queer lot, and the women have rouged fingernails which do not altogether hide the dirt beneath them. They are busy obtaining a classical education in erotic literature, for these shops open their books where the text is hottest or the woodcuts the most suggestive. They never buy anything, for one page is about the limit of their mental capacity.

Outside the Burlesques.

There are three burlesque shows along the route with more robust art and reading matter. The more seasoned Broadway strollers long ago have taken up squatters' rights in front of these lobby and sidewalk exhibits. Seemingly, they remain in front of the undraped photographs permanently, manifesting no desire to see the living replicas on exhibition inside.

The five cent automatic shoe shining parlors play to large audiences, and the sidewalks in front of any one of the numerous tin pan alley sheet music shops usually is crowded with nonpaying music lovers. The make-your-own-phonograph-record places attract the curious and the idle like magnets draw steel, and one customer in a thirty-second-and-your-photo-is-made-shop can cause a traffic jam in front of the window.

The doughnut dunking mechanical man on the corner across from the Astor has created a permanent bulge in sidewalk traffic that should be marked by a police detour sign.

All along this tinseled way colored cheesecloth and painted paper flags decorate theater, and shop awnings advertise this and that birthday celebration. The windows are filled with five, ten, and twenty-five cent merchandise, for the merchants have learned the caliber of their customers.

Forty-second street has become the heart of this transplanted Coney Island. There the hawker, the ballyhoo artist, and the catchpenny peddlers reign. It is their happy hunting ground.

Candidates: Fish for Votes AmongAnglers!

Platform Calling for Bigger and Better Vacations Will Win in 1932.

By Bob Becker.

THIS being the year for presidential nominations, when prospective candidates are casting around for various kinds of planks, platforms or causes on which to base their campaigns, it is surprising that no politician has come out for bigger, better and longer vacations. What a vote getter that would be!

Chicagoland, adjacent to some of the most enjoyable and diversified summer playgrounds, should roll up a big vote for the candidate who takes up this kind of platform and at the same time points out the major attractions of these fishing, canoeing, camping, and touring sections.

The Poor Fish!

When something like 10,000,000 American voters regularly seek healthful recreation in fishing, some would be candidate must be overlooking a good bet by not inserting in his platform at least a vacation plank, along with a wet plank that concerns only such nonarid propositions as lakes rivers, and ponds which have fish in them.

If a campaign manager were to draw up an outline of the bigger better, and longer vacation platform with some hints on where the vacations might be found, this is the way it might sound before the peepul's choice hurled it from a speaking platform:

A fishing vacation . . . ah, consider this important fact, ladies and gentlemen. There may be troubles in the financial and industrial marts of the world, but there is no depression in the way the fish are biting this year. They're working the same old hours and under the same old rules.

The Wisconsin Idea.

And now mark an X in front of Wisconsin. . . . Look—3,500 lakes to tempt you and to offer you sport with rod and line, canoe, motorboat or what have you. Here is a vacationland: Lovely campsites, roads through green forests, comfortable summer camps and fishing resorts. Consider

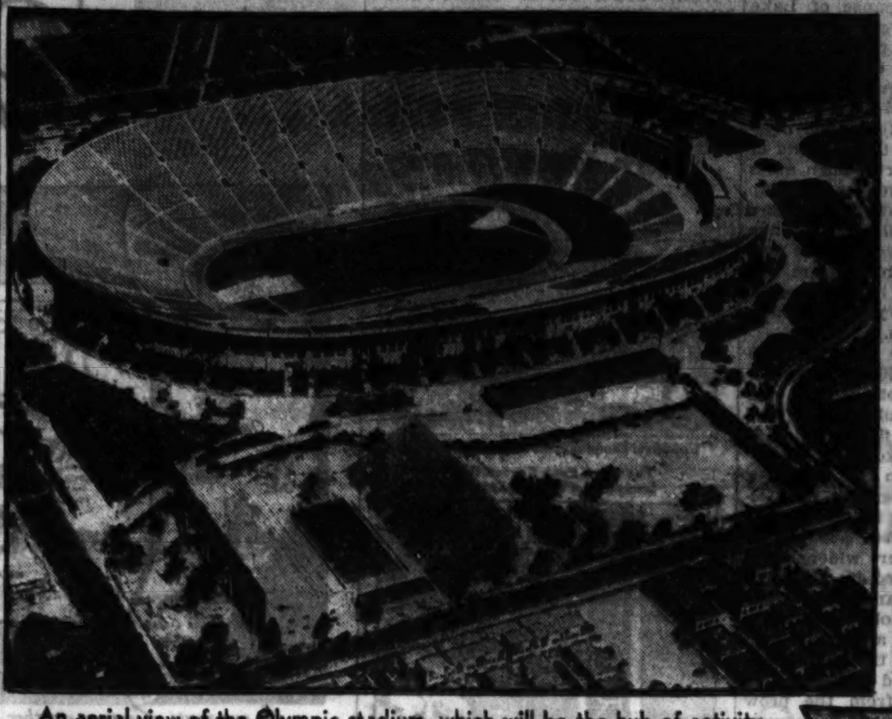
The Outdoors Beckons, and America Answers the Call



An aerial view of the Olympic stadium, which will be the hub of activity during the games of the Tenth Olympiad in Los Angeles July 30-Aug. 14.

What the well dressed young movie star is wearing in California this season. Miss Adrienne Dore in a modish one-piece bathing suit of ribbed wool, in lighter-than-navy, edged and belted in white. The movie folk, like all the rest of America, have a difficult time resisting the call of the outdoors.

The last one in is it at the opening of the Atlantic City beach for the summer season, but in this case the last one looks as if she doesn't care whether she is it or has it. Maybe it's a case of both.

The Vale of Enchantment is the name applied to this witchery of mountain crags, spruce, and blue water in the Stapps lake country of Colorado.

Prices Retreat All Along Line of Big Battle

Europe Raids the Dollar; Americans Raid Europe and U. S. with the Dollar.

By Frederic Babcock.

IT got sort of warm around here last week, and Mr. and Mrs. Chic Ago grew vacation conscious. They began looking up the ads.

I see where the Big Shots in the travel business have declared a moratorium on large payments this year, Chic said. I guess this summer we'll pay for what we get, and no more. Sometimes that was true in the boom days; sometimes it wasn't.

It says here that steamship rates are the lowest since the war and many of the railroad rates are the lowest in history, said the Mrs. It says the trans-Atlantic charges have been cut all the way from 20 to 50 per cent, and that both in this country and the old country the hotels and restaurants and resorts are keeping in step with the times.

Europe can raid the dollar all it wants to, Chic said, but Americans will raid Europe, and their own country, with a bigger dollar than ever before. We used to say that Europe could pay its debts with the money left behind by American tourists. That's all changed now. There isn't so much money left behind.

6,700 Miles for $90.

Mr. and Mrs. got down to travel fun-damentals. They found they could ride 6,700 miles, from Chicago to the Pacific northwest, and down to California, and through the southwest, for $90.30. They found they could go to Colorado and back for $43.05. They found they could take an all expense tour of Yellowstone, and Utah, and Colorado, for $196, everything included. They found they could take in the Canadian Rockies, along with the Pacific northwest, for $199, with everything paid for from the time they left home until they returned home.

These railroad tariffs were only samples. The rates of the bus lines, the air lines, and the steamship lines were correspondingly low. Everywhere—the national parks and the dude ranches of the Rockies, the lakes of Wisconsin, and Michigan, and Minnesota, the watering places of the

What to Do and What to Wear on Foreign Trip

Etiquette Editor Gives Pointers to Those Going to Europe for First Time.

By Helen Bartlett.

THE smart folk are skipping off to Europe. Not so much do we mean the picturesque smart people who are always dashing swiftly from here to there, being photographed en route by camera men who know their social register, as we do plain people who're just smart—sage souls who're meeting dat ol' debbil depression in a smart way.

They're turning their backs on him. Swapping a small table on a Paris boulevard in the Paris twilight for the average American dinner table, where conversation has taken a turn for the worse—from prohibition to the depression. In Europe what money they have looks like a lot more and goes a lot farther. Away they go.

Clothes and Baggage.

If it's a first trip, as it will be for a great many, it's apt to be beset with a few minor matters of perturbation—what clothes to take along, what clothes to wear, and, bane of a few men and all women, whom and how much to tip.

The consideration of clothes and baggage comes first; about both there is one tried, true, and trite rule: take as little as possible if you're going to tour. Live in and out of a suitcase or two if the trip will consist of hops and skips from place to place; if it will consist of lengthy lounges in one or two places one can conveniently take as much as one likes.

A trunk is an irritation and an expense on the average touring jaunt. Bags are best and the wise traveler has his no more than nine inches high, so that they can slide under Pullman seats and cabin bunks. He also has bags that are light in weight, because he knows that in Europe porters are neither as plentiful nor as helpful as they are here; his bags are light enough and of a size to handle himself in an emergency.

The Happy Medium.

One should try to establish a happy medium in this matter of luggage; not enough to be a nuisance, but enough to keep clothes in good order and permit packing and unpacking with efficiency. Men get a big break, because their clothes pack well; women's things are much more difficult, and women have the eternal problem of hats and shoes. For young women the latter problem is simplified by berets and noncrushable felts, but hats with shape and body to them require careful packing.

Every bag should be well tagged; the tags are obtainable from the tourist bureau, together with two other aids to unworried globe trotters—travelers' checks and baggage insurance, both heartily recommended.

As for clothes, one should remember that London and Paris summers are not like ours. There are only a few weeks in which women can wear light silk frocks; light weight and for practical reasons not too light colored woolens are much the best. And comfortable shoes are essential—cobbled streets and gallery floors demand dark, low heeled shoes. A raincoat and an umbrella also are essential.

Evening Wear.

If one plans to cross on pretentious liners and stop at the larger hotels, one simply must have evening clothes. For women this means dinner or simple evening frocks; for men, dinner jackets on the boat and tails for grand festivities in Europe.

On board ship women wear sports clothes, with low heeled shoes and brimmed hats or berets; in the evening with the exception of the first night out this is changed for an afternoon or evening costume. Passengers traveling first class usually wear evening dress; most of those traveling second do, too; those traveling tourist need not unless they wish. On cabin boats of all one class those who want to be gay wear evening dress; those who prefer not to needn't feel obliged to do so.

During the day on ship board men wear business suits—tweeds, or wool, or serges, with a cap rather than a hat. Knickerbockers should not be worn. In the evening if the men wish to dress they change to dinner jackets, otherwise a dark business suit or some sort of a compromise.

The Moving Finger Points—

Jack Frost points to Opabin pass, over which one proceeds to Prospector's valley, behind Moraine lake. All of which is a few miles south of Lake Louise, in the Canadian Rockies.

Low Rates to Olympic Games on West Coast

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 4.—Assurance that visitors to Los Angeles during the Olympic games, July 30 to Aug. 14, will be protected against inflated prices has been given by heads of the organizing committee.

With transportation companies and the city's leading hotels and restaurants coöperating under agreement with the committee to hold prices down to a certain figure, tourists from eastern states and the midwest may look forward to attending the games at "excursion" rates.

Although the cost of attending will depend largely upon individual tastes, Chicagoans can make the trip for as little as $177.60 per person, according to a checkup here of hotel and restaurant prices and railroad rates. This figure represents necessary expenditures and does not include money spent for pleasure or the cost of meals en route to Los Angeles.

$90 for Round Trip.

Generally speaking, the round trip fare between Chicago and Los Angeles will be $90. This is the average tourist rate and does not represent the special excursion rate which several of the railroads are reported preparing to offer just before the opening date.

Upon arriving in Los Angeles the visitors can spend as little or as much for living expenses as they choose. To protect them against suddenly inflated rates, however, representatives of the leading hotels, apartment houses and restaurants held a meeting recently and announced they would not only maintain their standard prices, but that they will strenuously oppose the efforts of any individual concerns to gouge the traveler.

Tourists are one of Los Angeles,' in fact, all California's, chief stocks in trade—bringing this state more money than oranges, or even movies—and with the realization that pleasure-seekers will swarm to the city from all parts of the world to attend the great international amateur sports celebration, heads of the organizing committee and civic groups are anxious that the visitors return home singing hymns of praise, not protest.

$22 for Season Pass.

Like those of any other large city, hotel rates in Los Angeles extend over a wide range. Comfortable rooms, with bath, in most of the modern and better class hostelries, however, range from $2.50 to $5 per day. Persons staying at one of these hotels, and averaging $2.50 as the amount paid for their room, need not spend more than $40 for lodging during the sixteen days and nights that the Olympic games continue. Even more reasonable rates are offered by less centrally situated hotels.

Jasper National Park Includes 5,000 Sq. Miles

JASPER NATIONAL PARK, Canada.—Once the route of the fur traders, Jasper National park is now the playground of thousands of tourists — mountain climbers, trail riders, hikers, golfers, big game hunters with the camera, and lookers on.

It spreads over an area of more than 5,000 square miles and into its sweep it takes the magnificent valley of the river which ultimately finds its release into the arctic; range after range of mountains, splendid in their loftiness and their eternal snow and ice, many of them still unclimbed and unnamed; hundreds of enchanting lakes and waterfalls; motor roads, and trails.

Three miles south of the town of Jasper lies a summer hotel, having accommodation for 650 guests. A more unhotel-like hotel could not be imagined.

With the largest log cabin in the world as the center, the lodge spreads itself in a series of log bungalows along the shore of a mountain lake whose still water is incredibly green. Its golf course, where the Canadian amateur championship has been played and where other championship events take place yearly, ranks among the finest in the world.

Jasper National park is a wild animal preserve, and one of the delights of the summer visitor is the opportunity he has for intimate glimpses of deer, mountain sheep, and goats, bears, moose, beaver, elk, caribou, and any number of the smaller fry.

One of the motor trips brings the traveler to the foot of the ice of the Edith Cavell glacier; another takes him to Maligne cañon, one of the natural wonders of the park. Trail rides open up new aspects of valley and slope. Automobiles for part of the way and horses for the rest make accessible the Miette hot springs.

But the supreme trip is that to Maligne lake. Eighteen miles long, closely surrounded by towering ice-clad peaks, it is the largest and one of the most beautiful lakes in the Canadian Rockies.

Lake of Woods Place to Find Muskies, Trout

LAKE OF THE WOODS, with its 16,000 pine covered islands, is surely the place to go for the world's largest muskies, salmon trout, and northern pike. It is here each year Chicago anglers win fame with catches of many prize winning fish.

Situated just across the Minnesota boundary line in the northwestern part of the state, Lake of the Woods touches a part of Minnesota, a part of Manitoba, and a part of Ontario. The best fishing is to be found in the part that is owned by the province of Ontario, and it is here that the world's record muskellunge and the world's record salmon trout were taken. A muskie weighing 56½ pounds was caught last year by J. W. Collins while he was fishing in Sabaskong bay.

According to Edward H. Fabrice, noted Chicago fisherman, there is something fascinating about fishing for muskellunge in Lake of the Woods that quite defies explanation. You may fish for the elite of the fishes of the world, both in fresh and salt waters—swordfish, tuna, tarpon, and so on down the line, but in the muskie of Lake of the Woods you find a noble and lordly Esox nobilior that is never to be forgotten.

First of all he is a fighter because any fish taken in icy cold glacial waters is a warrior, and second he has been there so long and with such an abundance of food that he has grown to greater proportions than in any other lake on the continent.

Fabrice states that in fishing for muskies the trolling method is much in vogue, but in Lake of the Woods little trolling is done, 90 per cent of the fishing being casting the lure much the same as bait casting for black bass. Spoon hooks ranging from number 9 to number 12 in size are most commonly in use, although plugs are popular, especially those that are made in the jointed variety.

2,000 Miles of Scenery Given on Cruises of the Great Lakes

A CRUISE of the great lakes combines rest and recreation in exactly the right proportion for a vacation. The trip offers an opportunity to commune with nature and to do some fascinating sightseeing.

Two thousand miles of varied scenery slip by the bow of the ship. First the towering skyline of Chicago and then the vast expanse of Lake Michigan meet the eye as the ship pulls away from Navy pier.

On the second day out Mackinac island comes into view—a treasure island for tourists. Old Indian trails, the Natural Arch, old forts, and mysterious caves vie with the delights of a modern summer resort. Then miles and miles of Lake Huron as the ship slips into British waters—Georgian bay, noted for its 30,000 islands. They seem to slide by in a continuous procession, some rising high from the water, others floating like flat rafts, some covered with heavy verdure, and others just gray rocks.

Now a closeup of a Canadian village, Parry Sound. Narrow, cobble stone streets, quaint cottages and costumes. Indians in full regalia and little French-Canadian flower girls add interest to the shore excursion.

A leisurely sail down the River St. Clair, where huge freighters pass silently like ships in the night. To the left the Canadian shores are plainly visible until the river widens into Lake St. Clair, bordered by beautiful country estates. A change to a motor coach, and the automobile industries of Detroit, Belle Isle, and the Aquarium unroll before the traveler's eyes.

Back to the ship, and as the waters of Lake Erie ripple from the prow the scenery includes more waterway, then Cleveland, another port of call, and, after a restful night's sleep, Buffalo, the gateway to the St. Lawrence. Here the cruisers become landlubbers again and from a motor coach watch the panorama of the city unfold.

The climax of the trip is Niagara falls. An entire day is devoted to viewing the falls and environs. The rapids, the gorge, the horseshoe, the American falls, and the trip upon the "Maid of the Mist" are included.

Go one route, return another, see the whole Pacific Coast at no added fare and Southern Pacific adds, in effect, A FREE TICKET between Los Angeles and Seattle

Southern Pacific offers you a new privilege with the summer roundtrips to the West: See the whole Pacific Coast — at no added cost! Of course no railroad can give tickets away, but this new privilege virtually amounts to a free ticket between Los Angeles in southern California and Seattle in the evergreen Pacific Northwest. Use two of Southern Pacific's Four Great Routes and get this extra value.

Suppose that your destination is Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland or Seattle. You can go straight to any one of these cities and back at the summer fare of $90.30. But under Southern Pacific's new privilege, on a roundtrip to any of these cities you can enter California on the Sunset or Golden State Route, enjoy southern California, then northern California, continuing on through Oregon and Pacific Northwest and returning on any northern United States or Canadian line. Or you can reverse the order, going direct to Victoria, Vancouver or to Seattle and then on down the coast. In either case the rail fare is not 1¢ more than $90.30.

Sample Roundtrip Itinerary

When buying your ticket make sure that the places you want to visit en route to and on the Pacific Coast are on your ticket. Study the map for a moment. Note how by going one Southern Pacific Route, returning another, you add variety and interest to your trip, without adding to the cost. Many variations are possible. Stopover anywhere. Here's one sample itinerary:

WINTHROP HIGHLANDS, MASS.

Candidates: Fish for Votes Among Anglers!

Platform Calling for Bigger and Better Vacations Will Win in 1932.

these reasons why [among others] you should think about Wisconsin.

The hundreds of miles of trout streams in Langlade county, including the big Wolf river east of Antigo. The many attractive lake regions among which may be mentioned those around Three Lakes, Eagle river, Sayner, Land o' Lakes, Woodruff, and Minocqua, Rhinelander, the Flambeau Indian reservation, Manitowish, and Mercer. For a thrilling river cruise don't foregt the Flambeau river from Park Falls to Ladysmith. [If you can't see at least 12 deer a day you need new glasses.] And then the famous Chippewa river flowage near Hayward, as well as Teal, Spider, Ghost, Round and other lakes in that vicinity.

At the End of the Rainbow.

And now let us present Michigan—another big feature in the bigger vacation plank. Look, ladies and gentlemen, the Muskegon river for a vacation thrill. Take a float down that stream for rainbow trout and small mouth black bass fishing . . . from the Croton dam to Newaygo. Wonderful fly rod water, fast and snappy. Then the Pere Marquette east of Ludington for trout fishing. Then on to Mesick on highway 42 for giant northern pike in a back water lakes of the Manistee. Big rainbows, 3, 5, 7, 8 pounds in this same back water. Take a trip on the Manistee, one of the greatest trout rivers in the middle west.

Also make a note in your notebook to visit the Traverse City country when it's cherry time. [Paint the picture how a fisherman can catch small mouth bass and pike in Lake Leelanau while using the right hand and with the left eat ripe sweet cherries.] Leelanau is a blue green lake. Looks like water around a coral reef in the West Indies. Lake trout here, too, as well as off North point in Lake Michigan.

And in the upper peninsula of Michigan put an X on the Hiawatha coutnry. See Tahquamenon falls, in the river of that name; camp on Manistique lake and catch a string of fish; then shoot a golf ball over a brook trout water hazard in a north woods golf course near Blaney. Catch some big brook trout in the Driggs river. And let Uncle Sam entertain you in his new Hiawatha national forest south of Munising.

Sterling Vote Getters.

Minnesota. . . . The Superior National forest and the Quetico will win many votes. New lakes to explore by canoe.

Winton is the shoving off place. Hundreds of miles of lake and stream canoe routes, big game, untouched fishing water, and all this only a little more than overnight from Chicagoland. Then the bass lakes around Marcell and Deer river also are vote getters. Mille Lacs and Leech lake for fishing in an old Indian atmosphere. And park your car somewhere in the Park Rapids area, the country of big muskies.

Look at the fishing votes in those lakes situated in the triangle between the towns of Wadena, Detroit, and Fegus Falls, another section that has attractions for all rod and line enthusiasts.

Canada. . . . The home of the world's champion muskalunge. . . . The famous Lake of the Woods region. Here is where the muskie runs way ahead of the ticket. Comfortable camps and great fishing reached from Emo, Fort Francis, and Rainey river. Crow lake, Sabaskong bay, White Fish bay, White Fish narrows. It's a landslide for the Hon. Muskie Lunge, the bait caster's favorite.

The big day is July 1, the opening of the muskie season.

Another big Canadian vote getter will be the Nipigon, the home of the world's champion brok trout.

They Can't Be Wrong.

Take it from Lewis Radcliffe, deputy commissioner of the United States bureau of fisheries, 10,000,000 fishermen can't be wrong in this fishing vacation idea.

Moreover, the commissioner says the fishing vacation is a remedy against the ill effect of office grind and the worry of budget balancing. Izaak Walton lived to the age of 90!

In the Heart of the Dude Ranch Country

Brook's lake, in northwest Wyoming, is regarded by many as the last word in western scenery. It is in the heart of the dude ranch country; some of the dudes are shown here.

east, the scenic places of the far west, the wilderness of the far north—the word seemed to have gone forth to slash the charges and get the crowds.

More for the Money.

In Europe the policy of giving the globe trotter a break had been brought on, it appeared, by economic conditions. Many factors had played their part. One of them lay in the fact that a number of countries, including England, Denmark, Norway, and Sweden, had abandoned the gold standard and their currency had depreciated in terms of the dollar. The result was that Americans carrying travelers' checks could buy more foreign currency and more foreign value than they could a year or more ago.

For instance, the pound sterling was worth about a dollar less last week than it was twelve months ago. At the new rate of exchange one could get a room and meals in a good hotel in London for less than $4 a day. In countries that had maintained the gold standard, prices had been slashed to meet the competition. Paris restaurants classed as smart were offering elaborate dinners, with wine, for a dollar. Hotels classed as luxurious in Switzerland were charging $4 a day, European plan. German rates were down 30 per cent. In the Austrian Tyrol and the Italian Dolomites, Mr. and Mrs. Ago learned, one could live, and have a swell time, on from $10 to $15 a week.

Viewed in a New Light.

The cathedrals, the museums, the spas, the castles, the universities and the scenic beauties of the old world were the same as before, but this year they were to be viewed in a new light, and by thousands who never could afford to view them before. The office worker with a few hundred dollars and a few weeks to spare could go overseas for not much more than what he used to pay for a vacation at the seashore or in the mountains in this country.

The way the Agos figured it, last year the average vacation trip to Europe cost all the way from $1,300 for a six weeks' tour, first class, to $400 for a month's tour, tourist class. This year the $1,300 had dropped to $920, and the $400 was off $100. The Agos discovered that, if they wished to be really thrifty, they could make a three weeks' journey to London and Paris for $165 apiece. They learned that first class passage is now down to $132 on some ships, and round trip tourist passage down to $140.

A Weighty Decision.

Far into the night the Agos scratched their heads and Junior's tablet, and the next morning Chic decided—or maybe it was the Mrs.—that it was a pretty good time for him to leave his business in the hands of the office boy [who couldn't make it much worse than it was already], and pack up Ma and the kids and light out for Europe or Yellowstone, or Minocqua or Madagascar.

Half Population of Argentina Live in, Near Buenos Aires

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina.—(AP)—The city and province of Buenos Aires embrace half of Argentina's population, according to 1932 census estimates.

The province, about the size of New Mexico, is the largest of the republic's fourteen. The city constitutes a federal district.

Together they have 5,252,583 habitants with 3,099,383 in the province and 2,153,200 in the capital.

In the Social Swim.

HAVANA.—Something believed to be unique in night clubs was opened here recently in the fashionable Vedado section. The "Ocho y Diecinueve" [Eight and Nineteen] not only has the customary dance floor, bar and grill, but in the same patio boasts a swimming pool lighted from the bottom. Those who yearn for night life may dance, drink or swim.

Beauty Blends with History at Starved Rock

ONE of the scenic centers of the middle west is Starved Rock state park, on the banks of the Illinois river and slightly more than 100 miles from the loop. Here in the 17th century explorers made history. Here today is the same beauty which once formed a background for bloody Indian battles.

Views up and down the river from Starved Rock and other giant bluffs in the primitive preserve will linger long in the memory of city "cliff dwellers." Hikes over the thrilling canyon trails or through the fern covered maze of the "jungle" will bring a new idea of the grandeur that may be found within a three hours' drive from the city.

Geographically the park is a 900 acre tract of wooded bluff land, mostly covered with timber and wrinkled by cool canyons, lying along the south bank of the Illinois midway between Ottawa and La Salle.

On summer Sundays and holidays it is not unusual for 25,000 and more persons to spend a few delightful daylight hours climbing cliffs or cavorting in canyons—but without getting in each other's way.

Poles Will Stay Home.

WARSAW.—(AP)—Few Poles will travel this year. The government doubled the fee for single round-trip passports to $44. The cost for yearly passports was quadrupled to $180.

Age-Old Trail Newest Door to Yellowstone

MORE than a hundred years ago a wounded man seeking safety after an Indian skirmish stumbled into a fantastic land—a land of sparkling geysers, of hot springs and bubbling crates of boiling mud. Seemingly it was earth's eternal fires framed in by rugged mountain walls. The man who made this discovery was John Colter, a member of the Lewis and Clark expedition. The land he discovered is today Yellowstone National park.

As a prelude to a trip through Yellowstone one may now enter the park through Gallatin gateway—an age-old trail that holds vivid reminders of the romantic west of fiction.

Gallatin gateway is south of Three Forks, Mont. The town itself is interesting because of its historical background and the part pioneers played in the region immediately surrounding the city. Relics of Lewis and Clark's gallant trek, and memories to those associated with it, still stir the hearts of visitors to the Three Forks region. One of the interesting tablets is that erected to Sacajawea, the young Indian princess who guided Lewis and Clark over this portion of their trail.

The Gallatin valley also was the dark and bloody battlefield of the Blackfeet, the Crows, the Nez Perces, and hostile tribes who dared trespass on their sacred ground. Today the picturesque valley is a mine of wealth for the irrigation farmer, just as it was a remunerative country for fur trappers and placer miners many years ago.

At Gallatin gateway, where the railroad ends and the trail to Yellowstone begins, stands a mountain-cradled hostelry, semi-Spanish in design, resembling nothing so much as a charming country club. Travelers to and from the park find their stay at the inn one of the enjoyable features of the trip. It is at this point that the large motor coaches start their 85 mile trip up the Gallatin canyon to Yellowstone.

Soon after leaving the inn the traveler passes through the Gallatin gateway arch, built of trees hundreds of years old. Nearby is Sheep mountain, where, according to legendary history, Indians drove herds of sheep to their death over the steep, rocky sides and thus staved off the starvation their foes had counted upon.

From then on everything is a rainbow of color.

CRUISE to the heart of Old French-Canada. We take you by rail to Toronto, Queen City of Canada, where your foreign adventure begins. You set sail on a luxurious steamer, one of the world's largest fresh water fleet. You will visit, en route, Montreal—the metropolis, and the fortress city of Quebec, Gibraltar of North America.

You will cruise among the Thousand Islands—set like a thousand jewels in azure blue waters, experience the thrills of shooting the great St. Lawrence Rapids. Near Quebec you will pay your respects at the miracle shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupré and hear the thunder of Montmorency Falls, higher than Niagara.

Beyond Quebec the high Laurentians follow the St. Lawrence and you cruise in the shadow of these ancient mountains. The steamer puts in at fashionable Murray Bay, and quaint and lovely Tadoussac, Canada's oldest settlement. The glory of the Saguenay River, seen at sunset and again at dawn, is a spectacle to impress the most widely travelled. The wild grandeur of Trinity Bay, guarded by the tremendous capes, Trinity and Eternity—the ship's siren reverberating like giant laughter among the eternal hills—gives you a touch of the loneliness, austerity and beauty of the silent places.

A spirit of gaiety prevails for the entire journey, and there is not a dull moment on ship or shore. You dance every evening to the music of a lively orchestra. Delicious meals satisfy ravenous appetites. You will vote this the best vacation ever.

Remember, every expense on this enjoyable cruise has been foreseen and included in the figure quoted above, as well as stop-overs at important hotels en route. A courteous escort relieves you of every travel worry.

Tours by Bus Give Much for Little Money

Budgets Are Balanced When Travel Expense Is Cut to Minimum.

THERE have been few years when most people needed carefree vacations as much as they need them in 1932. At the same time, there have been few years when vacation budgets needed more careful balancing than they do this year. Nickels must be watched. Vacations must be economical.

One of the best answers to this puzzler is the idea of all-expense vacation tours by motor bus. One tours companys, operating in conjunction with a nation-wide bus system, has laid out a series of all-expense tours to the principal vacation points in the east—tours designed to do away entirely with travel worries and to cut travel expenses to the minimum.

A two day tour to Niagara Falls is one of the biggest attractions on the list. The trip includes the Great Gorge trip along both the Canadian and American sides of the falls, riding on open air electric cars.

In a Steel Basket.

Only this Great Gorge trip can give a full idea of the vastness and magnificence of Niagara. For miles the cars roll along the water's edge, watching at close range the swirling flood as it rushes headlong toward the brink, and listening to the fearful roar of the torrent plunging over the falls.

Another thrill of the Niagara tour is the trip across Whirlpool rapids in the Spanish aero car, a sturdy steel basket that swings over the flood on pulleys suspended from a steel cable. Then there is the boat trip up to the very base of the cataract. The tour gives two full days of sightseeing.

If Niagara proves to be too much magnificence to digest in two days, one can stay longer, the all-expense tickets carrying a 60 day return privilege.

New York Night Life.

Even theater tickets and night club suppers are included in a four day tour of New York. One has an evening at a café, a performance at any Broadway show he may pick, a matinée, a trip to Coney Island, and a sightseeing tour which includes Greenwich Village, the Ghetto, Chinatown, Wall street, the Bowery, Tombs prison.

A two day tour to the Thousand Islands region of the St. Lawrence river includes two fascinating boat trips. One is a grand tour of the Thousand Islands, wherein one sees all the labyrinthine channels and such attractions as the old French military works on Carleton island, the Out of Sight channel, Peel's dock, and the Fiddler's Elbow. The other boat trip takes one to Brockville, Ont., across the border in Canada, where one can plan meals and refreshments with less legal restrictions than on this side of the line.

Seeing Canada.

If one is an enthusiast for Canadian atmosphere, he'll like the four day Montreal and Quebec tour. In Montreal he'll see Notre Dame church, the old French section, Brother Andre's shrine, and mile after mile of the superb St. Lawrence river. Then an overnight boat trip to Quebec, with a sightseeing tour in Quebec the next day. On the morning of the fourth day he'll return to Montreal, retracing by bus his nocturnal boat trip.

A three day tour to Philadelphia and Atlantic City, visiting all the old shrines of American independence and all the modern delights of the premier Atlantic coast resort; a two day tour of Detroit, including a personally conducted tour of the Ford plant and an evening performance at one of Detroit's theaters; a three day trip through historic Boston, seeing Bunker Hill, Boston Common, the site of the Boston massacre, Faneuil hall, Christ church, the road that Paul Revere rode. Then today's Boston—Back Bay, Harvard university, and Brookline.

The Land of Lakes.

Although a trip through the lake country of Minnesota and Wisconsin is not included in a prearranged motor coach trip, a great many Chicago vacationers are casting interested looks at the map of the Land of Ten Thousand Lakes.

The map shows them a region dotted, streaked and splashed with an unbelievable number of blue spots, denoting lakes. It also shows a far reaching net of black lines, denoting highways. Over these highways runs one of the best developed and most efficient motor bus systems in the world.

Michigan to Play Host All Summer

VISITORS to Michigan this summer will not have to provide their own entertainment. Besides the local entertainment put on by hotels, resorts, and communities, there will be events of midstate and national importance.

Late in June Saugatuck will be host to the Chicago Yacht club and will provide races for many types of boats. On July 2, 3, and 4 Spring Lake Yacht club will open its season with a program of sailing and power boat races, dancing, and fireworks. During the week of July 16 the Michigan amateur championship golf tournament will be held at Blythfield Country club, Grand Rapids. On July 14, 15, and 16 Traverse City offers the national cherry festival in an enlarged program of parades, pageantry, and frolic, with its cherry queens and cherry pies. July at Charlevoix and Harbor Springs will have two weeks of tennis tournaments, bringing together national figures in the tennis world.

From Aug. 4 to 8 the national shuffleboard championships will be held at Traverse City, which has the second largest courts in the United States.

Aug. 5, 6, and 7 will see the West Michigan Yachting association regatta at Spring Lake, with more than 200 boats taking part.

Aug. 6, 7, and 8 at Manistee the outboard racers will congregate from all over the country and from some foreign countries. It is expected that more than 300 boats will be on hand.

Kill Australian Dingos.

BRISBANE.—(AP)—The dingo, or Australian wild dog, pest has been much reduced in Queensland under the government's bounty of 75 cents a scalp. Good hunters can destroy them in scores.

Dude Ranching Enthusiasts Get Togs Together

Return to Same Mountain Trails, Trout Streams Year After Year.

A HIGH hat with a band of woven horsehair, flaming neckerchief, silver mounted belt, pink silk shirt, and some riding boots of peculiar design. . . .

The dude ranch enthusiasts are getting together their togs and trappings against the day in June when they will board a train for Sheridan, Cody, Red Lodge, Missoula, Lander, Big Timber, or some place else out there for a vacation in the land of sunshine and saddle leather.

The articles of wearing apparel enumerated are correct, by the way, for either sex, until you come to the pants. He wears orthodox riding breeches. She wears, today, long trousers of white corduroy; tomorrow a short, divided leather skirt with fringe or whatever you call it, that falls somewhat short of her knees. Next day, maybe, regular riding breeches—but usually she'll prefer plain dungarees of blue denim—overall material—stuffed casually into boot-tops. Sometimes a frock, it's true. You can't be sure what she'll be wearing, if you put your money on the dungarees, you'll win three times out of five.

Disciples of the doctrine that "the outside of a horse is good for the inside of a man," take their horseback straight—riding the trails that run back and up into the mountains, or wind in and out among the foothills and beyond to the endless plains.

They get their ultra-violet rays direct from the brilliant and ever lasting sunshine of Wyoming and Montana, and sleep under blankets. For those who want it there are miles of free mountain climbing for the good of the legs, lungs, and appetite, and in the lakes and the streams some of the finest trout fishing in the world.

National Parks Are Symphony of Color, Form

A Side Trip to One Would Add Much to Pleasure of Tour to Coast.

A TRIP to one of the national parks in the west should be the answer to many who find it hard to decide on vacation travel this year. Perhaps you are one who is planning to attend the Olympic games in Los Angeles, the American Legion convention in Portland, the Shrine convention in San Francisco, the Rotary convention in Seattle, or any of the other numerous conventions which are being held on the Pacific coast this year. A side trip to one of the national parks would add much to the pleasure of your tour to the western coast and very little to the cost.

Rocky Mountain National park, a short distance out of Denver, is the closest of the western parks to the east. This park includes 401 square miles of some of the noblest mountain scenery in the Rockies—or, for that matter, in the world. Every morning during the summer powerful motor buses make their scheduled rounds of Denver hotels and pick up passengers for two, three, or four day tours of the park. For one who loves the tranquil grandeur of the mountains and life out of doors, Colorado is a veritable paradise.

At Salt Lake City, famed for its Mormon temple, one turns southwestward to visit the spectacular region of southern Utah. Here are the national parks—Zion, Grand Cañon, and Bryce Cañon National parks, the Cedar Breaks, and Kaibab National forest. The word "colorful" is the adjective commonly used in describing these regions. There is color in a bewildering variety of shades, tints, and combinations, overlaid on colossal buttes, rock temples, and chasms of breath-taking grandeur.

Unlimited Splendor.

Zion National park is a symphony of color, form, and friendliness. Its stupendous gorge with mighty tinted walls in every shade of color offers a limitless variety of splendor.

Kaibab National forest with its virgin stands of pine, spruce, and fir trees, artistically intermixed with charming aspen copses is home to thousands of graceful deer and to the rare and beautiful white-tailed squirrel.

Grand cañon, thirteen miles from rim to rim, presents an endless aspect of terraces and gorges—scarlet in the sunlight—tempered to purple and to liquid silver in the shadows.

The vast natural amphitheater that is Bryce Cañon National park displays another mood of nature most amazing and enchanting. Standing on the rim of this cañon, one gazes upon all of the fairy cities of fabledom, painted in every color of the spectrum.

Cedar Breaks as viewed from the rim—a vast expanse more massive than Bryce cañon, yet less delicate of form—is a riot of color, unbelievably beautiful.

Two Million Dollar Roadway.

All of these wonders of southern Utah are within a short distance of each other. Millions of dollars have been invested by the government in improving the highways linking these national parks. Most spectacular of all is the Mount Carmel highway, officially dedicated in 1930. Completed at a cost of over two million dollars, this roadway affords magnificent views of Zion park. At one point it triumphantly travels through a great tunnel over a mile in length cut through solid rock. The tunnel is pierced at six points by great windows, each window, or portal, framing a panorama of superb beauty.

Las Vegas, Nev., is the tour point from which most readily to reach Hoover dam, the greatest piece of engineering construction in the entire world. In size, Hoover dam will be as great as all dams ever constructed by the United states reclamation service put together. Lying 26 miles to the southeast of Las Vegas, Hoover dam is reached by convenient, comfortable motor stages.

In addition to the natural beauties of California, the state offers four national parks. These are Sequoia National park, General Grant National park, Yosemite National park, and Lassen Volcanic National park. Each is distinctive in its charm and depiction of the whims of nature.

Oregon boasts of one national park—Crater lake. This lake is a gem of loveliest blue, set in a great bowl of colorful lava, its rim a thousand feet above the level of the water. With every change of atmosphere the hues of the lake and wall vary, producing a mysterious beauty that is incomparable. In some remote age this was a great volcano. Then some mighty cataclysm caused the summit of the volcano to collapse, leaving the huge gaping crater which now holds this bluest of blue lakes.

Once a Huge Volcano.

Mount Rainier National park is close to Tacoma, Wash. This mountain also was at one time a huge volcano, belching fire, steam, and flaming lava. During the centuries its fires were quenched and then, through a long period of time, great glaciers formed upon its summit and began pouring slowly down its sides. Today it exhibits the largest and most impressive single peak glacier system in the United States.

Yellowstone is the largest of the national parks and was the first to be established anywhere. The natural wonders of this area stand in a setting of mountain grandeur and forest loveliness, running half a hundred miles each way into Wyoming, Idaho, and Montana. This park is world renowned for its abundance of wild life, its geysers, Yellowstone lake, fossil forests, Grand cañon of the Yellowstone river, and its hot springs.

Herds of buffalo, antelope, elk, and deer roam the park. The bears are famous for their friendliness and their willingness to pose for photographs for a sweet. Perhaps the best known of all of the hundred geysers found here is Old Faithful, which erupts regularly every 60 to 80 minutes. Yellowstone lake has a peculiar charm in its unique location. Here, at an elevation of almost 8,000 feet, is one of the largest and loveliest lakes outside of the great lakes.

Rich in Springs and Pools.

The Grand cañon of the Yellowstone is spectacular for its grandeur, majesty, and color. Its precipitous sides, 1,200 feet high, glowing with color, are carved and fretted in a thousand curious formations. The magnificent Great falls in the river are twice as high as Niagara. The 4,000 hot springs, mud volcanos, bubbling pools, and similar fantastic phenomena of nature add greatly to the weird charm of Yellowstone National park.

Where the Swallows Live

A glimpse of one of the unusual rock formations along the Dells of the Wisconsin river. The Dells and the other resort regions have given the state the nickname of "Fishconsin."

Roll Your Own.

HAVANA—Visitors from the United States who prefer their favorite smokes to those of Cuban manufacture may now bring two cartons, or a total of 400 cigarets, without paying duty or tax of any kind, under the provisions of a law recently enacted by the Cuban congress.

Trout Found in Large Numbers in West Michigan

DAYS of rod and reel and fish in the creel have arrived again in western Michigan.

The thrill of "pulling in" speckled, German brown, and rainbow trout after being led over logs, stumps, through bushes along the wilderness bordered western Michigan trout streams has already been the experience of trout fishermen this year.

Rainbows, the largest and gamest of the trout family, have been found in increasing number in the western Michigan streams.

Name Seafront "Simonelle."

OUISTREHAM, France.—(AP)—The seafront promenade of this channel fishing village has been named for the late Aristide Briand because he used to come here to sail his yacht.

Trails to Beauty Opened at Banff

FOR the last thirty years the names of Banff and Lake Louise, in the Canadian Rockies, have meant almost the last word in scenery, even though the park areas were not then developed by paths, trails, and roads as they are today.

And visitors to the Olympic games this summer, to Alaska or to the Canadian Rockies will be able to choose among three hotels at Banff springs, Lake Louise, and Emerald lake as well as six bungalow camps in that district, each situated in a distinctly different setting.

The opportunity is now presented to enjoy trail trips into spectacular regions, to spend some time at nearby ranches or to proceed on a six and one-half day schedule which includes a trip through the most scenic parts at a low cost.

Farther Greens Are Greener, It Would Seem

Which Leads Chicagoland Golfer to Wander Far Away from Home.

By Charles Bartlett.

THE annual epidemic of that peculiar golfing affliction which drives the victim from the home fairways and greens is upon us, and there probably will be no abatement until the melancholy days of autumn are here again. Already the symptoms of this perennial malady have manifested themselves, and even now trains, planes, and autos are carrying away the patients to places where the cure may be taken.

This disease consists of a dissatisfaction on the part of the victim with his own course and an urge to seek new ones to conquer. It isn't that he doesn't want to play the old layout any more, but rather that he's seeing a bit too much of it. So he sits him down and begins to peruse booklets telling of other courses, the farther away the better. This is the early stage of the ailment, but it does not become fully aggravated until the victim realizes that his annual two weeks' vacation is at hand. Then it is that he begins to wonder where he will test out his mashie shot and putting stroke.

He Must Travel.

There's no real reason, of course, why a golfer should leave Chicagoland for variety in courses. It is the home of the Western and Chicago District Golf associations, two governing bodies which control what is undoubtedly the largest concentrated golfing area in the world. In the metropolitan area alone there are more than 200 private, semi-public, and daily fee courses, an assortment which the average golfer could not cover if he were to play a different one each day until October.

Generally, however, the patient cannot be cured in home surroundings. He may be a trifle weary of dropping his approaches on that tricky tenth green at his own club. Possibly the home fairways are beginning to pall for him and his game. He wants to see what he could do on a course he's never been over. That's when the malady reaches its peak.

Taking the Cure.

A diagnosis having been made, the question now is to find a cure. In a continent where golf courses dot the map from Mexico City to Calgary and from Long island to the Pacific there is not much difficulty in finding cures. It's a case of finding where to go.

Golfing motorists toss their sticks into their cars and, taking any point on the compass, start out from Chicago and find enough courses to keep them more than busy for two weeks or a month.

Watching the Big Shots.

If you're a golfer who likes to see how the big boys do it, you'll have to point your car toward the east this year. The national open championship, called the world's biggest golf tournament, will be played at the Fresh Meadow club at Flushing, N. Y. The amateurs will go to Baltimore to try and take away Francis Ouimet's title, and the national intercollegiate struggle will be decided at White Sulphur Springs. The public parks title will be played for at Louisville, and the western open at Cleveland.

Atlantic City Goes Back to Pre-War Prices

ATLANTIC CITY.—This resort, the self-appointed agency for leading the nation out of gloom and depression, has announced plans for a season gayer than known to resort seekers since pre-war days—and at pre-war prices.

Rates at beachfront hostelries, and hotels away from the beach, have been reduced to pre-war levels, and railroad rates have been scaled to the lowest possible minimum, in many instances representing a reduction of 45 per cent. . . .

Two new automobile highways, the Black Horse pike, built to relieve congestion on the White Horse pike, and a more direct route to Trenton, opened this year to complement the Harding highway, the New York highway, and other arterial roads, has made motoring to the resort a pastime.

Mowing Machines, 1932.

BERLIN. — (AP) — Because machine mowers damaged the grass runways at Tempelhof airdrome the authorities have installed a Bavarian shepherd, his family, dogs, and a flock of 850 sheep to keep the grass down. The outfit traveled 400 miles overland, taking 10 weeks for the hike.

Vacationists Get Just About Everything in Scenic Wisconsin

WISCONSIN! That means many things to the seeker after the ideal vacation spot.

It means a country of varied beauty, from the rolling prairie lands of the south, with their peaceful farm homes and herds of grazing cattle, to the last stand of the virgin forest in the far north. . . .

It is when the cutover country is reached, where the new forests of pine and white birch are making greater headway each year, that one gets the first thrill of this vacation land. It grows wilder every mile, the farms fewer, the lakes unkempt and lovely, fit home for the lonely loon that calls across the waters at evening.

When Life Was Simple.

Golf links, a summer resort hotel in the land o' lakes, or a canoe on a stream that is untouched by civilization, await you. The forests offer long dim trails under trees that are centuries old, whispering melodies of Indian love songs, and the quiet of the days before the white man came with steam and gas and passion for improvement. . . .

There are the Kettle Moraine country, the Apostle islands, the wind carved hills of the dune country, the coulee region immortalized by Hamlin Garland in "Main Traveled Roads," the mighty bluffs of the Mississippi, the Dells of the Wisconsin, the St. Croix, the Wolf, the Peshtigo, and lakes and streams that are still unnamed.

Adventure Assured.

Many new streams are being opened up to fishermen, for Wisconsin has twenty-eight fish hatcheries which annually propagate and distribute more than three hundred million fine food fish in the waters of the state. The game propagation program assures sportsmen of adventure every year.

Near to Chicago and available for week-end trips, as well as for the longer vacations, is the Dells country around Kilbourn. The eccentricities of the Wisconsin river at this point have produced one of the natural wonders of America.

The river has cut its way during the centuries through soft sandstone to a depth of 150 feet for ten miles, leaving odd formations such as are found in the grand canyons of the west. The erosion, the flow of minerals and plant life have brought out patterns of color that furnish enchantment to the thousands of travelers who drift through this wonderland on excursion boats every summer.

Thrill Cruises to Start Late in July

THE operation of "Thrill Cruises" by a Canadian company employing an Atlantic liner for that purpose will continue this summer, beginning the last week in July from Montreal and Quebec to New York and return. The name is derived from the thrill of an ocean voyage to be had by the passengers who cannot afford the extra time or expense of a European trip.

Clothes Will Make or Ruin Any Vacation

Shops Filled with Smart Wardrobes to Satisfy Your Particular Needs.

By Rhea Seeger.

SUMMER vacationists, by and large, are quite a noticeable slice out of the country. The way we painfully work at enjoying a vacation makes a slow moving and phlegmatic European shudder and makes of us a perspiring pathetic lot of people that seem to be having anything but a hilariously good time! We seem to have the most trouble with vacation wardrobes, and if you don't agree that clothes make or ruinously scramble a vacation, just ask a badly sunburned beauty that didn't buy the right kind of hats and sunback beach pajams! Vacations that jelled or didn't jell when they should usually can be blamed to the great American curse—dilly-dallying about correct clothes.

It sounds infinitely more complicated than it is, for the stores are now filled with all kinds of seagoing loot, high altitude outfits for mountain climbers, every kind of a colored shirt, and all sorts of blue jeans and flamboyant neck handkerchiefs for dude ranch enthusiasts, not mentioning the flowered frocks and lovely evening gowns for resorts that do things luxuriously and completely.

You may be frightfuly ignorant as to what constitutes a good all-around-the-clock vacation wardrobe, but don't lose your nerve. Walk into any sports shop, spill your fears, wants, and woes, and clever buyers will tell you what to buy and what to wear in every vacation spot on the globe. You may be floundering in a sea of doubt as to what to pack for an unexpected cruise. You will be deftly sold on flannels, knitted things, warm, woolly topcoats, the nautical accessories, the right rubber soled shoes, the goblike trousers for your deck uniforms and the correctly restrained sweaters and jackets, and even hats and the necessary warm, but not bulky, underlayers. They will even advise you as to permanents that are seaworthy.

Travel Light and Far.

Outfitting the summer old world tourist has become a fascinating sports shop recreation. Since sailing the fabled seven seas has become so financially easy to pay for, shrewd gadabouts have found that it is much cheaper to travel than to stay at home. Travel clothes buyers have been wizards in planning and packing the necessary costumes for every kind of a sightseeing trip. Listen to their expert advice and you will see things that you never would see if you had to worry about checking extra baggage and tracing lost laundry. Travel light and go further with the fewest clothes possible, so they say. Buy unmentionables of glove silk that can be swished through suds and left to dry while you dream, no pressing needed. Do your sightseeing in knitted clothes, they are available in many unusual colors, as well as brown and black and blue. Do your dancing and dining in soft clinging lace gowns that can be folded and packed each week and never insist upon the attentions of a presser. A printed silk frock for an extra, because they can't show spots as easily as plain silks.

Don't forget that other countries are rained upon and that chilly, rather cheerless days greet the tourist as regularly as they do here at home. And do remember to buy the lightest suitcases and bags that you will find, for the day might dawn when no obliging male will appear and you can carry these new light things as casually as any strong armed cavalier.

Camping Comforts.

For the younger set, who dash to camp as soon as they leave school, all they need and can wish for is now in readiness for critical inspection and satisfied purchase. Camp life is comfortingly simple. What your youngsters must take with them will be cheerfully told and sold to you by experts who are authorities on what young America camps in for the greater portion of the summer months—clothes, socks, cutlery, bedding, and the extras will be knowingly listed while you wait.

Smart and saving stay at homes, with beaches and bands and outdoor thrills within walking or riding distance from the front door, will find plenty of new things to buy—slacks of flannel, seersucker, twill, and ducking that lace or button tightly and trimly around the waist and hips, basque fisherman shirts striped in red, blue, yellow, black, and brown; bathing suits, colored and uncolored; beach pajamas, that are sloppy but smart, beach skirts and robes that dry you while you lounge—mostly made of material that copies the sponginess of bath towels—cartwheel sun hats that hide you most effectively, and all the many new sporting concoctions in the way of frocks and correct costumes for tennis, golf, sailing, and the riding schools.

Chicago Is Now Center of Air Travel in U. S.

CHICAGO is now the nation's air as well as rail hub, and within an overnight flight of Chicago are cities which are trade centers for 70 per cent of the nation's population. A few years ago air travelers were confined largely to those speeding on emergency missions. Today air transportation is commonplace to thousands of air travelers who have gained first hand information on the dependability and advantages of air travel supervised by responsible companies.

Included among the operators from the Chicago Municipal airport are three of the nation's largest air transport lines, as well as smaller companies, and there is service east, west, north, and south.

Some examples of flying time in trimotored passenger transport planes from Chicago are: Cincinnati, 2¾ hours; Indianapolis, 1½ hours; Louisville, 3½ hours; St. Louis, 2½ hours; Memphis, 5¼ hours; Cleveland, 2¾ hours; New York, 6½ hours; Boston, 8½ hours; Washington, D. C., 6½ hours; Kansas City, 4¼ hours; Dallas, 10 hours; El Paso, 17½ hours; Minneapolis, 3½ hours; Detroit, 2½ hours; Omaha, 4¼ hours; Denver, 11½ hours; Salt Lake City, 15¼ hours; Los Angeles and San Francisco, 22 hours, Portland, 23 hours, and Seattle, 23 hours.

Some of the reasons why air travel has developed so rapidly during a period of business depression are:

(a) Recognition by the public that flying is no longer a fad and that a splendid record for safety and dependability has been established by the responsible air transport operators who fly with proper equipment with the proper personnel.

(b) The use of improved and speedier airplanes.

(c) Improved airplane engines.

(d) Improved operating practices and more flying aids, such as directive radio beacon, radiophone, better weather reporting service, improved landing fields, a larger percentage of lighted airways, and many other physical improvements on the ground.

(e) Rail plus Pullman fares.

San Francisco Lays Plans for Active Summer

Sports Events, Wharf, Chinatown, Shrine Meet Will Interest Tourist.

PRECEDING the Olympic games will be two events, to be staged in the San Francisco bay region—sporting matches which will be watched closely by all America. The cream of the college athletic crop will be on the Pacific coast on July 1-2, when the IC4A meet will be held at the new Edwards field, at the University of California. At Stanford university the final tryouts for the American Olympic games will be held on July 15-16.

The Olympics, luring more than 2,000 athletes from more than 40 nations, offer an undeniable urge to visit California this summer—and to see some of the rest of the state. Lake Tahoe, the mile high "lake of the sky," beckons you into a mountainous region where water and outdoor sports are unexcelled. Mighty Yosemite valley, with its soaring peaks and domes and plunging waterfalls, awaits exploration. Sequoia and Gen. Grant National parks attract with their giant redwoods, the world's largest trees. Then there is the gold country, famous in song and story of the days of '49. . . . Mount Shasta. . . . Mount Lassen, America's only active volcano. . . . The Redwood empire, where you traverse a hundred miles of tree lined highway. . . . Sonoma valley. . . . Marvelous Marin . . . the picturesque Father river country—these and more are California's toasts to vacation wonderlands.

You'll like San Francisco, center of the vacation lands of northern and central California. The ships of all nations find shelter in this great world port, and a stroll along the Embarcadero will reveal ships from the south seas, giant trans-Pacific liners, lumber boats from the north Pacific, and Central American fruit boats. Out on the bay are ferry boats, a bevy of white yachts and, probably, some of Uncle Sam's gray battle fleet.

Even if Quiet, Washington Is Thrilling City

EVEN when nothing special is going on, Washington, D. C., is a thrilling city to visit. It is a panorama of two centuries of history. Great memories still live wherever you turn. You can stand where statesmen of other days have stood, or meet face to face the powerful men of our own time. The noble beauty of Lincoln's Memorial will etch its emotion so deeply that you will never forget it.

At Mount Vernon, you can almost feel the presence of George Washington. You see where he ate, and slept and wrote; the bordered rose garden that Martha Washington loved. A morning is too short a time to absorb the charm of the Congressional library, probably the most beautiful interior in America, and, of course, the Capitol, White House, Smithsonian institute, Washington monument, and dozens more of historic sights will fill day after day with interest.

All this year Washington will be the center of the nation-wide Washington bicentennial celebration. There will be hardly a week without its spectacle, pageant, parade, or gathering of important people.

Army day, Red Cross day, dedication of the Arlington Memorial bridge, Flag day pageant and procession with more than 100 floats, Washington pageant play with 5,000 actors and 2,000 choristers, and a band of 500 pieces. Independence day, aeronautical festival, Labor day, Columbus day, Navy day, Armistice day—which will be a tremendous international demonstration—and many other events you should not miss.

Volumes have been written about Washington, and still the story of this great city remains untold. It must be seen, it must be understood, and it must be felt by actual contact to realize its greatness. Truly the national capital is an inspiration. It is the soul of America, expressed in memorials and monuments, wonderful public buildings, beautiful parks, tree lined avenues, museums, and historic shrines.

Turkish Girl Censor Sets a New Record for Rapid Reading

ISTANBUL.—(AP)—Francis Bacon, who several centuries ago opined that "reading maketh a full man," might have been stumped by the case of Meliha Hanim, a young woman of Istanbul.

She has been government censor of publications here since Mustapha Kemal's alphabet reform made reading something else than a laboriously slow process.

Colombia's Coffee Will Carry Colors to Foreign Marts

BOGOTA.—(AP)—When Colombia's coffee goes to foreign markets in the future, it will carry its colors.

President Olaya Herrera decreed that exported coffee shall be shipped in red and green striped bags marked "Product of Colombia."

Holland Boasts of Old World Charm

IT isn't necessary to go all the way across the Atlantic to find that quaint old Dutch charm and hospitality of Holland. It can be found just across the lake, in Holland, Mich.

Old world charm, scenic grandeur, and sporting facilities make Holland a favorite summering place.

Summer cottages and hostelries dot the wooded sand dunes that edge the lakes.

Exciting Political Days Are Looming on Social Horizon

Chicagoans Prepare for the Entertaining of Friends from Far and Wide.

By Cousin Eve.

AND now the conventions! How lucky we, to be in on all the excitement!

Cut and dried to be sure, but nevertheless, excitement. There is an element of the unknown in the Democratic gathering set for June 27, but for the Republicans nothing but a certainty of Mr. Hoover to look forward to.

The opening night will be marked by a dinner in the Stevens ballroom, arranged by Mrs. Jacob Baur, Illinois Republican committeewoman, for the Woman's National Republican club. Secretary of War Patrick Hurley and Mrs. Hurley will be guests of honor. The war secretary, a tall, handsome, and witty man, will make the administration speech in a ballroom beautifully draped in flags of all the forty-eight states.

In order to give the step of precedence to this important dinner Mrs. Howard Linn has moved her dinner set for that same night at the Casino to the next night, June 15. As she has seventy guests invited to meet Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Whigham and Miss Sybil Whigham, it meant quite a stiff task.

Mrs. Whigham was born in Chicago, one of two daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. MacDonald, her father being a famous golfer of other days and founder of the Chicago Golf club at Wheaton. Her aunts were Mrs. Frederick Eames and Mrs. Worthington, women of fashion.

All of Mrs. Linn's party will stay at the house of her father, Edward T. Blair, 1516 Lake Shore drive, she being already installed at Lake Bluff in her cottage. Her other guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Reeve Schley, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Spencer Morris, and Miss Eleanor Morris (family of Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick). Also Mr. and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, from Washington.

Guests of the Walter Wolfs.

Then there come the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Wolf, who are Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gardner (she was formerly Mrs. Elliott Bacon and before that the lovely Hope Norman of Boston) and Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Cross of Westbury, Long Island. The Wolfs are giving a small dinner in their own house for their guests on Monday, June 13, at 209 Lake Shore drive.

Their apartment is charming at this time, a gray and yellow room, with masses of Persian lilacs. Senator Tasker Oddie and Ambassador to France and Mrs. Walter Edge will be here, and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sims will stay at the Drake, also Miss Katrina McCormick, their daughter.

Philip Blagden Thompson of New York is coming out with a party of men. An old fashioned patriot, Phil Thompson, at every dinner these days rises, lifts his glass and says, "I give you, gentlemen, the President." Walter Denegre and James G. Blaine are coming, and Mrs. Frederick Alger of Detroit. So are Mrs. Alvin Hert of Washington and Mrs. George Horace Lorimer of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Hollister Sturges from Washington, and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Smith of Brookville, L. I.

The Morrises Arrive.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris came last week for both conventions, and among the Democrats are the Hon. Gilbert Hitchcock of Omaha and Mrs. Hitchcock, who was Martha Harris. Gov. Ritchie will be the guest, on dit, of the Stanley Fields. Dr. and Mrs. Glenn Frank, Mr. and Mrs. William G. McAdoo, and Mrs. Nicholas Roosevelt are others under the Democratic banner.

Mrs. Waller Borden has three guests: Senator and Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry of Rhode Island, Mrs. Gerry being the former Mrs. George Vanderbilt; also her sister, Mrs. John Nicholas Brown of Newport, daughters of the old Dresser family of Rhode Island. These guests of Mrs. Borden will stay at the Edgewater Beach in apartments facing the lake and they may use the Saddle and Cycle club next door at their pleasure.

Many of the out of town guests are being entertained at the Casino, Arts, and Chicago clubs.

Edward Hurley, Democratic chairman, has for his first vice chairman Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, who is already en villegiature at Lake Geneva, but comes in often to look after details of the setting for the great political struggle beginning June 27.

The Anti-Prohibition women, headed by Mrs. William H. Mitchell, are arranging a large, grand dinner for June 13. Mrs. Frederick Alger, who is a great worker against prohibition, is coming over to be present and will remain at the Charles S. Dewey house through the two conventions. Just before this political jamboree the Lake Foresters will have two days of garden club and flower show June 11 and 12. For the occasion Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick is lending the beautiful setting of her house, Villa Turicum, on the lake. Mrs. Donald Douglas tells me that David Adler, the architect, has designed an original background in the Italian courtyard.

It is here that the dinner and luncheon tables will be set forth with décor varied and chic. The novelty this year is "economy" tables. The hostess getting the loveliest effect for the least money will take the prize. Cost of décor is laid upon each table.

The lovely fountains of the villa will be in action and all the pretty women there in pretty clothes. Something to see. And may the sun shine!

Lectures Announced.

Looking ahead to October. The Town Hall series open late in the month, a line of twelve lectures in the Drake ballroom Saturday mornings at 11 o'clock. The course was interesting last season but this year seems even better. I see the names of Vicki Baum of Victoria Sackville-West, heiress of the Sackvilles of Knole and author of "The Edwardians"; of her husband, Harold Nicholson, diplomat. Then there is Richard Boleslavski of the Moscow Art theater; Philip Guedalla, Dr. Millikan, the great astronomer and scientist; Clemence Dane, and a perfectly gorgeous man, Sir Frederick Whyte, one of the handsomest and most brilliant men in Britain's foreign service, on his way home from India.

One or two names remain unannounced, and these are the most unique and scintillating of all. Miss Denton, who arranges these lectures is a comparative newcomer to Chicago. Her advisory committee names Mrs. Ogden Armour, Mrs. William Baum, Mrs. Waller Borden, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. R. R. McCormick, Mrs. Robert H. McCormick, Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, Mrs. Murry Nelson, Mrs. Nitze, Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, Mrs. Wentworth, Mrs. Adlai Stevenson, Mrs. Silas Strawn, Mrs. Chauncey Borland, and a dozen more.

Days are not long enough for all the annual meetings. Splashing round in my desk I find the records of the Renaissance society out at the University of Chicago. The annual meeting was one of their delightful buffet suppers followed by music. Had I been in town I would never have missed it.

First, I love the drive out along the lake, getting rather scared as we skim through the Century of Progress. The buildings still look like another world, Mars or Saturn, or some such unfamiliar scenes. Then I adore the green meadows of the Midway and the shadowy spaces of Ida Noyes hall in the dusk. Mrs. Eve Schutze, pres-

AT KNOLLWOOD ON MEMORIAL DAY

Miss Betty Whatley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Seaborn Whatley, was one of the brave souls who ventured to go swimming in the pool at the Knollwood club in Lake Forest on Memorial day, for, although the air was pleasantly warm that day, the temperature of the water was too low for many swimmers to enjoy it. Miss Whatley is spending the summer with her parents in Lake Forest.

Mrs. George Reebie Johnson and Mrs. James R. Dean did not enjoy the pool at Knollwood last week-end, but they did enjoy watching the few who braved the chilly weather and went swimming in the club's beautiful pool, which was ready for use on May 28.

A. B. Fall's Portrait Missed from Niche in Washington

It's Only Gone Temporarily, However, an Informant Tells Reporter.

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — [Special.]—Walking through the main lobby of the interior department the other afternoon, I was quite surprised to find the portrait of one time Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall missing from its place. . . . I was quite surprised, I say, because shortly after Mr. Fall was sent to jail a stream of protests flowed into the department complaining that the portrait still hung in state. . . . And to all this complaint the department had one reply: "There is no precedent for removing a picture of a former secretary once it is placed in this hall of fame."

So, the other afternoon I searched for information. . . . Why should the Fall portrait, after being kept in the corridor all the time Mr. Fall was in jail be swept into the basement just when Mr. Fall came out of jail? My informant said there was nothing mysterious in the picture's absence. . . . Called my attention to the fact that the portraits of all other former secretaries of the interior were likewise missing from their accustomed places. . . . Had been temporarily [stressing the temporarily] removed to make room for a loan exhibit of paintings. . . . All portraits, including the Fall picture, would be hung again in their identical places as soon as the painting exhibit went.

Mr. Fall's portrait, by the way, hung directly opposite the disbursing room.

Ice Cream Season Opens.

Once more is Washington coffee-ice cream conscious. . . . Because it's the open season for garden parties. . . . And the epicurean formula for a Washington garden party is water-cress sandwiches and coffee-ice cream; especiality coffee-ice cream. . . . The White House chef started the vogue several years ago.

Everybody rushed out to the British embassy last week to help Lady Lindsay help Queen Mary celebrate her birthday. It's quite an achievement to get behind the big iron gates that guard the new British embassy, for the Britons, unlike some of the other embassies and legations who stage free for all at homes in the name of our democracy, wield a big blue pencil on their invitation lists. . . . No free for alls for them, thank

Atlantic Beach Becomes Highly Popular with Gotham Residents

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK. — [Special.] — With the last week ushering in the summer season it becomes more and more plain that, as we have already told you, New York is fast becoming a summer resort once more.

Poor Southampton will certainly suffer by the mode for Atlantic Beach. From the number as well as the notability of the people at the Long Beach resort this week I can't see any folk left for the environs of Gin lane other than the die-hards of the old guard who have been going to Southampton since time immemorial.

Frankly, it is not to be wondered at. Southampton is even more difficult to get to than Newport. Only a hundred-odd miles from town, it has but two through trains a day, and the motor trip, through the dunes and sand trails, is hard on car and occupants alike.

Close to New York.

At Atlantic Beach, where all fashionable New York is congregating this summer, the color and life of the Riviera is available, and that within sixty minutes of Fifth avenue—or less, depending on the speed one uses. No wonder that, with racing at Belmont, and parties going all along the north and south shores of Long Island, and theaters and dinners in town, society prefers a glamorous resort which it can arrive at a very few minutes after the desire makes itself felt.

Among the notables at Atlantic Beach this week we noticed the George T. Brokaws, the Alfred Wagstaffs III., Mr. and Mrs. William L. Austin Jr., Mr. and Mrs. John S. Rogers, his honor the mayor, Mr. and Mrs. C. Perry Beadleston, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. Scott Blanchard, Jules Glaenzer (back from the South seas), Mr. and Mrs. Kenelm Winslow, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Herndon, Cornelia Prime, Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Bonaparte, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald V. Hiscoe, and Mr. and Mrs. James Daly.

June Weddings.

Weddings, of course, are of great interest. This month will find two involving members of the Heckscher clan of Philadelphia. On Wednesday Mrs. Barclay McFadden, who was born Virginia Heckscher, daughter of the Ledyard Heckschers of sporting Radnor, Pa., will become the bride of Alfred Geary. On the 28th J. G. Richard Heckscher, son of the late Stevens Heckscher of Strafford, Pa., stepbrother of the present Mrs. Cornelius V. Whitney, will marry Anna Davis Hallowell, daughter of Mrs. J. Mott Hallowell, Chestnut Hill, Mass.

Mrs. McFadden's wedding to Alfred Geary is of social import. The late Mr. McFadden was a noted poloist,

When Chicago Was Young - - - - -

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, June 9, 1880.

DEAR JULIA: I have kept wishing all week that you were here for the excitement of the convention. It ended yesterday with the nomination of Garfield and Arthur, as, of course, you know. I attended several of the sessions and was quite absorbed by it. The great bone of contention, naturally, was the question of a third term for Grant. It was rather a sad ending to me, and I think to Will, too. He has always been loyal to Grant, the feeling an old soldier has for his commander.

Several other ladies were sitting with me that last afternoon and when the result was announced and the cannon boomed out to the waiting crowds the news that Garfield had been nominated we all turned to our neighbors and found that the tears were running down each face. We hadn't realized how seriously we had taken it.

During the session one enthusiast from Wyoming, seeing Gen. Phil Sheridan on the platform, sang out: "One vote for Philip H. Sheridan." We think so much of the gallant old leader here in Chicago that we were pleased when he was called on for a speech. He made a short talk, refusing to have his name used, saying the only use he would have for a nomination would be to give it to ident of the Renaissance, arranges these soirées with charm, and after a general reception of guests downstairs the party proceeds upwards.

A Gala Affair.

The evening's hostesses were Mrs. William Nitze, Mrs. Ernst Freund, Mrs. Albert Hopkins, Mrs. Quincy Wright, Mrs. John U. Nef, Mrs. Howard Cunningham, Mrs. Frank R. Lillie, Mrs. Carl D. Buck, and Mrs. Frederic C. Woodward. Husbands and cavaliers are trained to stand in line and carry plates of attractive food to the dames seated in the candle light at flower bedecked tables. That handsome lady, Mrs. Dallas Phemister, vice president of the Renaissance, headed this vitally interesting committee.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Bricken were the honored guests of the evening. Mr. Bricken being the new head of the musical department of the university. After supper an election was held and the following officers elected: President, Mrs. Martin Schutze; vice president, George D. Fairweather; second vice president, Mrs. Dallas Phemister; secretary, Mrs. Eleanor C. Morse; treasurer, Donald P. Bean.

Directors: James H. Breasted, Mrs. Walter Brewster, Mrs. Howard Cunningham, Mrs. Arthur J. Dempster, W. U. Eisendrath Jr., Mrs. Henry G. Gale, Hayward Keniston, Robert M. Lovett, Mrs. Frank Jenney, William Mather, Mrs. C. Philip Miller, Mrs. John Nef, Mrs. William Nitze, Ferdinard Schevill, John Shapley, Miss Laura Van Poppelendam, Thornton Wilder, and Frederic Woodward.

Following the election Mr. Bricken talked of his plans for the music department, and then he played delightfully Debussy, Bach, Chopin. He is essaying to build up the musical groups, especially the university orchestra, which has already given two concerts, with another one next Tuesday at Mandel hall.

Four Important Exhibits.

Skimming over Mrs. Schutze's report, a beautifully written document, by the way, I felt more than ever respectful of the distinguished results achieved by the Renaissance society. Four major exhibits—first in the summer, modern primitives, an international affair, the works of fifty years. Then a Byzantine exhibit, with painted panels, carved ivories, glass and gold enamels from the great Bodkin collection out of Russia: textiles and illuminated manuscripts. Among the exhibits the Coptic tapestry lent by Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr. and copies of Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick's twelfth century manuscript; also copies of Frederick Whittemore's frescoes taken from Arabian monasteries.

A January exhibit of small sculptures and drawings by sculptors was very important, followed by a February show of modern French paintings lent by the Chester Johnson galleries. Talks given before the Renaissance included Mr. Leger's, he of the ballet méchanique; Arthur Pope on Persian art, Frederick Whittemore on his Arabian monasteries, and Dr. Harry A. Bigelow stories of his trip to darkest Africa; after which tribal African songs were sung in native dialect by an African, Mudupe Paris.

The matters projected for this year make one's head spin. Vive la Renaissance!

Departing Chicagoans.

Going southward last week were the Frank Mulfords to visit Russell Mott, Mrs. Mulford's brother, at Charlottesville, Va. The Motts moved there several years ago and have a nice old place called Oakenpins and four children rather well grown. Russell Mott, once a lawyer, is now a country squire, and when not following the hounds rides blandly about the Virginia hills.

The Mulfords know they are in for a session of hard riding when they descend on Oakenpins. The first day Russell Mott gives his guests some prancing steeds and rides them thirty miles; next day it is forty, and so on increasingly, unless they can break a collar bone, or some handy little bone like that, and call a doctor.

Col. and Mrs. Clifford Corbin left their Chestnut street house Saturday for Washington. In that nice city Mrs. Corbin owns a fine, large house which is now tenantless. In this she purposes to spend the summer, her lovely young daughter, Dolly, being already in Washington on a visit. That town, it seems, is very full of life and movement all the year in these times.

Mrs. Corbin is a violet eyed, very pretty woman, small and dashing. Before coming to Chicago Colonel and Mrs. Corbin were on that most delightful of military stations, the American embassy in Paris, and they are a definite asset to our town. Belonging to the same group Mr. and Mrs. Hollister Sturges of Chicago are now in Washington and are coming here for the two conventions. They will occupy the Henry Field apartment at 20 Cedar street while Mrs. Field goes east to the family estate near Kingston-on-the-Hudson, Ridgely Manor.

The Sturgeses, it seems, are considering and playing with the idea of returning here to live in the autumn. Very popular people, Mr. and Mrs. Sturges, very fond of society, and with an immense circle. They can truly be said to know "everybody," literati, political, stage, screen, foreigners of note, and society people.

Meeting of Needlework Guild.

Another annual meeting that I meant to lunch with last week but somehow didn't was the Needlework Guild of America, of which Mrs. Richardson Dunham is president. The luncheon, a very large and vivacious gathering, filled the cheerful colonial dining rooms and foyer of the Ambassador East. One saw nuns of St. Vincent de Paul, with white crisp head dresses and blue uniforms; Episcopal Sisters in demure black, women of high fashion in the latest knits and prints. And nearly everybody who came in was presented to Mrs. Truman Newberry of Detroit, cousin of Mrs. Dunham, and past president of the National Guild.

After luncheon she made the principal speech—an attractive woman, wearing a huge corsage bouquet of pansies. Mrs. Ogden Armour, in navy blue, wore a smart boutonnière, a gay flower made of blue and white check silk. She still holds her place as one of Chicago's handsomest and most chic women. Mrs. Walter Wolf, in a fresh blue and white print, Mrs. Waller Borden, Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, Mrs. Charles Howard, Mrs. William J. Chalmers, Mrs. Spoor, Mrs. Senn, Mrs. William C. Pullman, Miss Carpenter, Mrs. Morris Johnston, Mrs. Charles G. King, Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy, Mrs. John W. Gary, Mrs. Phelps Hoyt, Mrs. Shearson, and dozens more were tearing in.

The Needlework Guild is a society with no dues. Any one can join by giving two new garments a year—something like an endless chain. It was founded by the beautiful Lady Wolverton in England in 1882. Mrs. Potter Palmer organized a Chicago branch ten years later.

The guild furnishes new plain garments to meet the needs of hospitals and charities. It is nonsectarian. Men, women and children may belong. Members band themselves into sections, and each section is responsible for collecting 110 garments, also a "money member." Here is where the men come in handily.

Georgette Hill, who has reached the age of 12; Owsley, the baby of the family, who is only 6; Mrs. Lon C. Hill Jr., and Lon C. Hill III. are leaving their Winnetka residence at 720 Prospect avenue as soon as the children are out of school to spend the summer on the Gulf of Mexico at Point Isabel, not far from Brownsville, Tex. They are going south to be near Mr. Hill, whose business keeps him there.

MISS FLORENCE ROSS.

Mrs. Bessie B. Ross of Gary, Ind., announces the approaching marriage of her daughter, Florence, to John Jay Parkinson Jr. of the Allerton club, Chicago, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Parkinson of Wichita, Kas., to take place on June 11 in Gary. Miss Ross and her fiance were 1931 graduates of Northwestern university. She is a member of Alpha Omicron Pi and he of Delta Tau Delta.

Once a year these new garments are collected and exhibited. Then an impartial distribution among charities takes place in November. The Chicago branch has as officers Mrs. William S. Monroe, honorary president; Mrs. Richardson Dunham, president; Mrs. Shailer Matthews and Mrs. Kinney Smith, vice presidents; Mrs. Donald Ryerson, secretary, and Mrs. William Casselberry, treasurer. The report says that 18,285 garments were distributed last year among 92 Chicago institutions.

Mrs. Dunham is a fine president, full of enthusiasm. She makes all her butterfly friends work on pretty things, really charming things for the sick in dreary places.

An Interesting Luncheon.

Mrs. Carter Harrison had a small and interesting luncheon at the Casino one day in honor of Mme. René Weiller, wife of the new French consul general, and Mme. La Mothe. And she herself, vivacious and gay, might be French, so well does she command the language. Very slim and pretty, with violet eyes and dark hair, Mrs. Harrison might be a sister of her own daughter, Mrs. Edson Manierre.

At this luncheon they were speaking of the traveling adventures of a young Lake Forest matron who had gone abroad tourist class and returned recently on one of the great liners. Traveling in this practical manner were an ambassador, his family, and an unusual number of titled personages from England, so that a much more amusing tone socially was had than in the haughty first cabin. The adventure turned out well.

A victory meeting of the Anti-Prohibition women last week. In the Ambassador East colonial room, it was a fine party, dignified, yet full of life. Something of a beauty show withal. Mrs. George Brennan in the chair; at her left, Mrs. Stanley Field and Mrs. Charles Garfield King, mothers who work shoulder to shoulder with their daughters in this modern fight for freedom.

Reports were read, mostly of the tremendous sweep of votes, 117,000 women having signed pledges in the Chicago area in the week's drive. The entire meeting was highly modern, no old-fashioned oratory or long-tailed reports. The younger members of the committee hopped up as named, Mrs. William Mitchell, whose profile is of the most alluring; Mrs. Valentine Bartlett, half French and dramatically in earnest; Mrs. Clifford Rodman, Mrs. Leslie Wheeler, Mrs. George R. Nichols Jr., who had charge of the hotel booths; Mrs. Mark Trude, who patrolled the station groups.

They all had their brief and fiery reports said and finished. The enrollment of Illinois women will reach 200,000 before the convention. It was really the nicest meeting of the kind I was ever at. Not for one minute was I bored and wishing I hadn't come.

The audience was made up of women who had worked hard during the drive. Nobody had to be convinced, everybody was for the movement. A row of young and pretties sat over against the wall, smoking. There was a delicate, frail girl near me who had been hailed loudly as a "drunkard" by a W. C. T. U. at a railway station, and I understand Edith Cummings, tall and athletic, was attacked and her frock torn almost off by a fanatic, but none of these incidents were even mentioned during the victory meeting.

Mrs. Brennan asked everybody to stay, as there were overflowing bowls of iced fruit cup and cakes in which to celebrate. And among those staying I chatted with Mrs. Ralph James, Mrs. William Scudder, Mrs. Wallace Kirk, Mrs. Charles E. Brown, Helen Brown, Polly Perry, Mrs. George Ranney, Miss Larned, Mrs. Augustus Eddy, Mrs. Edward Litsinger, Mrs. Harry H. Shearson.

Matinee and Music.

Other definitely nice things of last week were Cissy Loftus' special matinée of impersonations on Friday at the Selwyn—many actors there and lots of pleasant people. Her entrée among Chicago society people was always secure in the past, as Cecil Clarke Davis and Ethel Barrymore were her great pals and projectors.

After this delightful event one found oneself at the Three Arts club, where Mrs. Archibald Freer and Mrs. Royden Keith were having a musical party. It was the occasion of the first hearing of the sixth song in the cycle of love lyrics, of which Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick had written the words and Mrs. Freer the music. Rather liked sitting in the spacious halls of the Three Arts club, palatial and patioed.

Just as I arrived Mme. Stralia, for whom the party was given, was projecting the last notes of a song in the most powerful voice I have ever heard. Cyrena Van Gordon's is a mere whisper in comparison.

A man named Lionel Sinclair played some Strauss and some Chopin after his own ideas, and then one heard Mrs. Keith herself, our tall, handsome co-hostess, who has perhaps the loveliest and most glowing mezzo-contralto voice of Chicago, in the Love Cycle. Her accompaniment was the four strings and piano of the Little Symphony. A very difficult matter to sing these six units in a minor key, and as variable in pitch as Chicago weather.

After the recital tea was served at many small tables which dot the loggia.

Portrait Show Opens.

A delightful tea of the week was the opening of Amy Irwin McCormick's portrait show in the Chester Johnson galleries. Everybody was there. The portraits were not only done with spirit and style, but they were interesting character sketches. The little head of Katharine Cornell done in forty-five minutes charmed me; and the three hour sketch of Dr. Arthur Small was the gem of the collection, at least unless one held out for the beautiful portrait of Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman.

Walter Brewster, an excellent critic and art collector, was strong for the remarkable study of Mrs. Howard Cunningham. In fact, what he said to a lady sums up the entire collection better than tons of adjectives.

Said the lady, "Very nice work."

"Nice, heck!" said Mr. Brewster with feeling. "It's darn good!" And so say I. Lots of people admired very much a small canvas of a horseman taking a fence on a white horse. This was Col. R. R. McCormick down at Aiken.

A long list of ladies alternated in pairs at the bright tea table spread in front of the window. Among them, Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. Joseph Coleman, Mrs. Richard Fox, Mrs. Joseph M. Patterson, Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, Mrs. Waller Borden, Mrs. Hugh McBirney, and Mrs. Orville Babcock. Many beautiful bouquets were massed about the rooms and as to naming who was there, that were a hard task.

Among the many were the Edward Bennetts; Col. Robert R. McCormick, who received informally with his wife, the artist; Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus McCormick, Robert Hall McCormick, Col. and Mrs. Langhorne, Alfred Granger, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Abbott, Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Small, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ryerson, Arthur Aldis, Mrs. Charles Chadwick, Chauncey McCormick, Richard Fox, Mrs. Moses J. Wentworth, Mrs. Fletcher Durbin, Eleanor Durbin, Russell Tyson, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bissell, Mrs. Conger and Miss Cornelia Conger, Mrs. Herbert Schwarz, Mrs. William Hubbard, and Admiral and Mrs. Crosley.

and Virginia is well known abroad, where her late husband played often, and where, indeed, he suffered the fatal fall during a polo match at Hooton, near Liverpool, some three years ago that was the cause of his passing.

Another notable wedding took place on Thursday when Caroline Clendenin Ryan, daughter of Clendenin Ryan, son of the late Thomas Fortune Ryan and heir to part of his $10,000,000 estate, became Mrs. John Knox Shaw Jr.

In August of '30 Caro was engaged to Ronald Lambert Bassett, son of Arthur Bassett of London, former high sheriff of Cornwall. The engagement was soon broken, however, and Caro's engagement to John Shaw, son of the senior John Shaws of Park avenue, followed.

The wedding took place at the Ryan house in town, with the Rev. Father Thomas Delehant performing the ceremony. Mrs. Rodman Wanamaker II., the former Alexandra Van Rensselaer Devereux of Philadelphia; Elisabeth Clark of New York, and Elizabeth Young Wickes of Baltimore were Caroline's only attendants.

Redmond Stewart Jr. was John's best man, and the ushers were Latimer Stewart, Charles Shaw, and George and Richard Ryan.

Club Women Turn to Seattle

Delegates from Illinois Will Leave Tonight

Presidency Is Conceded to Mrs. Poole, the First Unopposed Candidate.

By Roberta Nangle.

WITH official business over for the season, clubwomen's thoughts are turning to the twenty-first biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which will open next Thursday in Seattle, Wash. Every state in the union and a number of foreign countries will be represented in the group of several thousand delegates expected to be present at this convention, as the federation comprises over 14,600 clubs, including 74 organizations in 24 foreign countries.

Every clubwoman, needless to say, would like to be in Seattle next week, but the stay at homes will have to be content with the reports which will be read before each of the affiliated clubs, large and small, by the delegates at the opening meetings next fall. The Illinois delegation of 125 women, headed by the state president, Mrs. William F. Farrell, and the Illinois general director elect, Mrs. Mary A. Wall, will depart for the west tonight on a special train bearing also the Indiana and Iowa delegations. They will be met in St. Paul by the Minneapolis club women.

First Unopposed Candidate.

Of primary interest to the entire federation is the election at the con-child welfare, citizenship, education, conservation, and other pressing contemporary problems will be given attention from the floor. Reports will be heard from chairmen of the more than 125 departments, divisions, and committees.

Among the speakers will be the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown university at Washington, D. C., and regent of the School of vention of the new president, who undoubtedly will be Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole of Brockton, Mass. Mrs. Poole, now first vice president of the federation, goes to Seattle not only with the indorsement of the 147,000 clubwomen of Massachusetts but as the first unopposed candidate for the presidency in the history of the federation. Nationally known as a leader in club activities and a lecturer on current international affairs, it is generally conceded that she will be chosen to direct the policies of the organization which enrolls more than 2,000,000 throughout the country.

"The Poole special," a train bearing delegates from Massachusetts and the other New England states and from New York, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia, will arrive in Chicago at 2 o'clock this afternoon, and this evening the women will be guests of the Chicago Woman's club at a dinner. Mrs. Mary A. Wall, former president of the Illinois federation, has arranged a program of welcome.

Club Ethics

By Maude Swalm Evans.

"I'M not convinced," said the membership chairman to the group chatting in the president's room after the board meeting, "that our way of having dues all payable at the annual meeting is such a good one. I'm inclined to think it would be better to have them payable and good for a year from the date a member enters."

"Don't let the finance chairman hear you say that," warned the librarian. "She finds it hard enough to make the budget as it is."

"I can't see where she'd have to guess at our future income any more than she does now," argued the membership chairman. "We don't know positively what our income will be until the middle of the new year, months after the budget has been prepared."

"And how about increasing the treasurer's work?" objected that officer. "We'd be sending out notice of dues due the year around."

"Many big businesses do it—the insurance companies, for instance," answered the membership chairman. "It would divide your work. With the proper filing system you wouldn't notice any difference. It would apply only to the new members."

"Just what would be the advantages of the change?" asked the librarian.

"It would save prorating the dues, for one thing," replied the membership chairman, "and principally, we'd be able to get new members at any time during the year. As it is, we often miss getting them because the desire to join comes when they can enjoy only a part of a year's membership for their dues."

"That's so," agreed the department chairman. "Last spring two friends of mine who attended a meeting wanted to join until I told them their dues, or half dues as prorated, would be good only until our annual meeting. They said they'd wait until fall, and in the fall their interest was elsewhere."

"There's nothing to attract new members in the summer and there's too little in advance to attract them after the first of January," declared the membership chairman, "but if they had a whole year's activities ahead it wouldn't matter when they entered. It's worth thinking about, anyway."

Custer's Death Is Pictured in Roto Section

Tribune's Files Tell Story of Massacre of His Force by Sioux Indians.

By James O'Donnell Bennett.

On Thursday morning, July 6, 1876, this head appeared in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE:

HORRIBLE!

The American Indian Exalts His Reputation for Satanic Ferocity.

Gen. Custer, All His Relations, and 315 Men Killed in Battle.

He Attacks an Indian Camp with Five Companies, and All Perish.

The Bodies All Mutilated, and the Scene a Hideous Slaughter-Pen

Three Hundred and Fifteen Men Against Five Thousand Devils.

The Gloomy Butchery Takes Place on the Little Big Horn River.

The news of this—the most dramatic event of our military history in the thirty-three years between the civil war and the Spanish-American war—reached Chicago ten days after the tragedy. It did not appear sooner in THE TRIBUNE because our correspondent, Mr. Kellogg, had been killed with Custer and his men. When tidings of his death reached the office, the editor, Joseph Medill, wrote this paragraph:

> Mr. Kellogg was the special correspondent of The Chicago Tribune. His untimely death deprives us of the report he intended to send The Tribune of the campaign against the Indians. He was a fine graphic writer, as our columns which contained his previous correspondence from the far west clearly exhibited.—Ed.

On the twenty-fifth of this month fifty-six years will have passed since the terrible battle—"unequaled in our Indian wars since the Braddock defeat," said THE TRIBUNE—which is still a source of argument among military commentators and to civilians still a mystery.

A Vivid Memento.

Tragic battle, bitter arguments and unsolved mystery will be vividly recalled to readers now in their sixties by the print in color which appears in this morning's rotogravure section. That print, a lithograph from A. Becker's once celebrated painting, is rare now and brings a large price, but by the autumn of 1876 copies of it hung in taverns, fire engine houses, police stations and livery stables throughout the land. Us small boys it awed; many a veteran who only a dozen years before had been fighting with or against Custer it inflamed with a passion for vengeance. Yes, even southern veterans who had suffered by Custer's dash and adroitness in battle made an idol of him and burned to march to the far west to punish "the varmints," as they called the Sioux. But the Sioux were not vermin. In the battle of the Little Big Horn they proved themselves extraordinarily accomplished strategists, displaying, in the words of Col. W. A. Graham, author of the classic study of the battle, "almost Napoleonic sagacity."

Among Custer's former foes eager to take the field against his destroyers was the famous confederate general Joseph A. Shelby, who telegraphed President Grant, "Gen. Custer has been killed. We once fought him. We now propose to avenge him. Should you determine to call volunteers, allow Missouri to raise 1,000."

Gen. Rosser's Tribute.

And Maj. Gen. T. L. Rosser, another former confederate who after the war became city engineer of Minneapolis, thus acclaimed his old foe in a letter which THE TRIBUNE printed:

> I knew Gen. Custer well; have known him intimately from boyhood, and, being on opposite sides during the late war, we often met and measured strength on the fields of Virginia, and I can truly say now that I never met a more enterprising, gallant, or dangerous enemy during those four years of terrible war, or a more genial, whole-souled, chivalrous gentleman and friend in peace than Maj. Gen. George A. Custer.

But from the first THE TRIBUNE took a position relative to the battle which history has sustained.

On the morning of July 7—the day after the appearance of the first dispatch, which was a meager half column—THE TRIBUNE printed ten columns of news of the battle and reminiscences of Custer's career in its news pages. The editorial leader also dealt with the topic which was to cast a cloud over the festivities of the centennial summer. It was a forthright piece of writing which it must have required courage to print at a time when the American people were in shrill hysterics of grief and adulation over a soldier who had served his country nobly and whose passion for the picturesque in words, clothes and haircuts—he wore his yellow hair in long curls—had endeared rather than belittled him in the popular imagination.

Tribune Takes Its Stand.

THE TRIBUNE'S principal criticisms of Custer in that editorial were:

> Gen. Custer had personal and soldierly traits which commended him to the people. He was an officer who did not know the word fear, and, as is often the case with soldiers of this stamp, he was reckless, hasty, and impulsive, preferring to make a daredevil rush and take risks rather than to move slower and with more of certainty. He was a brave, brilliant soldier, handsome and dashing, with all the attributes to make him beloved of women and admired of men; but these qualities, however admirable they may be, should not blind us to the fact that it was his own madcap haste, rashness, and love of fame that cost him his own life, and cost the service the loss of many brave officers and gallant men.
> . . No account seems to have been taken of numbers, of the leadership of the Sioux, of their past record of courage and military skill. No account was even taken of the fact that Gen. Gibbon was coming to the Little Horn with reinforcements, only a day's march behind, although Gen. Custer was aware of it. He preferred to make a reckless dash and take the consequences, in the hope of making a personal victory and adding the glory of another charge to the long list which he has so successfully headed, rather than to wait for a sufficiently powerful force to make the fight successful, and share the glory with others. He took the risk and he lost, and all that Gen. Gibbon could accomplish when he arrived the next day was to come to the relief of the remnant of the regiment under Maj. Reno, which for twenty-four hours had been hotly pressed by the victorious Indians.

Printed at a time when it could not be popular, that TRIBUNE utterance, the complete text of which fills nearly a column, was a masterpiece of editorial judgment and courage.

White Man at Fault.

For what had happened on the Little Big Horn was this: The main column of the punitive expedition dispatched against the hostile Sioux, who had many reasons to be hostile owing to the iniquities of our Indian administration and the incursions of white men upon their reservations, was under command of Gen. Alfred H. Terry. He moved from Fort Abraham Lincoln, opposite the town of Bismarck, in what was then Dakota territory, in May, 1876. With him rode the Seventh cavalry under command of the dazzling Custer, who in 1861 had graduated from West Point at the foot of his class and who in two years and at the age of 23 was a brigadier general. He was now 37.

Reaching the outskirts of hostile area in south central Montana, Gen. Terry detached Custer and his 655 cavalrymen from the main column on June 22, with orders to move to the south, feel out the ground, find the hostiles and, having found them, so time his marches that he would be able to join forces with Gen. Gibbon, who was coming with troops from Fort Ellis in western Montana to the Little Big Horn.

The orders left much to Custer's discretion, and discretion under excitement was not his greatest attribute.

Daring Meant Death.

Left more or less to his own devices, he rode hard—and rode, on Sunday, June 25, into a hornets' nest, a great Sioux encampment of which the fighting strength was more than 4,000. Thus the odds against him were about six to one. He ordered Maj. Marcus Reno, an Illinoisan with a fine civil war record, to attack one end of the village with his command, comprising 112 men. Reno did so and was terribly punished, being driven back across the Little Big Horn with the loss of 56 men.

After giving that order, Custer moved four miles down the river, supposedly with the intention of falling upon the rear of the Indian encampment. But the Sioux, having driven Reno away, enveloped Custer and destroyed him and his immediate command. Here the loss was 225 men, including scouts and civilians. The only living creature in Custer's force to survive the fight was Comanche, a horse ridden by Capt. Myles Keogh. The animal received three severe wounds but, tenderly cared for by soldiers of the reorganized Seventh cavalry, lived for fifteen years after the battle, dying in 1891 at the age of 28.

With Custer fell his brothers, Thomas and Boston, his brother-in-law, Col. Calhoun, and his young nephew, "Autie," or Armstrong Reed, who bore the nickname Custer had borne as a schoolboy in Monroe, Mich.

The Inflaming Spirit.

Chief Sitting Bull, a medicine man or high priest not remarkable for physical courage, was the inflaming spirit of the Indian warriors. Their supreme strategists on the field were Chiefs Gall and Crazy Horse.

Maj. Reno who, without being a poltroon, seems to have lost his head in the terrible stress, was finally dismissed from the army on the grounds that, after his own repulse, he had not made due efforts to unite the remnant of his command with Custer's.

Custer is buried at West Point and there are impressive monuments to him in his birthplace, New Rumley, O., and in Monroe, Mich., but sober history mournfully records him as one who fell a victim to, in THE TRIBUNE'S words of 56 years ago, "his own madcap haste, rashness, and love of fame."

The battle of the Little Big Horn, although it was a defeat for our arms, opened the last chapter in the pacification of the northwest, for the Indians of that region, appalled by the extent of their victory, escaped the penalties of too great a success by dispersing, many of them fleeing into Canada. White men, violent and often unscrupulous in their pioneering, then streamed into the vast territories which in our time have become well ordered commonwealths. The aspect of those settlers and the rough justice they dispensed are vividly conveyed by the color reproduction in the rotogravure section of John Mulvany's painting of a horse thief's trial. The companion pictures in today's TRIBUNE give you the essence of a volume of history on the opening of the west from the days of massacre to the days when white men began to say, "There shall be law here, though it be only lynch law." The march to civilization is along no primrose path.

June Filled with Commencement Exercises of Art Schools

Students Hold Annual Exhibition at the Art Institute Before Graduation Friday.

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE month of June belongs distinctly to the schools. Its highest moments are the various school commencements, and in art schools, accompanying exhibits. Chief among these each year is the student exhibition of the Chicago Art Institute school. The graduation exercises of the school this year will take place Friday morning at 11 o'clock in the Goodman theater.

There will be thirty graduates in the department of drawing, painting and illustration; seventeen in the department of industrial arts; twenty-eight in the teacher training department, and twenty-five taking the degree of bachelor of arts. Without looking up statistics it seems that the various graduating groups are smaller this year than in previous years. One can, of course, blame the economic depression for this. Obviously many art students have been called home because of lack of money.

The Goodman School of Drama is proudly mentioned with its list of seven graduates, six of whom will receive the certificate of a three year course and one a four year diploma. The address to be given Friday will be delivered by Dr. Robert B. Harshe, director of the Art Institute.

League Sponsors Poster.

The Women's International League of Peace, North Michigan avenue, is sponsoring a poster contest to portray the peace parades which are to take place on the convening in Chicago of the Republican national convention on June 14, and the Democratic national convention on June 27. Automobiles from every state in the union will be in the parade and resolutions will be presented to both conventions asking for peace planks.

Students of the Art institute school have been asked to enter this peace poster contest, which is open, as well, to others. Information concerning the posters may be had by applying at the headquarters of the league, 6 North Michigan avenue.

We come back to the subject of schools and graduating by a rapid glance at the instructive exhibit arranged by the American Academy of Art in its quarters in Kimball hall. The exhibit closes today but during last week it attracted many interested visitors. Stress was laid on the fine work of the interior decorating students. The faculty members were represented in one room and made a good showing.

The school has a concentrated but thorough training course of two years. On its teaching staff are Oskar Gross, R. Fayerweather Babcock, Sudduth Goff, Fred Gray, Charles Wilimovsky, and Marie O'Hara, among others. Frank H. Young is an instructor and the director of the school.

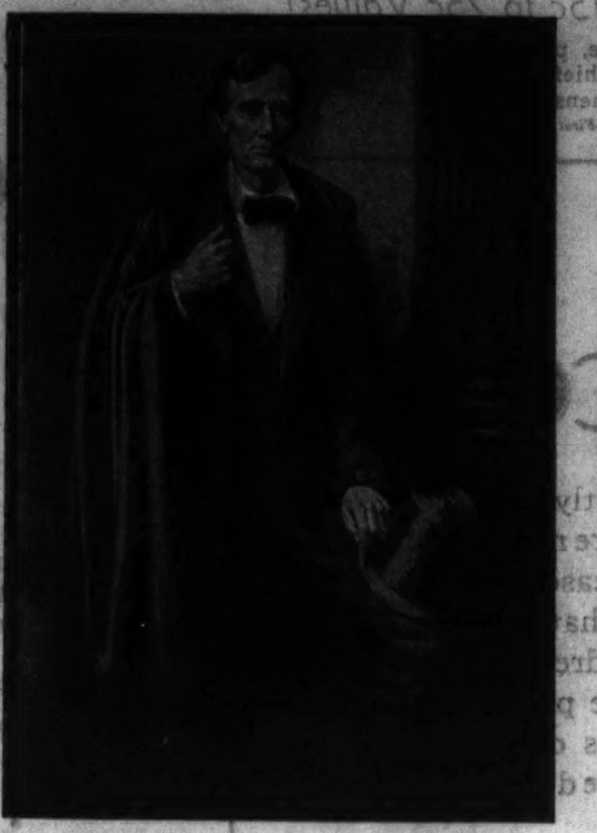
Zoir Heads School.

Emile Zoir, a painter with an international reputation, is to take charge of a new school, the Wilmette School of Modern Art, in which we are assured the methods of instruction will differ radically from those in use in the customary school. There may be summer classes but the school proper will open in the fall.

Another of our established schools, the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts, 18 South Michigan avenue, enjoyed its commencement last week and held in connection with it an exhibit of student work. The exhibit opened on Thursday and will close this evening at 6 o'clock.

Word comes that in the recently held annual meeting and election of officers of the Chicago Society of Artists, George Melville Smith was elected president; Increase Robinson, vice president; George Lusk, treasurer, and Clara MacGowan, secretary. Beatrice Levy, Harold Schultz, and Emil Armin were elected board members to serve three years.



"PORTRAIT OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN," by Charles Sneed Williams, to be found in the Ackerman galleries, Fine Arts building, 410 South Michigan avenue. This is probably the most important painting by a contemporary American artist that we have seen in Chicago for several seasons. It is a magnificent piece of painting and of portraiture. It will be Chicago's loss if this canvas is not acquired for the Art institute permanent collection. The portrait will remain on exhibition into the summer.

An extremely interesting exhibition is the international architecture show which will open on Thursday in rooms on the sixth floor of Sears, Roebuck & Co. The exhibition was too large for the Arts club galleries and too expensive for the Gallery of Modern Life, which is now sheltering the No-Jury exhibit. The architecture exhibition has been on view in various cities and will be here a month. It promises to be exceptionally important. It should be a valuable check on modern tendencies in building.

Exhibits in Paris.

Louis Kronberg, whose exhibit in the Knoedler gallary a year ago was an event of moment, sends a card from Paris with a photograph of a recent canvas, "Cante Jondo," two women in Spanish costume, which hangs in the Paris Salon National.

Recent water colors by Herbert Lewis may be seen to June 11 in the Little gallery, Auditorium tower.

An exhibition of paintings by Torey Ross, under the auspices of the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts, is hung in the Florentine room, Congress hotel. The paintings are chiefly portraits in a light vein. The most attractive of them is "Virginia," a spirited profile. The exhibit will remain to June 30.

In the Chester Johnson galleries, Fine Arts building, there is an interesting exhibit of portraits and figure paintings by Mrs. R. R. McCormick.

Summer schools are on the tapis in June as well as the commencements of the winter sessions. Several new courses, it is announced, will be added to the adult classes of the Art institute summer school, which opens June 27 and continues until Aug. 5. Registration will be on June 24 and 25. Courses available to the adult student are: Drawing, elementary design, composition, lettering, figure sketch, still life, research, costume figure sketch, commercial illustration, outdoor painting, modeling [sculpture], decorative design and color organization, and teacher training.

In the teacher training department instruction will be given in poster design, weaving, high school arts and crafts, and costume design. Particular attention will be given this summer to the juvenile classes, which in recent years have proved an ideal place for children to spend part of their vacation days. A catalog is on the press, giving full information about the summer school, which will be sent to any one on request. Any student under 18, unless he has graduated from high school, is classified as a junior student. To enter the adult classes a student must have been graduated from a high school or a secondary school.

Elizabeth Telling Returns.

Elizabeth Telling, a Chicago artist famous for her delightful portrait drawings of children, has just returned from a world tour. She spent the major portion of her time in Siam and in Bali and Java, Dutch East Indies. Java she considered the most Europeanized of the three countries. While in the orient Miss Telling did a number of portraits of actors and dancers, of tribesmen and children. She drew, also, several interesting small personages, members of the nobility, making of their still, sober faces the most delightful portraits.

The Corcoran Gallery of Art, Washington, D. C., is already announcing its thirteenth biennial exhibition of contemporary American oil paintings to be held next winter. It will open Dec. 4 and close Jan. 15. "It is the hope of the trustees that the exhibition will cover comprehensively the field of oil painting as practiced today by American painters; that, in its scope and quality, it will stand as high as any similar exhibition which has ever been presented, and that the American painters will keep it in mind with a view to submitting to the jury of selection their strongest and most recent work."

The William A. Clark prize awards, established through Senator Clark's endowment of $100,000 in the year 1921, will again be made. These prizes are a first prize of $2,000, accompanied by the Corcoran gold medal; second prize, $1,500 with the silver medal; third prize, $1,000 with the bronze medal, and fourth, $500, accompanied by the Corcoran honorable mention certificate.

The exhibition will be confined to original oil paintings by living American artists, not before publicly exhibited in Washington. The last day for receiving pictures will be Nov. 8, at the agency in New York, and Nov. 14 in Washington. More information about the jury and the exhibit will be issued about the middle of September. It will be sent on request by applying to George E. Hamilton, acting president, or C. Powell Minnigerode, director and secretary, Corcoran Gallery of Art, Washington, D. C.

The summer exhibition by members is on view at the Cordon club. Among the artists represented is Carolyn D. Tyler, who shows among other work a recently painted miniature of Mme. Giuseppe Castruccio, wife of the Italian consul general.

At the Institute.

Water has been turned on in the Milles' fountain of the Tritons in McKinlock court of the Art institute. It will operate from 9 o'clock in the morning to 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon throughout the season.

The print galleries of the Art institute are ready to open with their summer shows. These include a selection of prints by nineteenth century masters; a group of French eighteenth century color prints; a selection of modern French prints; a group of the most famous prints by Rembrandt; prints by old masters from the Buckingham collection, and a selection of drawings from the Leonora Hall Gurley Memorial collection.

The fourth international photographic salon will be held at the Art institute, July 21-Oct. 9. Unless an active protest is voiced now photographs will again take possession of galleries which should be allotted to paintings and sculpture, or other of the fine arts. Photography is a fascinating pursuit, a marvelous hobby and becoming an exact science with art divagations, but it is not an art. It should be shown in the print rooms, just as are, during the winter, etchings and lithographs and block prints. Perhaps the Art institute will see the justice of hanging the photographs in the print galleries, if before it is too late a unanimous protest is made to Robert B. Harshe, director of the museum, and the trustees.

The other summer exhibits promised us by the museum are of work by artists of Chicago and vicinity.

Carl R. Krafft is having a one man show of recent paintings in the Richardson galleries in Oak Park to June 11.

Tuesday evening an unusually brilliant flower exhibit will brighten the courtyard of the Michigan Square building where the Milles' "Diana" is poised above the fountain. The studio gallery, Increase Robinson director, opens in conjunction with the flower show, an exhibit of flower paintings by Chicago artists, to continue through June.

The Chicago School of Sculpture under the direction of Viola Norman announces its annual student exhibit in the Tobey gallery, 200 North Michigan avenue, June 10 to June 18. At the opening tea on Thursday, from 4 to 6 o'clock, Carey Orr, TRIBUNE cartoonist, and Capt. Frank H. Roberts of the World's Fair committee (government representative) will be the speakers. The hostesses will be Mrs. Daniel Peterkin, Mrs. Carey Orr, Mrs. Ross J. Beatty, Mrs. Charles A. Tieb, Mrs. John F. Farrar, Miss Nellie V. Walker, and Mrs. John Irving Shaw.

The trustees of the Lake Forest Public library announce the completion in the library's circulation room of a series of mural paintings by Nicolai Remisoff, representing the poets and prose writers of antiquity. These decorations, together with the building itself, were given in memory of Kersey Coates Reed by Mrs. Reed and Mrs. Charles H. Schweppe.

Engaged

MISS FAYE WEISBERG.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Weisberg of Detroit, Mich., announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Faye Weisberg of Chicago, to Samuel Raitzik, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Raitzik.

Still later when the British pioneered out a little way from town, friends and critics said, "Oh, but it's so unfashionable."

To which the ambassador, I've forgotten his name, replied, "Fashion will follow the British embassy." . . He was right; so right that later they had to move out still further.

Fashion Notes.

Fashion notes, in case you're the least bit interested:

Warren Delano Robbins, social arbiter for the state department, has all the boys talking because he goes to garden parties in a dark blue coat, gray flannel trousers and [here's the surprise] a double breasted waistcoat of white pique.

Mrs. Warren Barbour, wife of New Jersey's millionaire amateur pugilist who succeeded the late Dwight Morrow in the senate, wears a glistening gold bracelet around her right ankle, beneath a very sheer silk stocking.

J. Hamilton Lewis has a brown cutaway.

Somewhere in the town a man is trying to fill the shoes of our chief justice. Mr. Hughes recently sent a pair of his shoes, all repaired and polished, to a charity bootery.

How I Lost 62 Pounds Ugly Fat In 12 Weeks

Without harmful dieting or drugs

Margaret George

SIXTY-TWO pounds of fat in three months was the welcome loss in weight I registered without taking any harmful drugs or salts—without violent exercising and without going hungry for a single minute.

One delicious cupful of Germania Herb Tea, obtainable at food and drug stores, which I drank with each of my meals, I hold responsible for the loss of all my ugly fat and the return to me of a youthlike strength and energy I hadn't possessed in years.

Before, 210 lbs. After, 148 lbs.

Above are my photographs taken before and after I started to drink GERMANIA HERB TEA. I used to be so tired and weak that I could hardly walk. You can see the way I look now. I am 50 years old, work 14 hours each day, on my feet all the time, and enjoy it. I am now giving free demonstrations in the leading department stores of America. Watch your local papers for announcements. I would love to meet you.

You can get GERMANIA HERB TEA at any Drug, Food, or Department Store

Each cupful of Germania Herb Tea, authorities agree, supplies minerals which the body needs, and which are often lacking in ordinary diet. Made of herbs grown on the sunny slopes of hills and mountains in Germany, Germania Herb Tea is strictly a vegetable product containing no harmful drugs. It tastes just like ordinary green tea. It is made the same way and you can drink it, either hot or served as iced tea, with lemon, cream or sugar—and the remarkable thing about it is you lose weight without going on a freak starvation diet or taking purging salts that run you down and make you weak and strengthless. I lost weight every day, and each day I ate all the food I wanted excepting much fatty meats and starches, felt better and grew stronger.

Lost 3 lbs. a Week

Women by the thousands have written or told me of wonderful results obtained from drinking Germania Herb Tea. Stage Coach Makes First Run of Year from Piccadilly to Hampton Court in Smart Turnout of Century Ago

The notes of the horn, the clatter of hoofs, the jingle of harness, and the ring of iron rimmed wheels made Londoners stare in admiration.

[Acme Photo.]

By Ann Whittingham.

LONDON. — [Special.] — Tally-ho! Tally-ho! The notes of the horn, the snare of hoofs on the pavements and the ring of iron-rimmed wheels made Londoners turn and look in admiration at the opening of the coaching season. The Greyhound stagecoach set off from Piccadilly for its first run of the year to Hampton court in the perfect turnout of one hundred years ago. Lord Desborough was on the box with Mr. Fred Unwin, in sponge bag trousers, waisted covert coat, and gray top hat.

For smartness of turnout—coach, harness, horses—and for brilliance of style, there is nothing like it in the motoring world. The clatter of hoofs, especially when they hit the towpath near Teddington, the jingle of the harness, the fun and laughter that are always present on a coach run, the changing of horses, the stops at old fashioned English inns, the breeze blown color in every one's cheeks, all contrive to make an unforgettable experience.

If you come to London, take a day and go by coach along one of the Coaching club's routes. Only eleven miles an hour, but you will never forget it!

New Golfing Ideals.

To the land of sport and sportsmanship the Japanese have brought a new conscience in golf. T. Miyamoto, the first Japanese golf champion to appear in this country, came to England to participate in the British open title tournament. He will not play what he calls "dishonorable" shots, those ordinary stroke saving shots that are adopted in desperately difficult places. It appears that all the leading Japanese golfers and those who aspire to distinction have made it part of their creed not to play backwards or sideways.

Prince George and the prince of Wales are playing golf with experts at Walton Heath, and Prince George has taken to practicing putts on the lawns of Buckingham palace. The duchess of York is a very sound golfer but until lately she has not been seen on the links since the birth of Princess Margaret Rose. It is said she expects to take it up again this summer and repeat the memorable round of two years ago when she beat both the prince of Wales and the duke of York.

The royal family is accustomed to lending all sorts of things from its palaces for the benefit of movements and organizations, but never before has the king lent his chef. M. H. Cedard has, with the king's permission, consented to open and to help with the annual cookery exhibition. This is because the king wants to encourage economical cookery, which is the keynote of this year's program.

M. Cedard it is who creates those special menus which are so much admired at the state banquets at the palace. He is 72 years old and is a native of Chilleur-aux-Bois, Loiset, France. He joined the royal staff in 1902 at Marlborough house and has been with the king ever since. For months now he has devised all his meals strictly from empire produce.

War on Death Watch Beetle.

England is waging war on the death watch beetle. Within a few weeks time, we have heard of the decay of Chequers, the crumbling beams of Peterborough cathedral, and now it is the Bodleian library at Oxford. And all the resources of a research laboratory are being utilized to find the cause and cure of this pest.

At the laboratory a special building has been erected and impregnated with the death watch beetle, and there its evolution is being studied. When they have the complete life history of the beetle from birth to death, they will be able to calculate the rate of damage, within limits, that it can do in a given time, and then find a remedy.

Chequers, the prime minister's official country residence, is closed for a period of several months, while the decayed joists and beams and panelings are renewed. Police guard the house night and day and a powerful watch dog with special training has the run of the house during the night.

Chequers was a gift to the nation from Viscount Lee of Fareham and his wife, who was Miss Ruth Moore of New York City.

The death watch beetle in Oxford shows itself superior in intelligence to other colonies of the same pest. After they had concentrated all their efforts to the roof of University church so that extensive repairs were necessary there, they left en masse for the Bodleian, beginning at the arts end. It has been mass migration and attack in each case.

Wells to Lecture in Spain.

Quitting for a time his line of sociology, it is rumored that H. G. Wells may go abroad to finish uninterrupted the work of his life. He says he has always desired to write a book like Goethe's "Dichtung und Wahrhart," half fact and have invention, which will reveal his personality and tell the extraordinary story of his rise to fame.

In a speech among his friends he spoke of being "pantry bred," meaning his forebears lived "below stairs," and yet today he is supposed to be the most widely read writer in the world. His books are translated into Chinese, and are read by millions as the new gospel.

Mr. Wells has accepted an invitation from the Anglo-Spanish committee to lecture in Spain on "Money and Mankind," and he goes there, he says, the more readily now that Spain is a republic.

Famous Vase to Go Back Into British Museum

LONDON.—[U. P.]—The famous Portland vase, reputed to be the rarest gem of Grecian craftsmanship in existence, is shortly to be returned to the British museum after being kept in a bank vault for nearly three years.

The vase's period of exile in a bank vault followed the withdrawal of the vase from Christie's auction rooms, in April, 1929, when the duke of Portland, the owner, withdrew it from sale when the highest bid reached approximately $148,000. This bid was considered surprisingly low and was far below the reserve price at which the vase was offered.

This work of art, which is 1,900 years old, was found in a tomb near Rome, in the sixteenth century, and came into the possession of the duke of Portland's family in 1784.

Americans and French Attend Charity Fete

By May Birkhead.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Chicagoans have been attending a number of social affairs, including charity entertainments. A gala dinner dance given at the Ritz hotel in behalf of the Foch Foundation attracted representative figures of Parisian society and also of the American colony.

Immediately after Marshal Foch's death three years ago his closest friends determined to erect as a memorial a practical agency for the relief of suffering. The French government offered 15,000,000 francs if a similar sum were raised by private subscriptions.

Part of Sum Already Raised.

Mme. Jacques Balsam, the former Consuelo Vanderbilt and later duchess of Marlborough, was chosen to head the undertaking. A site was acquired at Suresnes near the American cemetery, giving a superb view over Paris. A modern hospital is planned which can accommodate 300 patients, to be drawn especially from members of families of the so-called liberal professions, such as lawyers, architects, and school teachers, who can receive the most modern service by paying fifty francs a day.

Through the tireless efforts of Mme. Balsam and her co-workers, about 10,000,000 francs have already been raised on both sides of the Atlantic. It is hoped to complete the other 5,000,000 in the near future. The Ritz gala yielded about 100,000 francs.

Mme. Balsam's mother, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, has been very ill, but is now better. Her daughter with M. Balsam entertained many guests at the Ritz, including her brother, W. K. Vanderbilt, who came over to learn his mother's condition, and also W. K. Vanderbilt Jr., the grand duchess Helen of Russia, Anthony J. Drexel, and Prince and Princess Beauvau Craon.

Ganna Walska gave the first dejeuner of the season at the Chateau de Galluis, a picturesque estate she acquired in the northern forest of Rambouillet, some miles from the point where the president of the republic has a country residence and hunting lodge. The interior smacks of Louis XV., especially the main salon with its handsome woodwork, old fashioned painted piano, and a long, low bench before a fireplace. There is also an attractive eighteenth century chandelier.

M. Berthelot a Guest.

Recent guests included Philip Berthelot, for many years Briand's right hand man in the ministry of foreign affairs.

Helen Wills Moody, tennis cynosure, is also giving an exhibition of drawings and paintings at the Bernheim galleries which is attracting much interest.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Pike, after a visit to Carlsbad, spent a fortnight at the Ritz here before sailing. Mrs. Mary G. Burnham and her two sons are back in Paris after an extensive motoring trip on the continent. They are leaving soon for England.

Rome Cuts Show Prices.

ROME.—(AP)—To attract more people to the theaters Rome's show houses have reduced prices until the best orchestra seats can be had for 50 cents. Once a week special performances may be seen for as little as 15 cents.

When Chicago Was Young

his best friend, not mentioning Grant, but meaning him, it was understood. When he sat down there was a great demonstration, and Col. Robert G. Ingersoll all but danced a hornpipe in his excess of animal spirits.

Will says I am like all women—a poor loser, but I don't believe I deserve that, for I am beginning already to be reconciled to the choice of the convention. All I read about Garfield seems to be to his credit. They say he is one of the greatest students among our public men. His success, we are told, is due to his untiring industry and his high sense of duty. Without the advantage of wealth or the prestige of family connection, he has kept himself in congress for seventeen years by a popularity based on character. I think he will be liked by the plain people always, by reason of his having come up from among them. You know he drove a horse on the towpath of a canal as a boy.

I like, too, his having been a teacher in the little college at Hiram, O., and his having preached to his brethren of the Campbellite faith. Will, who has read many of his speeches in congress, says they show real thought and a good command of language. His being a graduate of Williams college is a guarantee of his cultivation.

Will has said every day during the convention that it reminds him in several particulars of the great convention of 1860 when Lincoln was nominated for the first time. Then, as now, the contest was fierce and full of feeling. Talking of that historic time last night, Will said: "Then, just as was the case this year, one man led the field so far as seemingly being assured of victory was concerned. There were those who were wrestling for his downfall. The struggle in the 1860 convention resulted in a concentration of the field upon an available man against the field. Seward's friends were as confident of success then as the friends of Grant have been this year. And after days of battle, Abraham Lincoln was given to the nation."

Sandy MacLeod asked some questions about the 1860 convention, which led Will to get out an old scrapbook and read what had been written in the heat of the conflict by reporters for the different papers. We found it very interesting, the young people not appreciating it all, perhaps, but absorbing something of the excitement of that time. Will and I remembered it all so well, and the newspaper accounts meant a great deal more to us, of course.

Will read a description of it from a Cincinnati paper, which we thought especially vivid. It was written by Murat Halstead, then a staff correspondent for the Cincinnati Commercial. He said: "The Tremont house is so crammed that it is with the utmost difficulty that people get from one room to another. The principal lions are Horace Greeley and Frank P. Blair. The way Horace Greeley is stared at as he moves about is itself a sight. Whenever he appears there is a crowd gaping at him, and if he stops to talk a minute with some one who wishes to consult the oracle a crowd gathers to hear his words of wisdom."

Later he wrote: "The New York Republicans who had come out to boom Seward had set up their headquarters at the Richmond house and were riotously spilling champagne and singing excessively wordy songs in the perfect assurance of success, whereby the puritanic old Abolitionists, conservatives of the party who had given it being through heavy travail, were scandalized. The Seward men wore silk badges and paraded the streets headed by a brilliantly uniformed band."

Then Will went on to tell his own memories of the nomination of Lincoln in the Wigwam. "How well I remember," he said, "that a man who had got on the roof and had been communicating the results to the crowd on the street heard the yells that followed Lincoln's nomination and demanded, by gestures at the skylight above the stage, to know what had happened.

"One of the secretaries, with a tally sheet in his hand, shouted: 'Fire the salute! Abe Lincoln is nominated!' And then, as the cheering inside the Wigwam subsided for a moment, we could hear outside, where the news of the nomination had just been announced, a roar like the breaking up of the fountains of the deep. That gave a new impulse to the enthusiasm inside, and what a noise began again!

"You heard THIS crowd yell, after Garfield was nominated," said Will, turning to Sandy, "but it was nothing at all compared to the Lincoln convention."

I wonder whether that Wigwam convention was really more exciting, or whether we fancy it so, looking back on it from the vantage point of middle age.

I have been down to C. P. Kimball's this week, looking at a new carriage. Will has just received quite a nice fee for some legal work and says I may have a new brougham or a Victoria, whichever I want most. Kimball is having a special exhibition this week and we saw some beauties. William T. Baker's new demi-landaulette, an exquisite thing, was there. E. G. Asay's Parisian style Victoria stood beside it, while two elegantly finished T-carts, for C. M. Henderson and John J. Glessner, were also on exhibition. Wilbur F. Storey, owner of the Times, who has such a great collection of vehicles that I don't see how he can get another in his stable, had just bought a new style boulevard wagon.

Charlie Schwartz was there, ordering a handsome park wagon, and we saw some fashionable top bar wagons just built for Fred Eames, Fred Keep, and H. M. Dupee. I didn't decide on my carriage, but shall wait for a new style tête-à-tête which Mr. Kimball thought I'd like. It is made after a model used by the Vanderbilts of New York, and has a sort of basket-work design on the sides. Don't you think that trim is distinctive?

I must close, as we have a little farther to go to church than usual this morning. We are to attend the Second Presbyterian, mother's church, with her. We have joined the Fourth church, as we are so much nearer that, but we often go to the Second, to which we are much attached.

With love, Your old friend,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Foot Notes.

Has any reader a memory of attending the Republican convention, recorded by "Martha," when Garfield was nominated?

William T. Baker, whose new "demi-landaulette" had just been built by Kimball in 1880, was father of Mrs. Van Wagenen Alling of Lake Forest. John J. Glessner, owner of a T-cart, described in the foregoing letter, lives at 18th street and Prairie avenue. Fred Keep was an uncle of Wolcott Blair. This period, "The Elegant Eighties," was distinguished by handsome turn-outs, and each new carriage was scanned as carefully as is the modern automobile bought by a neighbor.

V. McG., Michigan, writes: "In the early eighties, Longfellow's poems, set to music, were popular. My sister and I sang 'The Bridge,' 'The Day Is Done,' and 'The Arrow and the Song,' and thought them lovely. I wonder if any of your readers can tell me who wrote the words and music of "'Gently, gently sighs the breeze,

Like a whisper through the trees.'

"We used to sing it as a duet when we went serenading."

Edmund S. Cummings, Chicago, sends two epitaphs, well known and famous because of the famous men above whose dust they were placed. The first is on Shakespeare's tomb:

"Good friend, for Jesus' sake forbeare
To dig the dust enclosed heare;
Bleste be the man that spares these stones
And curst be he that moves my bones."

The second epitaph sent by Mr. Cummings is Franklin's, written by himself:

"B. FRANKLIN PRINTER
[like the cover of an old book its contents worn out and stript of its lettering and gold] lies here food for worms.
But the work shall not be lost
For it will [as he believes] appear once more
In a new and more elegant edition
Revised and corrected by the author."

Send Beloved Little Home Town offerings, Jumble Jar contributions, epitaphs (remembering that we are using epitaphs on the tombs of famous persons), and stories of farm life to Herma Clark, care of THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

THE MODERN SAFE WAY TO LOSE FAT

Miss Merle Stahl of Chicago writes: "Have been using Kruschen Salts and found it just the thing for reducing. I lost 13 lbs. in 3 weeks and feel 100% better in every way. It has given me plenty of 'pep.'"

* * *

Mrs. M. O. Rice of Chicago writes: "I have been taking Kruschen Salts and have lost 45 pounds in a short time—it is wonderful. My friends tell me I look better. And I feel better and have more energy."

* * *

Mrs. Paul Wallace of Chicago sent the following: "I am overweight and am now taking Kruschen to get rid of that surplus fat. I've taken your salts for 3 weeks and lost 12½ lbs. Also, not bothered with gall stones; it sure did help me for I've been bothered for years and this is the first time I found anything to help me. Kruschen has done me the world of good."

* * *

"I've used 3 bottles of Kruschen Salts and have gone down from 191 to 162 lbs. I feel wonderful and my husband is delighted—the only fault finding is he has to purchase a whole new spring outfit for me, but he says it's worth it." Mrs. Vera Hill, Chicago.

WOMEN! INCREASE PHYSICAL ATTRACTIVENESS ALL WHILE FAT VANISHES

The Safe Way to Reduce

Start today—get rid of ugly fat which places such a dangerous strain on your vital organs and makes you feel old because it slows down all body processes.

Gain a life of longer years—every day physically fit—built up energy and strength INSIDE and OUT all while you're obtaining a stylish, slender figure. Simply take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast.

Kruschen is different than other reducers—it's a blend of 6 SEPARATE minerals which reduce fat by helping every gland and body organ to function properly—it clears out poisons and wastes—then these corrective minerals are carried by the blood bringing re-enforcements of new activity and health to all parts of the body—skin becomes clear and smooth. Many people hasten results by cutting down on pastries, potatoes and fatty meats.

A jar that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle at any drug store. Don't accept an imitation—for your health's sake—demand and get Kruschen.

Mrs. Carl Wilson of Manton, Mich., writes: "For 3 months I've been using Kruschen and have lost 45 lbs. I've taken 6 inches off hips and 6 inches off bust. 3 bottles have given me splendid results."

Mrs. O. J. Kohrman, Mariner's Harbor, S. I., N. Y., writes: "I've been taking Kruschen Salts for reducing and have lost 72 pounds in less than one year and never felt better than I do now. I weighed 234—now I weigh 162."

* * *

Mrs. C. H. Culver of Middletown, Conn., writes: "I weighed 225 lbs. and felt miserable. I began taking Kruschen Salts—am now on my 6th bottle and weigh 155. My skin is fairer and am more active than I've felt in years. My goal is 130 pounds and I know I can make it."

* * *

Mrs. Florence Loftus of Boston writes: "Have been taking Kruschen for 4 months—they are wonderful. I weighed 165, now I weigh 127 and feel fine."

Still More Letters From Happy Folks

Mrs. Edith Speers of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I am taking my 3rd bottle of Kruschen Salts. My weight was 256—now I am down to 185. I eat anything I want from fat meat to candy. I feel fine and sleep good. Kruschen is the only thing that ever did me any good."

* * *

Mrs. Thomas Burton of Brooklyn writes: "Have been taking Kruschen for one year and have lost 55 lbs. I weighed 185 when I first started to take Kruschen and now I weigh 130. I take one teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of warm water every morning. I eat everything, take no exercise. I'm 34 yrs. old."

* * *

Mrs. Helen Greene of Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "A physician advised my mother to take Kruschen Salts for overweight, so I immediately started taking it myself. I weighed 192 and after 3 bottles I now weigh 165 and never felt so well."

* * *

Mrs. Thomas Crouch of Gladwyne, Pa., writes: "I weighed 256, my bust was 52, waist 46, hips 54. Today I weigh 160, now bust is 38, waist 32 and hips 40—thanks to Kruschen Salts. I feel better and brighter, too."

* * *

Mrs. Bertha Chapin of St. Paul, Minn., writes: "I weighed 185, now since taking 3 bottles of Kruschen I weigh 163. I feel better than I have in years and my friends say I look ten years younger."

* * *

Mrs. E. Freeman Law of Martinsburg, W. Va., writes: "Exactly 37 days ago I weighed 242 lbs. After my first bottle of Kruschen I weighed 227—I feel better than I've ever felt in my life—I just had to write and tell you how much I appreciate the benefits I received."

* * *

Miss Augusta Bates of Beech, Iowa, writes: "I lost exactly 65 pounds in 5 months by taking Kruschen. I look years younger than I did when I was larger."

FOR your health's sake demand and get Kruschen Salts

Here's Real Help for FAT MEN

There's a new and easy way to gain in energy, vigor, ambition and health.

And at the same time a safe, swift way to lose the fat you don't need and don't want.

Take a generous half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts every morning in a glass of hot water—don't miss a morning.

And bear this in mind—when you take your little daily dose of Kruschen—

The urge for activity will fill your entire being—you'll not be content to sit in the old arm chair after your day's work is done.

You'll feel the spirit of youth within you—what a joyous feeling—you'll want to take long walks, play games and your work will cease to be a hardship—it will become a pleasure.

Your old time ambition will return—you'll arise early filled with the joy of living—no grumbling at the breakfast table.

For Kruschen Salts—not one salt, mind you—but the six salts that your body ought to have if your life is to be a happy, healthy one—will help you to lose fat—it helps to keep your kidneys, liver and stomach in such good shape that they perform their functions properly, keeping the system free from acids and poisonous waste. Its tonic influence reaches every organ, gland and fibre in the body, bringing good health to all who put their faith in it.

Mr. F. J. Fritz of Cincinnati, Ohio, writes: "I've tried extreme dieting, setting up exercises with little results—but the results from Kruschen are almost incredible. In 3 months I reduced from 205 to 179 pounds and feel stronger than ever—no more wheezing or gasping for breath—friends say I look 100% better."

Achieve Stylish Slenderness As Well as Glorious Health

Many women hitherto have hesitated to take anything internal to reduce and they had a perfect right, because so many folks injured their health by taking internal products of an unsafe nature.

For this reason the manufacturers of Kruschen Salts want you to thoroughly understand that Kruschen is DIFFERENT—that it's not only a SAFE and RELIABLE way to banish fat but a remarkable health drink which tones up your entire system.

Accept Nothing But Kruschen

There is no substitute for Kruschen Salts—it's the only product of its kind. It gives REAL results without injuring health—so if you want to reduce SAFELY—demand and get Kruschen—for your health's sake accept nothing else!

Mrs. Hazel Peel of Akron, Ohio, writes: "I was 52 inches around my hips. Have been taking Kruschen Salts for 3 weeks. I am now 44 inches, so you can see they are helping me."
